City's New Slogan: 'Birthplace Of The American Dream'

Plymouth has "History is just the beginning." Salem is "The Bewitching Seaport." And now, after long and hard consideration, Historic Quincy is "Birthplace of the American Dream."

The new slogan is the result of a contest sponsored by the Quincy Tourism Advisory Council that asked residents to submit a slogan of five words or less that would help describe and define the city to tourists.

More than 260 entries were received at City Hall, coming in by e-mail, mail and by phone. Kristin Priscella, assistant to Mayor William Phelan, said the entries ranged from the historical to the comical.

"Each entry was catalogued and assigned a number so that the author remained anonymous to the members of the Tourism Council," Priscella said. "After several long meetings where the council pondered what makes a good slogan, the list of 263 entries was narrowed down to the top five."

From there, the Tourism Council voted on the winner by secret ballot. The winner: Historic Quincy: "Birthplace of the American Dream."

"The Tourism Council felt that the slogan not only recognized Quincy's historic status as the birthplace of John Adams and his son John Quincy Adams, but also captured our claim to fame as the birthplace of both Howard Johnson's and Dunkin' Donuts, which epitomize the pursuit of the American Dream," Priscella said.

"The Council plans to feature this slogan in advertising and promotional materials as the city moves forward with its plan to make tourism a key factor in the city's economic development plans."

The winning slogan was submitted by Quincy resident Jennifer Logue, who happens to be a member of the Tourism Advisory Council. Because of her role on the council, however, Logue suggested that the contest's top prize — a $100 savings bond from South Coastal Savings Bank — be offered in a random drawing open to everyone who submitted an entry. Phelan selected the two winners at a drawing scheduled for Tuesday, with a gift basket from Abigail's Crossing as an additional prize.

Honorable mention goes to four runner-up entries: "Quincy: Explore! Experience! Enjoy!" submitted by Barbra Vail of Doble Street.

"Quincy: Still Making History" by Laurie Allen, executive secretary to Mayor Phelan and former Squantum resident.

"Quincy: Where America's Past Meets Its Future" by Enrico Cosica of Harrington Avenue.

"Quincy: Gateway to America's History" by Kathy Kane of Norton Road.

"Thanks to all those who took the time to submit a slogan," Phelan said. "It's clear from the entries submitted that Quincy residents are rightly proud of our city and its place in history."

MWRA Shipyard Land Sale Recommendations Due Dec. 3

The Fore River Redevelopment Committee will meet Tuesday, Dec. 3, at 8:30 a.m. in the Second Floor Conference Room at City Hall to review proposals for the sale of 13 acres of MWRA-owned land in the Fore River Shipyard.

"I expect the Authority will have the financial bids submitted and reviewed and we will have information on the financial standing of the proposers," said Committee Chairman Daniel Raymond. "Then we can make our recommendation."

The Committee, which was established by the City Council in cooperation with the towns of Braintree and Weymouth, listened to five proposals for about two and a half hours last week and Raymond said the Committee was satisfied with all of them.

Those presenting proposals at the meeting included:

- Jay Cashman, Inc., a construction firm that wants to move its headquarters from South Boston to Quincy and focus on its marine engineering division.

- Blufin Robotics and Shawmut Crane & Rigging, which teamed up on plans to develop unmanned submarines and store and repair excavating equipment.

- Boston Redevelopment Group and Building 19, which joined forces to develop that portion of the Yard for office, retail and storage space and relocate a Hingham discount store.

- Acorn Management, a development and management company that would develop a marine facility, including a floating hotel of up to 500 rooms.

- Eastern Salt Company, which proposed a portion of the site for storage of road salt during the winter months.

Northern Materials, a heavy construction company that had expressed interest in the property, failed to attend last week's meeting.

"We are looking forward to completing our work in December," said Raymond. "First we have to know how much they are willing to pay for the site, how many jobs they'll create, how much they will invest and what will be the effect on the community."

The MWRA property is distinct from the 130 acres owned by the U.S. Maritime Administration, which is scheduled to be auctioned off to the highest qualified bidder Jan. 16.

Delahunt: Would John Adams Wage War Against Iraq?

Congressman William Delahunt, who is no hawk when it comes to the possibility of a "go-it-alone" war with Iraq, has called on the words of John Adams to support his stand.

"I do not know what Adams would have said about the warlike sentiments that are emanating from Washington today," he told a three-day symposium sponsored by the Adams National Historical Park.

"He was certainly no pacifist but it was he who uttered these words which have echoed through posterity: 'Great is the guilt of an unnecessary war.'"

"Our leaders would do well to contemplate those words, and to cultivate those rare qualities of mind and spirit that we celebrate today."

Delahunt, who voted against giving the President make war with Iraq without the approval of the United Nations, reflected on the relevance of Adams' legacy to the current debate on war.

"As I listen to the debates in Congress and ponder the choices I must make," he said, "I sometimes ask myself how John Adams might have responded to the challenges we face today."

"I wonder what he would

opportunity to put his idea of an impartial jury in the Constitution of Massachusetts, 'the first to enshrine the concept of a coequal and independent judiciary.'"

"On matters of war and peace, John Adams was equally true to his convictions," said Delahunt. "In 1799, he sacrificed his hopes of reelection by refusing to wage what would have been a highly popular but disastrous war with Napoleon. 'By winning the peace, he freed America of its 'entangling alliances' with France, and made it possible for the nation to chart an independent course.'"

"He wrote to a friend, 'I desire no other inscription over my gravestone than 'Here lies John Adams, who took upon himself the responsibility of peace with France in 1800.'"

Delahunt also briefed the symposium on progress of plans for an Adams memorial in Washington under legislation he co-authored with Senator Edward Kennedy.

The tribute was enacted into law by Congress this year and the two legislators recently introduced a follow-up measure to authorize siting the memorial in priority areas of the city.

say about war with Iraq. Nuclear brinkmanship in North Korea. Detentions without trial. Let alone the condition of our schools and the state of our politics.

"We cannot know precisely how John Adams would have responded to the specific circumstances we face. But we do know that this was a man with a love of peace and a deep passion for justice. Who was willing to place his life at risk and his career in jeopardy rather than betray his ideals."

Delahunt noted that Adams once stepped forward to take on the unpopular cause of defending the British soldiers who fired on the crowd in the Boston Massacre and won his case.

Adams also accepted the Farmers' Market Wants To Stay In Quincy Center

Friends and customers of the Quincy Farmers' Market just don't want to leave downtown Quincy.

"We held our end-of-the-season meeting at City Hall," said Anneli Johnson. "but they decided they didn't want to leave Quincy Center because of the parking."

Johnson said she plans to meet with the traffic engineer and Public Works Commissioner Jay Fink to see if another area of Quincy Center might be available that meets the customers' need.

The Farmers' Market currently is held through October in the John Hancock Parking area but is being forced to move by development.

Correction On Firefighters' Promotion

Because of a typographical error, a sentence in a story in the Oct. 31 issue of The Quincy Sun regarding nine Quincy firefighters being promoted was incorrect.

The sentence should have stated: Lt. Paul Griffith, hired in July, 1987, and promoted to lieutenant in July, 1995.

Griffith was promoted to fire captain Monday, Oct. 28. The Sun regrets the error.

For Longtime Service To Seniors And Community

John Noonan Honored As JWV 'Citizen Of The Year'

John D. Noonan was honored Sunday as the Quincy Jewish War Veterans "Citizen of the Year" for his long-time dedicated service to senior citizens and the community.

Noonan, chairman of the Quincy Council on Aging for the past 20 years, received the 52nd annual award at a breakfast at Beth Israel Synagogue in Quincy Point.

Attending were city and state officials — including three mayors — Mayor William Phelan and former Mayors Frank McCauley and James Sheets — present and former colleagues, past recipients of the award and members of the Noonan family.

"John is really Quincy at its best," Phelan said. "The people of Quincy are its greatest asset. John Noonan exemplifies all that is good about this city of ours."

He cited Noonan's commitment to the city and the senior population, adding: "You make a huge difference in so many lives from the older to the youngest citizens."

City Council President Daniel Raymond praised Noonan as "an outstanding leader and tireless worker on behalf of our seniors."

"You are one of the city's most respected citizens and you have greatly improved the quality of life for those in their autumn years."

Senator Michael Morrissey said Noonan "really cares about and delivers a strong message of things that are important for the Quincy community but particularly the seniors he had worked so hard with."

Rep. Steve Tobin said Noonan has helped legislators "by bridging the gap of the generations."

"He wants us to know the issues and be able for us to translate it into legislation whether it be about senior housing or education."

Thomas Clasby, executive director of the Department of Elder Affairs, recounted some of the high points in Noonan's career since his service in the U.S. Army Air Corps in World War II and his graduation from Boston University.

He was elected commander of Houghs Neck American Legion Post 380 and more recently has been a member of the Morrisette Legion Post.

He has been a reporter for several newspapers, including The Quincy Sun and The Hingham Journal, and a professor of journalism at Mt. Ida College.

He was a health educator and writer for the Massachusetts Department of Public Health and director of government affairs for the Massachusetts Medical Society for more than 20 years.

He has been a consultant to the Elder Health Division of the Massachusetts Department of Health and a member of the South Shore Coalition of Elderly Workers.

Noonan was the recipient of the 1997 Citizen of the Year Award from South Shore Elder Services for outstanding services to the South Shore communities.

He was grand marshal of the Quincy Christmas Parade in 2000.

He was appointed to the Quincy Council on Aging by Mayor Walter Hannon in 1972 and has served as chairman for 20 years.

"It is this commitment and genuine love for our city that has made John such an extraordinary public servant," said Clasby.

He said that a note he received recently from Noonan "says a lot about him and his character."

"Whatever I may have accomplished is due largely to friends like you . . . and the entire staff at the Council on Aging. I am honored and grateful but very humble for any honors that I have received."

Irving Isaacson, past commander and program chairman for the Jewish War Veterans, noted that the Citizen of the Year theme is "People Helping People," and that Noonan "has been doing it for years and years."

David Noonan, speaking for the family, said: "We had a wonderful childhood, full of optimism, comfort and honesty, thanks to my father.

"Thank you for honoring my father and making this such a special day for all of us."

Members of the family also attending were Noonan's wife, Arline, a daughter, Barbara Yost of Langhorne, Pa., two grandchildren, Mark and Kristin Noonan, and his sister, Sister Paschala Noonan, a Dominican nun.

Henry Bradley thanked Noonan for the help he has given him as the city's director of Veterans Services.

Noonan took the opportunity to praise various past and present colleagues in the media and community organizations.

He thanked the Jewish War Veterans for honoring him as their Citizen of the Year and for an honor six months earlier.

"A tree was planted in Israel bearing my name at the request of Jewish War Veterans Post 193. For that I am very grateful for only God can make a tree."

Commendations were presented to Noonan by Phelan, Raymond, Morrissey, Tobin and David Rafferty, representing Dist. Atty. William Keating.

Retired Fire Chief Tom Gorman Honored

A QFD HELMET with the dates 1963-2002 inscribed denoting his service in the Fire Department was presented to retired Chief Thomas Gorman, Jr., by his son, Thomas Gorman III employed with the Quincy Housing Authority. At the left is son George Gorman, a member of the Braintree Fire Department.

MAYOR WILLIAM PHELAN said when he first took office, Tom Gorman "made quite an impression on me." When Gorman retired at the mandatory age 65 as fire chief, Phelan unretired him by appointing him director of Emergency Management which does not come under mandatory age requirements.

"I WAS PROUD to follow in my father's footsteps," retired Fire Chief Thomas Gorman, Jr. told the more than 250 attending the dinner. His father, Thomas Gorman, Sr. was fire chief before him, the only father-son fire chiefs in the city's history. And praising his family, he added: "When you have your family, you have everything."

FR. ROBERT CONOLE, Catholic chaplain of the Quincy Fire Department, delivered a Papal Blessing to the retired fire chief. (Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Noble)

A COMMEMORATIVE CLOTH print of the famed photo of the three New York City firefighters raising the American flag at the fallen World Trade Center after the Sept. 11, 2001 terrorist attack was presented to retired Chief Tom Gorman by state Sen. Michael Morrissey. A joint House and Senate resolution from the Quincy State House delegation -- Reps. Bruce Ayers, Ron Mariano and Steve Tobin and Sen. Morrissey -- was also presented.

LONG-TIME FRIEND John Gillis, former city clerk now a Norfolk County commissioner, presented a commemorative clock to retired chief Thomas Gorman, Jr. on behalf of present and former members of the City License Board on which Gorman served.

MEMBERS AND PAST members of the Quincy License Board where retired Fire Chief Thomas Gorman, Jr. served 14 years -- the last five as vice chairman -- were among those honoring him. From the left, Acting Fire Chief Paul O'Connell, Health Commissioner Andrew Scheele, board vice chairman; Acting Police Chief William Falco, Director Inspectional Services Walter White, retired Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue and retired Police Chief Francis Mullen.

Falco's First Priority: Reorganize Police Dept.

several situations that have arisen. He has been extremely effective in preparing and adhering to a budget during difficult financial times."

Phelan said the choice among Falco, Crowley and McNeil was difficult since Quincy is lucky "to have the talent in the police department that we have that made that choice so difficult."

"Chief Falco is intelligent, resourceful and worked his way up through the ranks. He has been tough under fire and is respected by his fellow officers," he said.

"Capt. Crowley, a dedicated police officer, has served this city with distinction. We are extremely happy and grateful that he has graciously accepted my decision like a true police officer and stated his intention to work with the chief.

"We have the ingredients necessary to make this police department second to none in the state of Massachusetts."

Chief Falco, who is originally from Quincy Point, was appointed to the Quincy Police Department on Dec. 6, 1971. He received an associate's degree from Quincy Junior College and bachelor's and master's in public management from Boston State while on the force.

He was appointed sergeant in the Patrol Division in 1985, Night Patrol lieutenant in 1991 and served in Communications & Records, as director of Planning & Research and administrative assistant to the chief for Internal Affairs.

He served as president of the Superior Officers Union from 1987 to 1988 and from 1991 to 2000. He was promoted to captain in April, 2000, and remained in the chief's office as inspector of divisions and administrative assistant to the chief for Internal Affairs.

Quincy Puts Child Safety in Reverse

For years, Quincy families felt secure sending their kids to school because professional monitors ensured safety on the school bus.

Communities around the country are learning the hard way just how important monitors are to school bus safety.

Earlier this year, a 2nd grader in nearby Boston suffered internal bleeding and temporary blindness when a backpack, flung during a scuffle between two other students on the bus, hit him in the eye. Parents say this is not an isolated incident and are fighting for school bus monitors to protect their kids. In fact, they say that Boston School Department records show bus driver reports of:

- 3,240 fights between January and November 2001;
- 3,311 incidents of students hanging out of windows;
- 1,115 incidents of spitting; and
- 6,644 incidents of children refusing to obey drivers

In the past, Quincy has taken school bus safety seriously. But now, in a blow to child safety, Mayor Phelan and the school committee have taken monitors off our children's buses.

creans and Gold Star Mothers.

The World War II Committee includes Leonard Morris, John Donlon, Peter Giacica, Herb Skellett, Linda Montillio, Liz Fitzpatrick.

"We are grateful to all the veterans and their families for their sacrifices during the war," Phelan said. "This monument is a fitting tribute to their selfless contributions, without which, we would not have the freedom that we enjoy today.

"We are honored to have Mr. Bosworth as our keynote speaker. As a combat veteran, he fought for our country's freedom. His lifelong contributions to Quincy have helped shape our fine city into what it is today and it is fitting that he join us on this reverent occasion."

The 14-foot statue features members of the Army,

Navy, Marine Corps and a woman representing all of the women who served during World War II. The Air Force was part of the Army back then.

The statue will be temporarily located in front of new City Hall and will be moved later to its permanent location in Merrymount Park at Southern Artery and Hancock Street once the configuration of that intersection has been decided.

Quincy's Regional Economic Target Area Expanded

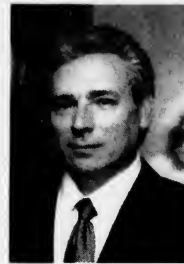

Quincy's Regional Economic Target Area has been expanded to include the towns of Braintree, Dedham and Stoughton.

Quincy 2000 Executive Director Joseph Mannarino announced the applications by the three towns have been approved by the Massachusetts Economic Assistance Coordinating Council. For inclusion in Quincy's target area of the Massachusetts Economic Development Incentive Program (EDIP).

The EDIP is an economic development program created in 1994 for cities and towns by the Commonwealth. Quincy 2000 worked with Weymouth, Hingham, Hull and Braintree in a regional application, which the state approved. The Region was expanded in 1997 to include Randolph and Canton.

The inclusion of the towns of Stoughton, Dedham and the entire area of Braintree, signifies an cooperation among neighboring communities during these challenging economic times, Mannarino said.

Mayor William Phelan of Quincy, the lead community in the consortium of regional communities, said he is "pleased to include the communities of Stoughton, Dedham and the remainder of Braintree to the Quincy Target area which will strengthen the regional economy by encouraging investment and will create employment opportunities for Quincy residents. A strong regional economy improves the quality of life in our community as well."

Stoughton Town Manager Jeanne Fleming, Dedham Town Manager William Keegan and Braintree Executive Secretary Terri Ackerman thanked Phelan and the other communities in the Quincy ETA for approval of their applications.

They said their communities and the expanded region would benefit in economic matters by working together.

Richard Sweeny, Boston Regional Director of Mass Office of Business Development who has worked with Mannarino in facilitating the designation of the three additional communities to the Quincy ETA said "that a strong regional economy improves the quality of life in each of the individual communities."

"I am pleased that Quincy 2000 was able to facilitate the process which expanded our Economic Target Area as this will strengthen Quincy's economy and employment opportunities for Quincy residents," said Mannarino who is also chairman of the Quincy Regional ETA. "The region will now have greater resources for marketing our assets and a regional approach to economic development."

Quincy 2000 prepared the 1994 Economic Target Area plan and it is currently the administrator of the consortium of Quincy regional ETA communities. Quincy used one of the economic development initiatives in 1997 to attract Boston Scientific to the former Jordan Marsh warehouse at Marina Bay. The Tax Incremental Financing Plan agreed to by the city created approximately 450 good paying jobs and it increased the property taxes paid to the city.

Quincy, Weymouth Form Partnership to Save $$$ On Waste Collection

Mayor William Phelan and Weymouth Mayor David Madden Tuesday announced a cooperative partnering effort to save money in the area of solid waste collection.

Weymouth and Quincy are taking the new approach in an effort to control increasing solid waste expenses in their communities. The two mayors met to discuss the proposed effort and have directed their public works staff to provide a team approach to manage one of the major fiscal challenges that are faced by cities and towns throughout Massachusetts.

Over the past two years, communities whose solid waste/trash contracts expired have had to deal with 40 to 60 per cent increases for solid waste services, Phelan's office said. There have been dramatic changes in the solid waste industry recently both in the private sector, trash service providers, and public sector, such as new government mandates from the Federal Environmental Protection Agency.

Phelan and Madden have joined forces to develop a more targeted solid waste collection program in an effort to control costs and to maintain service levels. The Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection has provided $10,000 to develop this program and is working with Quincy and Weymouth to provide assistance and logistical support.

The partnering effort between Quincy and Weymouth has resulted in a Request for Expression of Interest (RFEI), which will be advertised this month. This process will allow Madden and Phelan to see how many vendors are capable of servicing the municipalities and at what cost. After reviewing the RFEI responses, the two communities will seek a Request for Proposals (RFP) from vendors interested in the combined solid waste collection in both communities.

Madden and Phelan will each have his own service contract and operation when the bidding process is over. While there are differences in the levels and methods of services provided by each community, the results of the RFEI will provide some options for adjustments for each community to consider prior to issuing an RFP.

Quincy generates approximately 46,000 tons and Weymouth approximately 28,000 tons of trash, recycling, yard waste and hazardous waste annually. On a cash basis, Weymouth's costs are projected to increase from $3,505,497 in FY 2002 to $4,816,881 in FY 2003. Quincy's costs are projected to increase from $4,800,000 in FY 2002 to $6,200,000 in FY 2003. Both Phelan and Madden are hopeful that a potential partnership could lead to savings and improved services for both communities.

The current rubbish collection contract for both communities expires in June, 2003.

Picking The Right Lock

If you're still relying on the same lock that was in place when you bought your home, you might want to consider an upgrade.

Millions of homes are broken into each year, so you may want to take security precautions to prevent becoming a victim.

Picking the right lockset for your door can be difficult, because there are many styles and levels of protection from which to choose. For exterior doors, the three most common types of locks are handle-sets, keyed-entry doorknobs and deadbolts.

Deadbolts provide the most antitheft protection. When shopping for a deadbolt, buy one that has hardened pins that cannot be sawed through. And, the best one will feature a heavy plate with screws that are at least three inches.

When buying handle-sets, look for a dead-locking latch bolt to prevent intruders from opening your door with a credit card. Additionally, a set that allows you to lock both the deadbolt and latch from inside in a single step will offer the most benefit in an emergency situation.

If you have different locks on all the doors in your home, consider universal keying. With this option, you can have one key made to fit all the locks in your home, even if you have installed locks from different manufacturers. (Courtesy Tom McFarland, Home Journal newsletter.)

Don't Fall Behind In Your House Cleaning

(NAPS) — We can always sense the beginning of fall — the sun sets a little earlier and the leaves start to change color. As days get shorter and life gets busier, many will fall behind on cleaning.

Arm & Hammer Baking Soda and New York Times best-selling author and cleaning expert, Queen of Clean

Linda Cobb, have joined together to share some useful tips on stress-free fall cleaning. From mud to mold, Baking Soda cleans and deodorizes it all and you probably already have it in your cabinet.

• Begin in the kitchen. Start by emptying out your refrigerator, by trashing leftovers from your end of the summer barbecue. Wipe down the shelves and walls with a solution of Baking Soda and water and rinse well. Don't forget to replace your spill-proof Frigidaire box of Baking Soda in the refrigerator to absorb and lock in tough odors, to keep food tasting like it should. Pour the old box down the sink drain followed by warm water. This will help to eliminate musty odors and keep your kitchen smelling fresh.

• Next you'll want to move to the bathroom. Has the summer's humidity left your shower curtain moldy? Don't go out and buy a new one for fall just yet, clean and deodorize your shower curtain by sprinkling Baking Soda directly on a damp sponge or brush. Scrub the shower curtain and rinse clean. Hang it up to dry.

• Better close down the pool and bring in your lawn furniture. Be sure they're clean before you do it. Using a Baking Soda solution of one-fourth cup Baking Soda in 1 quart of warm water to clean and deodorize patio and pool furniture. Simply wipe with the Baking Soda solution and rinse clean. For tougher stains, sprinkle Baking Soda directly on a damp sponge, scrub and rinse. You can also use Baking Soda to deodorize musty towels by adding one-half cup into the rinse cycle.

• While your kids may beg for a new fall wardrobe, you can make last year's clothes look like new. Baking Soda can be used as a liquid laundry detergent booster, as a chlorine bleach booster and a deodorizer. Just one-half cup added with your liquid laundry detergent can whiten your whites and leave everything clothesline fresh.

• So now that your home is fit for fall, sit down and relax. Arm & Hammer Baking Soda can help you do to that too. Soak your tired feet in a solution of 3 tablespoons of Baking Soda in a basin of warm water. Your feet will feel refreshed and you will feel relaxed too.

ON SECOND THOUGHTS

Purchasing a home presents buyers with perhaps the biggest financial and lifestyle decisions of their lives. There is little wonder, then, that some are confronted with second thoughts as they review their decisions with no small amount of anxiety. In fact, "buyer's remorse" is an emotional response that many, if not most, homebuyers suffer during a real estate transaction. For some homebuyers, these feelings are probably related to the uncertainty that results from relinquishing control. Others' feeling of uncertainty is coupled with the fear of making a long-term commitment. Whatever the reason, buyers should address any remorseful feelings they might have with their agents, who can set forth the good reasons they had for buying in the first place.

Purchasing a home is likely to be the most significant financial decision you can make. Although many people may experience "buyer's remorse," an experienced real estate agent can help keep you focused on the big picture. At CENTRAL REAL ESTATE, we work in your best interest to make sure your move goes as smoothly as possible. We can help you locate the home of your dreams and advise you on mortgage lenders, home inspectors, and movers. Call us at (617) 328-1312 to arrange a consultation. Visit us at 128 Mayor McGrath Highway.

HINT: While the home buying process can be inherently stressful, the permanent rewards far outweigh transient concerns.

Electrical — Live Wire Fire Risks

(NAPS) — By understanding and respecting the power of electricity, and the role it can play in home fires, you can reduce fire risk. Electrical fires cause millions of dollars in property damage per year. The chief fire culprits are:

- Incorrectly installed wiring.
- Overloaded circuits and extension cords.
- Improper plugs, switches and outlets.
- Misuse and poor maintenance of lighting.

Safety experts at The Hartford Financial Services Group, Inc. point to the following warning signs that may indicate electrical problems that could cause a fire. If you experience any of these warnings in your home, contact a licensed electrician to repair the problem:

- Flickering or dimming lights.
- Switches or outlets that are hot to the touch or emit an acid odor.
- Discolored cords, outlets and switchplates.
- Repeated blown fuses or tripped circuit breakers.
- Cords, Outlets And Plugs

The Hartford safety experts also remind homeowners not to run cords under carpeting or other combustible materials or across doorways or frequently traveled areas. Discard frayed or broken cords and never splice two cords together. And, be sure plugs fit snugly in outlets to prevent shock and excess heat.

East Coast Petroleum In Citizens Energy Oil Program

Loretta DeGrazia of East Coast Petroleum Corp., announces the participation of that company in the Citizens Energy Oil Heat Program to be launched in December.

Citizens Energy works with a statewide network of local oil heat dealers to distribute the low-cost oil to households in need. The Oil Heat Program is available to households that are experiencing a financial hardship and would have to go without other necessities in order to pay for their heat. East Coast Petroleum Corp. will make one-time deliveries of up to 175 gallons of home heat oil to households.

"East Coast Petroleum Corp. helps us reach so many people in need," said Joseph P. Kennedy II, Chairman of Citizens Energy. "Their participation makes a big difference in the lives of families struggling to make ends meet."

"With our help, Citizens Energy is making strides to help those who need it the most - our senior citizens and working families," said DeGrazia, president of ECP.

This oil heat initiative aims to distribute heating oil to thousands of Massachusetts families in need this winter. Households interested in purchasing fuel through the Oil Heat Program should call 1-877-JOE-4-OIL (1-877-563-4645) or their local fuel assistance office.

Dr. James Evans Named Medical Director Of Psychiatry At Quincy Medical Center

Quincy Medical Center has appointed James Evans, M.D., as medical director of psychiatry.

Evans will oversee the Quincy Heights Geriatric Psychiatry Inpatient Unit, as well as the medical center's outpatient psychiatry programs, which include the Geriatric Assessment Service, Partial Hospitalization Program and Clinic for Cognitive Disorders.

More than 54 million Americans have a mental disorder, according to the National Mental Health Association. Late-life depression affects six million adults, with older Americans more likely to commit suicide than any other age group.

"Given the incidence of mental disorders in people over age 65, QMC must do everything it can to provide appropriate psychiatry services to the geriatric population," said Christine Schuster, RN, MBA, president and CEO of Quincy Medical Center. "Jim's experience in community-based psychiatry, along with his special interest in geriatric and addiction psychiatry, will benefit patients and their families."

Previously, Evans was medical director of mental health at the South Boston Community Health Center. He also has served as medical director of the North Charles Institute for the Addictions in Cambridge.

Additionally, Evans has experience in community-based education. During his tenure at the South Boston Community Health Center, the facility became a center for the medical training of residents and fellows, forming an academic affiliation with Boston Medical Center.

He is an assistant professor of psychiatry at Boston University School of Medicine (BUSM) as well as a lecturer in psychiatry at Harvard Medical School.

Evans received his medical degree from the University of Vermont College of Medicine and performed a residency in psychiatry with the Harvard Longwood Psychiatry Residency Training Program. He also completed a fellowship in addiction psychiatry with BUSM. Evans is board-certified in psychiatry by the American Board of Psychiatry and Neurology.

Before studying psychiatry, Evans was a professional classical singer. He studied vocal performance at Boston University and in Rome, and toured Europe as a tenor and a baritone vocalist.

Quincy Medical Center is a 282-bed acute care community-teaching hospital providing South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services. The medical center's Alliance for Quality with Boston Medical Center, formed in 1999, brings academic medicine to the community. At QMC, physicians from Boston Medical Center direct the departments of medicine, surgery, anesthesia, emergency medicine, and psychiatry. Additionally, physicians from BMC, who are board-certified in a range of medical and surgical specialties, work side-by-side community physicians to ensure the continuity of patient care.

New Focus On Smoke-Free Colleges American Cancer Society Celebrates Great American Smokeout Nov. 21

On Thursday, Nov. 21, millions of people will quit smoking cigarettes for one day as part of the American Cancer Society's 26th annual Great American Smokeout® celebration.

For many, this will be an important first step towards recovery from tobacco use — a dangerous addiction that kills more than 400,000 Americans each year and accounts for more than $75 billion in annual health care costs. In Massachusetts, tobacco kills 28 people every day; 61 in New England. Since its inception, the Great American Smokeout has had one main goal: to give smokers the help they need to quit smoking for good.

Statistics show cigarette smoking among college-age people (ages 18-24) has increased 28 percent during the last decade. It is estimated that one in 10 college students in America will die prematurely from tobacco use. To help reduce the college smoking rate, the American Cancer Society's New England Division has launched a "Smoke-Free New England College Initiative" designed to save lives and promote wellness on campus.

One reason smoking is more prevalent on campus is because more middle school and high school students smoked in the 1990s, and these students are now in college. But tobacco companies also target college students by sponsoring bar nights, band concerts and two-for-one cigarette discounts.

"Smoke-free dorms may help incoming college students who have not yet taken up smoking avoid tobacco addiction during college," said Henry Wechsler, director of college alcohol studies

Tips To Help You Quit Smoking

You can do it — Strategies to help you get ready and be successful in your quit attempt.

- Consider using medication to help you quit. There are prescription and over-the-counter medications that can help you deal with withdrawal symptoms or even help to reduce the urge to smoke.

- Enlist support. Many states, communities, and health care organizations have free or low-cost counseling available to help you quit. Call your American Cancer Society to find out what is available in your area.

- Get help or ask for help from your health care provider.
- Don't keep your intention to quit a secret. Include your friends and family in your quitting process; they can offer much needed support.

- Clear the places where you usually smoke of anything that reminds you of cigarettes — like lighters, ashtrays, or matches. Also ask other smokers not to smoke around you, and clean your house and car thoroughly to remove the smell of cigarettes.

- Avoid places where smokers gather. Go to the movies, museums, or other places where smoking is not allowed.

- Calm the nervous energy you may feel with physical and mental activities. Take long strolls and deep breaths of fresh air, and find things to keep your hands busy, like crossword puzzles or gardening.

- When the urge to smoke strikes, do something else. Call a supportive friend. Do brief exercises such as pushups, walking up a flight of stairs, or touching your toes. Keep oral substitutes like carrots, apples, raisins, or gum handy. And never allow yourself to think that "one won't hurt," because it will.

For more information, call the American Cancer Society at 1-800-ACS-2345.

at the Harvard School of Public Health. Wechsler authored a study that found non-smokers who live in smoke-free dorms are 40 percent less likely to take up cigarettes.

Among the seven Smoke-Free New England guidelines suggested for colleges are creating smoke-free dorms and buildings, banning the sale of tobacco on campus and providing on-campus tobacco addiction treatment.

"Some New England colleges and universities already have some smoke-free campuses, including Harvard University, Cape Cod Community College and the University of Rhode Island. Other schools need help and guidance as they educate students, faculty and employees and set smoke-free policies," said Bronya Demele, American Cancer Society regional vice president for southeast Massachusetts. "That's what we're here for."

For tips on quitting and information about services in the local area, smokers can call the American Cancer Society 24-hour Quitline at 1-800-ACS-2345. For more help in quitting, visit www.cancer.org.

DENTISTRY
for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

PREGNANT WITH POSSIBILITIES

Pregnant women are urged to schedule regular dental visits and periodic professional cleanings owing to the fact that gum disease may worsen during pregnancy. Changes in estrogen and progesterone levels associated with pregnancy affect the nature of the body's response to the bacteria responsible for causing periodontal (gum) infections. These infections may pose a threat to the placenta and fetus, increasing the likelihood of pre-term delivery, according to new research. With this in mind, pregnant women should view dental and periodontal evaluations as normal parts of prenatal care. Beyond that, pregnant women are encouraged to brush twice daily and floss at least once a day. Pregnancy is no time to neglect the health of your teeth and gums.

Eat healthy foods, drink plenty of water, and limit sweets. We would like to increase dental awareness and stress the importance of regular dental care. We stress preventive dentistry for the whole family. It's never too late to start good dental hygiene, whether you are pregnant or not. Remember that nothing is more economical than regular dental checkups. Most insurance companies allow two cleanings per year. Have you had both of yours? For gentle compassionate dental care, call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com. P.S. With most periodontal problems, a good thorough cleaning can make a major positive impact.

Late-Score Dims Quincy's Chances For League Title

By CHRIS POISSON

Last Friday night's 35-31 loss to Sandwich at home proved to be a double whammy for the Quincy High School football team.

Not only was it another painful loss late a game, but it also all but knocked the Presidents out of the Atlantic Coast League race.

"This puts a serious dent in our league title aspirations," said head coach Bob Noble. "But the kids will bounce back. They always do."

Quincy (4-3 overall, 2-2 ACL), which is now two games behind Plymouth North and a Whitman-Hanson, will host Dennis-Yarmouth tomorrow (Friday) night at 7 and the following week it travels to Plymouth North.

On the drive, O'Connell completed 4-of-6 passes for 54 yards, including a 21-yard pass to senior tight end J.D. Hyacinthe on fourth-and-11 to place Quincy at the Sandwich 37. O'Connell turned in his best game of the year, finishing 13 for 19 for 209 yards, two touchdowns and no interceptions.

Obviously, offense was not a problem in this game as the Presidents racked up 390 total yards (181 rushing). The culprit was the usually reliable defense, which yielded over 400 total yards. And in an offensive slugfest, the game came down to which team had the ball last.

Sandwich got the ball back at its 46 with 1:07 left to play and continued to go with what worked all game — the option offense and senior Brian Judge. The punishing tailback carried five times for 35 yards, including a 1-yard plunge for the game-winner with less than 20 seconds on the clock.

"How many times can you

SENIOR DEFENSIVE BACKS Shawn Munchbach (17) and Bob Ritchie (36) bring down tailback Brian Judge (35) after a 30-yard run in the second quarter. Judge rushed for 228 yards and three touchdowns.

score late in the game and then still end up losing," said Noble, whose team's previous two losses were in overtime to Hanover and Whitman-Hanson. "It's discouraging to say the least."

Judge finished with 228 yards and three touchdowns on 29 carries with junior quarterback Chris Byron, his option partner, rushing for 60 yards on eight carries.

"We couldn't stop the option," Noble said. "They did a good job of putting our perimeter guys on the ground. Judge had a tremendous night. Defensively, we didn't do the job for the first time all year."

The Blue Knights struck first on Byron's 25-yard TD pass to junior Joey Bulmer with 7:07 left in the first quarter. Quincy answered quickly on its next series with junior tailback J.J. Niamkey scoring from 30 yards out to tie the game at 7.

Sandwich fumbled on the ensuing possession and Quincy cashed in with another 30-yard TD run by Niamkey, who rushed for 171 yards on 21 carries. He now has 928 yards rushing this season with nine touchdowns (7 rushing).

After the defense forced Sandwich to go three-and-out, Quincy marched down field but it stalled at the Sandwich 6 and settled for a 23-yard field goal by Goes for a 17-7 lead with 7:56 left in the second quarter.

Sandwich followed with a 10-play, 71-yard drive that ended with Judge's 2-yard TD run to make it 17-14 with 2:45 left in the half. Quincy was called for pass interference on fourth-and-11 that set up the score.

In the second half, Judge scored on a 10-yard TD run on the opening series as the Blue Knights needed only 2:30 to move 65 yards. Quincy countered with a efficient drive of its own, converting on third down twice before senior wing back Matt Ramponi hauled in a sensational 18-yard TD pass from O'Connell.

Continuing to exchange punch for punch, Sandwich regained the lead on its next possession. Bulmer ran an option to the left and appeared to be heading out of bounds, but cut back to his right and ran all the way across the field for a long, 10-yard TD jump for a 28-24 lead.

North Quincy Bows In Double OT To Sandwich

By CHRIS POISSON

For the second straight season, the North Quincy High School girls' soccer team outplayed its opponent but once again could not make it out of the first round of the tournament.

The 18th-seeded Red Raiders (10-8-3) traveled to No. 15 seed Sandwich last Friday night and dropped a 1-0 decision in double overtime.

"We dominated the game, about 65 percent of the play in terms of possession and controlling the ball," said head coach Paul Bregoli. "We didn't have a lot of scoring opportunities."

And when the Red Raiders did, they couldn't convert — something that has plagued them all season long. North Quincy scored only 38 goals this season (13 less than a year ago) and was blanked eight times, including five of its last eight games.

Its offensive drought down the stretch had to do partly with losing senior forward Katy Mercurio to a knee injury for the final seven games. Mercurio, the team's second leading scorer, had four goals and seven assists before she went down.

North Quincy had a great

scoring chance five minutes into the game when senior quad-captains Lauren Kalil and Rachel Enos tried to hook up but the keeper made a great save.

In the first OT, senior quad-captain Christina Conley (team-high 14 points) fed a perfect pass to junior midfielder Katy Faherty, who split a pair of Sandwich defenders but slipped on her way to the goal.

In the second OT, Enos passed to a wide-open Kalil, but her shot from 15 yards sailed just over the crossbar. Three minutes later, Sandwich scored the game-winner off a corner kick.

"We had about 15 to 20 balls in the penalty area, either direct kicks, crosses or throw-ins by Amanda Saylor," Bregoli said. "We just couldn't make anything happen. They played tight defense on our outside people. Defensively, they were solid."

As was the case all year, North Quincy also played an equally strong defensive game. Junior first-year keeper Kristina Manganaro

"You can't ask for much more from our keeper and defense," Bregoli said.

Next season, the Red Raiders' lineup will undergo some changes as they lose 15 seniors to graduation. Although they'll lose their whole starting back line and capable substitutes, starting midfielders Jenn Ryan, Ashley Ridge, Saylor and Faherty will be back.

"It will be an interesting transition," Bregoli said. "We have a good group of sophomores coming up and we have juniors on the JV team that can help us and a couple of freshmen, maybe. We have enough kids capable of stepping up. We'll see."

AIRBAG SAFETY

In response to injuries caused by airbags, automakers are introducing a new generation of airbags that inflate with less force than the older versions. This makes them safer for passengers who are not wearing seat belts. These depowered airbags are a transition to so-called smart airbag systems, which will tailor the inflation to the bag to the driver and passenger. Some automakers have already begun to utilize a system that includes a sensor that indicates where the passenger is seated in relation to the steering wheel or dashboard. In the meantime, individuals should be at least ten inches away from the steering wheel or dashboard. If this poses a problem, consider having extensors attached to the gas and brake pedals.

Please wear your seatbelt even if your car is equipped with airbags. Whether you are driving a new car or a used one, LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Dr. James Evans Named Medical Director Of Psychiatry At Quincy Medical Center

Quincy Medical Center has appointed James Evans, M.D., as medical director of psychiatry.

Evans will oversee the Quincy Heights Geriatric Psychiatry Inpatient Unit, as well as the medical center's outpatient psychiatry programs, which include the Geriatric Assessment Service, Partial Hospitalization Program and Clinic for Cognitive Disorders.

More than 54 million Americans have a mental disorder, according to the National Mental Health Association. Late-life depression affects six million adults, with older Americans more likely to commit suicide than any other age group.

"Given the incidence of mental disorders in people over age 65, QMC must do everything it can to provide appropriate psychiatry services to the geriatric population," said Christine Schuster, RN, MBA, president and CEO of Quincy Medical Center. "Jim's experience in community-based psychiatry, along with his special interest in geriatric and addiction psychiatry, will benefit patients and their families."

Previously, Evans was medical director of mental health at the South Boston Community Health Center. He also has served as medical director of the North Charles Institute for the Addictions in Cambridge.

Additionally, Evans has experience in community-based education. During his tenure at the South Boston Community Health Center, the facility became a center for the medical training of residents and fellows, forming an academic affiliation with Boston Medical Center.

He is an assistant professor of psychiatry at Boston University School of Medicine (BUSM) as well as a lecturer in psychiatry at Harvard Medical School.

Evans received his medical degree from the University of Vermont College of Medicine and performed a residency in psychiatry with the Harvard Longwood Psychiatry Residency Training Program. He also completed a fellowship in addiction psychiatry with BUSM. Evans is board-certified in psychiatry by the American Board of Psychiatry and Neurology.

Before studying psychiatry, Evans was a professional classical singer. He studied vocal performance at Boston University and in Rome, and toured Europe as a tenor and a baritone vocalist.

Quincy Medical Center is a 282-bed acute care community-teaching hospital providing South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services. The medical center's Alliance for Quality with Boston Medical Center, formed in 1999, brings academic medicine to the community. At QMC, physicians from Boston Medical Center direct the departments of medicine, surgery, anesthesia, emergency medicine, and psychiatry. Additionally, physicians from BMC, who are board-certified in a range of medical and surgical specialties, work side-by-side community physicians to ensure the continuity of patient care.

On Thursday, Nov. 21, millions of people will quit smoking cigarettes for one day as part of the American Cancer Society's 26th annual Great American Smokeout celebration.

For many, this will be an important first step towards recovery from tobacco use — a dangerous addiction that kills more than 400,000 Americans each year and accounts for more than $75 billion in annual health care costs. In Massachusetts, tobacco kills 28 people every day; 61 in New England. Since its inception, the Great American Smokeout has had one main goal: to give smokers the help they need to quit smoking for good.

Statistics show cigarette smoking among college-age people (ages 18-24) has increased 28 percent during the last decade. It is estimated that one in 10 college students in America will die prematurely from tobacco use. To help reduce the college smoking rate, the American Cancer Society's New England Division has launched a "Smoke-Free New England College Initiative" designed to save lives and promote wellness on campus.

One reason smoking is more prevalent on campus is because more middle school and high school students smoked in the 1990s, and these students are now in college. But tobacco companies also target college students by sponsoring bar nights, band concerts and two-for-one cigarette discounts.

"Smoke-free dorms may help incoming college students who have not yet taken up smoking avoid tobacco addiction during college," said Henry Wechsler, director of college alcohol studies

Tips To Help You Quit Smoking

You can do it — Strategies to help you get ready and be successful in your quit attempt.

- Consider using medication to help you quit. There are prescription and over-the-counter medications that can help you deal with withdrawal symptoms or even help to reduce the urge to smoke.

- Enlist support. Many states, communities, and health care organizations have free or low-cost counseling available to help you quit. Call your American Cancer Society to find out what is available in your area.

- Get help or ask for help from your health care provider.
- Don't keep your intention to quit a secret. Include your friends and family in your quitting process; they can offer much needed support.

- Clear the places where you usually smoke of anything that reminds you of cigarettes — like lighters, ashtrays, or matches. Also ask other smokers not to smoke around you, and clean your house and car thoroughly to remove the smell of cigarettes.

- Avoid places where smokers gather. Go to the movies, museums, or other places where smoking is not allowed.

- Calm the nervous energy you may feel with physical and mental activities. Take long strolls and deep breaths of fresh air, and find things to keep your hands busy, like crossword puzzles or gardening.

- When the urge to smoke strikes, do something else. Call a supportive friend. Do brief exercises such as pushups, walking up a flight of stairs, or touching your toes. Keep oral substitutes like carrots, apples, raisins, or gum handy. And never allow yourself to think that "one won't hurt," because it will.

For more information, call the American Cancer Society at 1-800-ACS-2345.

at the Harvard School of Public Health. Wechsler authored a study that found non-smokers who live in smoke-free dorms are 40 percent less likely to take up cigarettes.

Among the seven Smoke-Free New England guidelines suggested for colleges are creating smoke-free dorms and buildings, banning the sale of tobacco on campus and providing on-campus tobacco addiction treatment.

"Some New England colleges and universities already have some smoke-free campuses, including Harvard University, Cape Cod Community College and the University of Rhode Island. Other schools need help and guidance as they educate students, faculty and employees and set smoke-free policies," said Bronya Demele, American Cancer Society regional vice president for southeast Massachusetts. "That's what we're here for."

For tips on quitting and information about services in the local area, smokers can call the American Cancer Society 24-hour Quitline at 1-800-ACS-2345. For more help in quitting, visit www.cancer.org.

DENTISTRY
 for the 21st Century

PREGNANT WITH POSSIBILITIES

Pregnant women are urged to schedule regular dental visits and periodic professional cleanings owing to the fact that gum disease may worsen during pregnancy. Changes in estrogen and progesterone levels associated with pregnancy affect the nature of the body's response to the bacteria responsible for causing periodontal (gum) infections. These infections may pose a threat to the placenta and fetus, increasing the likelihood of pre-term delivery, according to new research. With this in mind, pregnant women should view dental and periodontal evaluations as normal parts of prenatal care. Beyond that, pregnant women are encouraged to brush twice daily and floss at least once a day. Pregnancy is no time to neglect the health of your teeth and gums.

Eat healthy foods, drink plenty of water, and limit sweets. We would like to increase dental awareness and stress the importance of regular dental care. We stress preventive dentistry for the whole family. It's never too late to start good dental hygiene, whether you are pregnant or not. Remember that nothing is more economical than regular dental checkups. Most insurance companies allow two cleanings per year. Have you had both of yours? For gentle compassionate dental care, call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.
 P.S. With most periodontal problems, a good thorough cleaning can make a major positive impact.

Late-Score Dims Quincy's Chances For League Title

By CHRIS POISSON

Last Friday night's 35-31 loss to Sandwich at home proved to be a double whammy for the Quincy High School football team.

Not only was it another painful loss late a game, but it also all but knocked the Presidents out of the Atlantic Coast League race.

"This puts a serious dent in our league title aspirations," said head coach Bob Noble. "But the kids will bounce back. They always do."

Quincy (4-3 overall, 2-2 ACL), which is now two games behind Plymouth North and a Whitman-Hanson, will host Dennis-Yarmouth tomorrow (Friday) night at 7 and the following week it travels to Plymouth North.

31-28 lead with 1:20 left.

On the drive, O'Connell completed 4-of-6 passes for 54 yards, including a 21-yard pass to senior tight end J.D. Hyacinthe on fourth-and-11 to place Quincy at the Sandwich 37. O'Connell turned in his best game of the year, finishing 13 for 19 for 209 yards, two touchdowns and no interceptions.

Obviously, offense was not a problem in this game as the Presidents racked up 390 total yards (181 rushing). The culprit was the usually reliable defense, which yielded over 400 total yards. And in an offensive slugfest, the game came down to which team had the ball last.

Sandwich got the ball back at its 46 with 1:07 left to play and continued to go with what worked all game — the option offense and senior Brian Judge. The punishing tailback carried five times for 35 yards, including a 1-yard plunge for the game-winner with less than 20 seconds on the clock.

"How many times can you score late in the game and then still end up losing," said Noble, whose team's previous two losses were in overtime to Hanover and Whitman-Hanson. "It's discouraging to say the least."

Judge finished with 228 yards and three touchdowns on 29 carries with junior quarterback Chris Byron, his option partner, rushing for 60 yards on eight carries.

"We couldn't stop the option," Noble said. "They did a good job of putting our perimeter guys on the ground. Judge had a tremendous night. Defensively, we didn't do the job for the first time all year."

on its next series with junior tailback J.J. Niamkey scoring from 30 yards out to tie the game at 7.

Sandwich fumbled on the ensuing possession and Quincy cashed in with another 30-yard TD run by Niamkey, who rushed for 171 yards on 21 carries. He now has 928 yards rushing this season with nine touchdowns (7 rushing).

After the defense forced Sandwich to go three-and-out, Quincy marched down field but it stalled at the Sandwich 6 and settled for a 23-yard field goal by Goes for a 17-7 lead with 7:56 left in the second quarter.

Sandwich followed with a 10-play, 71-yard drive that ended with Judge's 2-yard TD run to make it 17-14 with 2:45 left in the half. Quincy was called for pass interference on fourth-and-11 that set up the score.

In the second half, Judge scored on a 10-yard TD run on the opening series as the Blue Knights needed only 2:30 to move 65 yards. Quincy countered with a efficient drive of its own, converting on third down twice before senior wing back Matt Ramponi hauled in a sensational 18-yard TD pass from O'Connell.

Continuing to exchange punch for punch, Sandwich regained the lead on its next possession. Bulmer ran an option to the left and appeared to be heading out of bounds, but cut back to his right and ran all the way across the field for a long, 10-yard TD jaunt for a 28-24 lead.

North Quincy Bows In Double OT To Sandwich

By CHRIS POISSON

For the second straight season, the North Quincy High School girls' soccer team outplayed its opponent but once again could not make it out of the first round of the tournament.

The 18th-seeded Red Raiders (10-8-3) traveled to No. 15 seed Sandwich last Friday night and dropped a 1-0 decision in double overtime.

"We dominated the game, about 65 percent of the play in terms of possession and controlling the ball," said head coach Paul Bregoli. "We didn't have a lot of scoring opportunities."

And when the Red Raiders did, they couldn't convert — something that has plagued them all season long. North Quincy scored only 38 goals this season (13 less than a year ago) and was blanked eight times, including five of its last eight games.

Its offensive drought down the stretch had to do partly with losing senior forward Katy Mercurio to a knee injury for the final seven games. Mercurio, the team's second leading scorer, had four goals and seven assists before she went down.

North Quincy had a great

scoring chance five minutes into the game when senior quad-captains Lauren Kalil and Rachel Enos tried to hook up but the keeper made a great save.

In the first OT, senior quad-captain Christina Conley (team-high 14 points) fed a perfect pass to junior midfielder Katy Faherty, who split a pair of Sandwich defenders but slipped on her way to the goal.

In the second OT, Enos passed to a wide-open Kalil, but her shot from 15 yards sailed just over the crossbar. Three minutes later, Sandwich scored the game-winner off a corner kick.

"We had about 15 to 20 balls in the penalty area, either direct kicks, crosses or throw-ins by Amanda Saylor," Bregoli said. "We just couldn't make anything happen. They played tight defense on our outside people. Defensively, they were solid."

As was the case all year, North Quincy also played an equally strong defensive game. Junior first-year keeper Kristina Manganaro

"You can't ask for much more from our keeper and defense," Bregoli said.

Next season, the Red Raiders' lineup will undergo some changes as they lose 15 seniors to graduation. Although they'll lose their whole starting back line and capable substitutes, starting midfielders Jenn Ryan, Ashley Ridge, Saylor and Faherty will be back.

"It will be an interesting transition," Bregoli said. "We have a good group of sophomores coming up and we have juniors on the JV team that can help us and a couple of freshmen, maybe. We have enough kids capable of stepping up. We'll see."

19-Point Red Raider Rally Stuns Silver Lake

By CHRIS POISSON

Stunning wouldn't even serve justice to the North Quincy High School football team's come-from-behind, 26-25 victory over Silver Lake last Saturday afternoon at a chilly Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The Red Raiders rallied from a 25-7 third-quarter deficit with 19 unanswered points for their third straight win, knocking the Lakers out of the Old Colony League race in the process.

"We're playing pretty well right now," said second-year head coach Tony Green. "We don't know how good we are."

With the win, North Quincy (4-4 overall, 3-3 OCL) exceeded last year's three-win output and it marks the first time it has won four games since the 1997 team's 4-6 campaign.

The Red Raiders' resurgence began with a very well-played, one-point loss to league leader Barnstable on Oct. 11. After consecutive blowout losses, the game pumped some life back into their season.

"All that said is that when we're healthy we can compete with these other teams," said Green about the Barnstable match. The kids have done something that not a lot of teams do. They've climbed out of the cellar."

North Quincy will try to damage another team's OCL title dreams when it travels to Bridgewater-Raynham Saturday afternoon.

"They're playing to make it into the playoffs," Green said. "I don't know how well it will match up with B-R. They're such a good team and you know what you're going to get from them."

Trailing 19-7 at halftime, North Quincy yielded a touchdown to Silver Lake on the opening possession of the second half when senior quarterback Denis Hill fired a 30-yard TD pass to a wide open Bill Coveney on play-action.

Perhaps the Lakers let their guard down a little, because on North Quincy's first play of scrimmage the Red Raiders hit them with a big blow. Senior quarterback Kevin Holleran tossed a beautiful ball, just over defensive back Pat Cronin's hands, to senior tailback Chris Dolbeare for a 64-yard score, trimming the deficit to 25-13 after a failed 2-point conversion.

On Silver Lake's ensuing series, senior strong safety Gary Dalton forced a fumble and senior linebacker Darryl Zoia scooped up the loose ball and rumbled 43 yards to the Silver Lake 23-yard line.

"Dalton did what he was supposed to do," Green said. "He was in the right place at the right time. That really changed the complexion of the game."

Indeed, as North Quincy would capitalize on the turnover. On third-and-1 at the 3, Dolbeare plunged into the end zone with a great second-effort run. Senior Linay Laze kicked the extra point to make 25-20 with 3:10 left in the third quarter.

Dolbeare rushed for 140 yards and two scores on 19 carries and also caught two balls for 55 yards and another score.

"What can you say about Chris Dolbeare? He does it all," Green said.

On their next series, the Lakers fumbled for the fourth time in the game and the Red Raiders received the ball at their 47. They proceeded to march down field but the drive stalled at the Silver Lake 6 when Holleran misfired on third and fourth downs.

The defense came up huge on the ensuing possession, with senior defensive end Kosta Kalpakidis sacking Hill for a 6-yard loss on third down, forcing the Lakers to punt from their 14-yard line.

North Quincy received the ball at the Silver Lake 46 and had 3:06 to work its magic. Facing a fourth-and-4 at the 40, Holleran connected with Dalton for the first down and then hit senior tight end Matt Francis with a 23-yard completion to the 8-yard line.

On the next play, senior James Coughlin ran left into the end zone for the go-ahead score with 1:42 left in the game. The 2-point conversion failed.

"The offensive and defensive lines are the heart and soul of this team," Greensaid. Silver Lake drove into field-goal range, but a 35-yard attempt by Brian Hess with less than 30 seconds left came up several yards short.

The Red Raiders got on the board first when Dolbeare bounced outside of a pile up the middle and jetted down the left side for a 51-yard TD run with 7:05 left in the opening quarter.

The Lakers evened the score at 7 when they capitalized on a North Quincy fumble with an 11-yard TD run by junior Jason Chafe. They took a 13-7 lead on their next possession with a 36-yard TD run by Chafe and extended it to 19-7 with nearly seven minutes left in the half on Hill's 13-yard TD run.

Kayla Martin Paces North Quincy Girls' Cross-Country

Kayla Martin placed 19th in a field of 150 freshman girls to pace the North Quincy High School girls' cross country team in the annual State Coaches Meet last Saturday at Franklin Park.

The conditions were difficult as a brisk wind and 38-degree temperatures hampered the runners. Martin clocked a time of 13:18 on the 3,000-meter course, eclipsing her previous best time (13:30) set last month on the course at the Catholic Memorial Invitational.

Adrienne Doucette finished 95th in the sophomore girls' race.

North Quincy will compete in the Division I State Championship this weekend at Franklin Park.

Quincy Boys Fall To BC High, 3-2

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School boys' soccer team's break-out season came to an end last Friday afternoon in the first round of the Division 1 South Sectional tournament.

The No. 7 Presidents, playing in the tourney for the first time in at least a decade, were about 14 minutes away from advancing past No. 10 Boston College High School before they surrendered a pair of goals in a 3-2 loss at Varsity Field.

"It was nice to get into the tournament but we felt we could get far in it," said second-year head coach Kevin Orcutt. "Unfortunately, there were some injuries and we went up against a very good BC High team."

Quincy finished the season with a 10-5-5 record and placed four players on the Atlantic Coast League All-Star Team: senior forwards Bruno Pereira and Washington Morisset, senior defender Craig Keenan and junior midfielder Thiago Pereira.

Morisset, who missed the previous couple of games with an ankle injury, was not playing at full strength, which affected the Presidents' explosive offense.

The Eagles scored the equalizer when Mike Joyce headed a cross over senior

"It was a very successful season," Orcutt said. "I'm not going to say that I'm not disappointed. We set our standards high and we want to keep doing that. If we were a little more healthy, we could have done better."

MacNeil, who missed the final eight games of the regular season with a hip injury, returned to goal, providing an emotional spark for the Presidents. The captain and recipient of the league's sportsmanship award for Quincy came back a week early.

"MacNeil played well in his first game back after five weeks," Orcutt said. "He was supposed to be out six weeks. His return energized the team."

Midway through the first half, BC High got on the board on a goal by Tim Ritter. Quincy tied the game 13 minutes later when junior midfielder Brendan Craig headed an Adilson Ribiero cross past keeper Tim Dee.

Quincy tallied the go-ahead goal from its scoring machine, Bruno Pereira, who deposited his 27th goal of the year after beating three BC

Pereira finished his remarkable season with a league-high 39 points and was named ACL Player of the Year. He also netted a pair of goals in the all-star game and was selected to the Eastern Mass. All-Star Team.

"Overall, we played a good defensive game," Orcutt said. "It was heart-breaker in the end. The kids played real well. I'm not going to blame lack of experience because it was the kid's first time in the tournament. We went after them from the start." Quincy will lose 10 seniors to graduation but Orcutt feels next year's team will be no slouch.

"We're losing very important kids, but I think the underclassmen are good, strong players," he said. "Overall, we'll surprise a lot of people. Our play will be better because the kids have been with me for a couple of years now."

"Everyone thinks we're a one-hit wonder," he added in regards to Bruno Pereira. "I'd like to think we're deeper than that. We're just getting started here."

Quincy Girls' Soccer Blanks Hull, 1-0

The Quincy High School girls' soccer team ended its season last week on a high note with a 1-0 victory at Hull.

Playing a night game under the lights, both teams had to endure cold temperatures, gusty winds and poor field conditions.

The Presidents, which dominated play at both ends, kept the Pirates pinned in their own end for most of the game. The Hull keeper kept the game close with 16 saves. Quincy keeper Sarah Shea recorded her first shut out of the season.

"Our girls really wanted this win after losing their last match with Hull," said head coach Don Martin. "They outplayed Hull in that game and should have beaten them."

Martin made some changes for the game, moving Katie Walsh back to sweeper allowing Kaita Saxe to play stopper. It paid off. Fifteen minutes into the second half Saxe led freshman Courtney Hall for the game-winner.

Martin said he was especially pleased with performance of the midfielders. Junior center midfielder Colleen Martin turned in her best game of the season and outside midfielder Jen Gordon also played well.

Seniors Courtney Peterson, Megan Griffen, Caroline Fields, Kristen Clark and Liz Campbell kept up relentless pressure against Hull. Martin said the team will miss these five seniors but is confident the team will be more of a force next season.

"I have some terrific younger players coming back, including Catie Connolly, a sophomore with a great left foot, and returning freshmen varsity players Donika Hajrizaj and Marissa Monaco. These freshmen matured a lot playing at the varsity level all season.

"We play a grueling, eight-week schedule of 18 games, with two or three games a week. Physically this is very demanding and opportunities for younger players willing to step up and apply their skills is always available.

"No team in the ACL had three freshmen playing at the varsity level throughout the season. These freshman players see anywhere from 40 to 50 minutes a game. Without them we would be seriously struggling."

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

If someone were to pay you ten cents for every kind word that you have spoken about people, and collect five cents for every unkind word, would you be rich or poor?

It has been said that with kindness you can give back a person his self-respect, you can bring life to smothered dreams, you can bring heaven down to earth, and in so doing you become great, for only those with kindness are truly great...

Too often we forget kindness far more easily than we forget injuries. Too often we unconsciously regard a kindness as something that is our due, while we regard an injury as utterly undeserved, even when it is not.

We all need love and acceptance. A smile, or a word of encouragement costs nothing. But it can enrich the life of the person you least suspect needs it!

Kind hearts are the garden
Kind thoughts are the roots,
Kind words are the blossoms,
Kind deeds are the fruit. -- John Ruskin

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your honesty continues to impress everyone who needs reassurance about a project. But be careful you don't lose patience with those who are still not ready to act.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Pushing others too hard to do things your way could cause resentment and raise more doubts. Instead, take more time to explain why your methods will work.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Be more considerate of those close to you before making a decision that could have a serious effect on their lives. Explain your intentions and ask for their advice.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You might have to defend a workplace decision you plan to make. Colleagues might back you up on this, but it's the facts that will ultimately win the day for you. Good luck.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The Big Cat's co-workers might not be doing enough to help get that project finished. Your roars might stir things up, but gentle persuasion will prove to be more effective.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Someone you care for needs help with a problem. Give it lovingly and without judging the situation. Whatever you feel you should know will be revealed later.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) While you're to be admired for how you handled recent workplace problems, be careful not to react the same way to a new situation until all the facts are in.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Rely on your keen instincts as well as the facts at hand when dealing with a troubling situation. Be patient. Take things one step at a time as you work through it.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your curiosity leads you to ask questions. However, the answers might not be what you hoped to hear. Don't reject them without checking them out.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Be careful not to tackle a problem without sufficient facts. Even sure-footed Goats need to know where they'll land before leaping off a mountain path.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Appearances can be deceiving. You need to do more investigating before investing your time, let alone your money, in something that might have some hidden flaws.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your recent stand on an issue could make you the focus of more attention than you would like. But you'll regain your privacy, as well as more time with loved ones by week's end.

BORN THIS WEEK: You're a good friend and a trusted confidante. You would be a wonderful teacher and a respected member of the clergy.

Granite Lose Title Game, McPhee Retires

Some things won't change.

The Marlboro Shamrocks routed the Quincy Granite, 42-14, last Saturday night at home — capturing their 12th straight and 18th overall Eastern Football League championship.

After leading the Granite (9-4) to the championship game in only their four year of existence, McPhee announced his retirement after the game.

The two teams split the regular season series at one game apiece. Veteran quarterback Dave Palazzi, who torched Quincy in the second meeting, once again burned the Granite, passing for over 350 yards and four touchdowns.

Marlboro (11-2) jumped out to a 14-0 first-quarter lead before Quincy got on the board in the second with quarterback Liam Higgins' 4-yard TD pass to Jeff Lang. The Shamrocks, though, scored two more times to grab a 28-7 lead at halftime.

In the third quarter, Palazzi tossed his fourth interception of the game and the Granite converted the turnover into a score when Higgins hit Cy Butler with a 12-yard TD pass to make 28-14.

But that's as close as Quincy would get. Palazzi added another TD pass and even his backup, Chris Butts, got in on the action with a TD pass late in the game to close out the scoring.

Goodwill Industries To Open Retail Center Here

Morgan Memorial Goodwill Industries (Goodwill) announces it will open a retail center at 625 Southern Artery, Quincy, Thursday, Nov. 14.

In addition to providing local shoppers with an opportunity to purchase clothing and household goods at bargain prices, the new store will bring Goodwill's nationally recognized job training program to the city.

Goodwill will host a ribbon-cutting ceremony on Tuesday, Nov. 12, with local officials, clergy, business leaders, representatives from community-based organizations and Goodwill board members and staff in attendance. The event will take place from 5:30 to 7 p.m. at the new store's location.

The Goodwill store will officially open for business Thursday, Nov. 14 from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. The store will also serve as a "drive and drop" donation center where Quincy-area residents can drive up and drop off used clothing and other goods and appliances. All donations are tax deductible.

"Goodwill is pleased to meet the needs of the Quincy community by expanding our retail operation to serve value-conscious shoppers on the South Shore," said Joanne Hilferty, president and CEO of Goodwill.

"There is a two-fold benefit to shopping at our new store," she added. "At a Goodwill Store, bargain hunters can find everything from clothing for the family, to housewares and small appliances. The savings to the shopper are evident."

Hilferty said another benefit is the store provides on-the-job training for Goodwill workers. "Their experience here prepares them for future career opportunities, as they not only develop job skills, but also build their confidence. They learn how to become good workers and to pursue an active role in the working world."

Commissioner Peter H. Collins of Milton, both Democrats, were also re-elected unopposed.

Weymouth Councillor Joseph A. Connolly was elected Norfolk County treasurer without a challenger.

Keating polled 23,024 votes in Quincy, Collins 22,116 and Connolly 22,561. Secretary of State William Francis Galvin topped Republican Jack E. Robinson III here, 23,497 to 5,331.

State Auditor A. Joseph DeNucci, who was re-elected, took Quincy by a wide margin over John J. Xenakis, Independent and Kamal Jain, Libertarian. DeNucci's vote was 23,298 to Xenakis' 3,094 and Jain's 1,409.

Attorney General Thomas F. Reilly and Governor's Councillor Christopher A. Iannella, Jr., both running unopposed, had respective Quincy votes of 23,840 and 22,498.

The Quincy vote for the three other gubernatorial candidates was:

Jill Stein, Massachusetts Green Party, 942; Carla Howell, Libertarian, 289 and Independent Barbara Johnson, 230.

McDermott attributed his victory to a strong grassroots campaign which began a year ago.

"My philosophy when we began this campaign a year ago was in order to win this, we needed a strong grassroots campaign," McDermott told The Sun before going to press. "Because the governor's race and the state treasurer's race would grab a lot of the attention, we felt this race would be based much more on name recognition. I think the work we started a year ago paid off today.

"I'm relieved and excited. It's one of the greatest things that's happened in my career."

McDermott thanked his campaign workers and supporters, and singled out former Register of Probate Tom Hughes and former Mayor James Sheets for their work on his campaign. He also remembered his good friend, former Senator and Councillor Paul Harold who died in August.

"I'm thankful for Paul Harold who was an inspiration for me to get into this race. I feel he was with me all the way."

At press time, McDermott had rolled to a 44,000-vote margin, winning 24 out of 28 towns. Besides Quincy, McDermott carried Avon, Braintree, Brookline, Dedham, Franklin, Holbrook, Needham, Norwood, Randolph, Sharon, Walpole and Weymouth.

McDermott can be sworn into his six-year term as register of probate after Tuesday's vote is certified within 15 days of the election.

"I hope to be on board by the end of November," said McDermott, who is ready to face two pressing issues in the probate court. First, the court will be moving from Dedham to Shawmut St. in Canton near the District Attorney's office as early as December or as late as February. Secondly, the state legislature is expected to take up a supplemental appropriation which would restore some of the personnel cuts which occurred in the probate court department during the last budget cycle.

TWO OF THE World War II Memorial Statue Committee members, Linda Montillio and Leonard Morris, combat veteran of that war, admire the statue following its unveiling and dedication Monday and after the rain had cleared.

Crowd Stays To The End At Dedication

Rain Fails To Dampen WWII Statue Enthusiasm

An enthusiastic crowd of several hundred refused to let showers-turned-to-heavy-rain dampen their spirits Monday to witness the unveiling and dedication of Quincy's long-awaited Memorial Statue.

The crowd, some of them under umbrellas if they thought to bring one, but many unprotected and not caring, ringed Constitution Common in front of new City Hall listening to speakers and eagerly waiting to see the cover come off the statue.

"We all are in deep and profound debt to the World War II generation for creating the America we all enjoy today," said Congressman William Delahunt of Quincy.

"Especially the World War II veterans. Not only did you win the war against Fascism, but you created the new America that is the ideal, the hope for people everywhere today.

"It's incumbent upon those that came after you to remember the heroes that you were and debt that we continue to owe you."

Delahunt called the crisis in veterans health care coverage "unconscionable and unacceptable" but vowed: "We will rally and we will not forget and we will find that money to ensure that every veteran that qualifies has access to adequate health care."

Mayor William Phelan said: "Because of their heroism, we are able to enjoy the freedom and privileges of being citizens of the United States of America.

"Let us never forget the brave men from Quincy —

Keenan Appears To Have Inside Track As Runner-up

Who Will Fill Cahill's Council Seat?

By TOM HENSHAW

The Election of 2002 is over, leaving behind one small but important question . . .

Who is going to succeed Tim Cahill as a Quincy city councillor at-large once he resigns to become State Treasurer?

If he resigns before the first Monday in January, or Jan. 6, 2003, the day the Council begins its second year, the post must be filled by a special election.

If he resigns after Jan. 6, then it's up to the Council to select his successor.

"There will be no need for a special election," said Cahill the other day. "I will be sworn in as state treasurer Jan. 15. Then I'll resign from the Council."

That would leave it up to the remaining eight members of the Council and after that it gets a little vague.

Traditionally, when one of the three at-large councillors leaves for greener fields, his or her chosen successor is the candidate who finished fourth in the last election.

It's happened twice in recent years.

When Pat Toland resigned to become assistant city clerk in 1993, the Council appointed Joe LaRaia, who finished fourth in the 1991 race, to fill out her term.

Again in September, 1995, when LaRaia, who was elected in his own right in the fall of 1993, quit to accept an assessor's appointment, fourth place finisher Charles McIntyre was named his successor.

John Keenan finished fourth in the election of 2001, the last time city vot-

Delahunt Bill Enlists Cape Cod Base For Homeland Defense

A proposal by Cong. William Delahunt aimed at transforming the Massachusetts Military Reservation (MMR) on Cape Cod into a first-in-the-nation regional center for homeland defense training is about to become law.

Also winning final approval was Delahunt language providing for $1.6 million for new investment in the public safety capability that will benefit both MMR and surrounding communities.

"By buttressing national security while respecting environmental safeguards for current and future water supplies, this starts a new chapter in the history of the base," said Delahunt.

He released details of the final package during a visit to the base as members of the 55th Engineer Detachment (carpenters, plumbers, masons, electricians for the South Shore, Cape and it islands) mobilized as part of Operation Enduring Freedom.

The Delahunt legislation marks the first time the Congress has directed the Pentagon to consider the establishment of a regional center for homeland defense anywhere in the United States.

The base now houses the Coast Guard, Army and Air Guard, and hosts exercises by first-response law enforcement and public safety personnel.

Delahunt also pressed successfully in the Fiscal 2003 Military Construction bill for $1.65 million for design and planning work for a new Air National Guard aircraft control tower and fire station.

The existing tower was constructed in 1956 and protrudes into flight safety zones and is unsafe in high winds. It is small, cramped and lacks adequate heating and plumbing.

"Military readiness in a post-Sept. 11 context means extraordinary collaboration among local firefighters and hazmat teams; state police and public health responders; and the FBI, Coast Guard and National Guard," said Delahunt.

"A modernized MMR can help meet these challenges at a cutting edge facility which is entirely compatible with surrounding environment."

Morrissey To Hold Office Hours Thursday

State Senator Michael Morrissey will hold office hours tonight (Thursday) from 6 to 7 in the second-floor conference room at City Hall.

Morrissey invites Quincy residents to attend and voice their opinions on legislative issues and community interests.

"I value the information I receive from constituents during my office hours, and I greatly appreciate their input and willingness to meet with me," he said.

Morrissey also informed constituents that the filing deadline for legislation for the 2003-2004 legislative session is during the first week of December.

"Because we have what is called the right of initiative petition in Massachusetts, any citizen who wishes to file legislation has the right to do so through his or her state legislators," he said.

Morrissey urged residents in his district, who would like to file legislation for the new legislative session that begins in January, to attend the office hours or contact him by Dec. 2.

Those who are unable to attend tonight's office hours may contact Morrissey at the State House by phone at 617-722-1494.

Seven New School Buses Equal Seven Driver Jobs

Seven new yellow mini-buses were added to Quincy school bus fleet last week, one to transport handicapped youngsters around Quincy, the other six for use by other special needs students.

"This will allow us to hire back the seven bus drivers who were to be laid off under the tight school budget restrictions," said Mayor William Phelan, who is also chairman of the School Committee.

The lease-to-purchase agreement for the seven buses and the rehiring of drivers has been made possible by the savings expected in doing in-house what used to be farmed out to private vendors.

"It will be done at no additional cost the first year," said Phelan, "and in years to come it will save us money."

Phelan credited the move to city-owned buses to School Committeewoman Elaine Dwyer and Ken McPhee, director of Transportation, Safety and Security for the schools.

"They did an analysis of the bus routes and found that we could save money through the lease-to-purchase plan," said Phelan.

"This may be a step toward more buses in the future. If expansion can save money, we will take that step."

ONE OF SEVEN new mini-buses to serve special needs students in Quincy Public Schools is welcomed at City Hall. - On Nov. 15, 1777, after 16 months of debate, the Continental Congress, sitting in its temporary capital of York, Pa., agrees to adopt the Articles of Confederation and Perpetual Union. In 1781, with the Revolutionary War still raging, the last of the 13 states ratified the agreement.
- On Nov. 17, 1869, the Suez Canal, connecting the Mediterranean and Red Seas, is inaugurated in an elaborate ceremony attended by French Empress Eugénie, wife of Napoleon III. Today, an average of 50 ships navigate the canal daily, carrying more than 300 million tons of goods a year.
- On Nov. 11, 1918, the Great War ends. At 5 a.m., Germany, bereft of manpower and supplies and faced with imminent invasion, signs an armistice agreement with the Allies in a railroad car outside Compiègne, France.
- On Nov. 13, 1940, Walt Disney's "Fantasia" opens. The unusual animated film

• On Nov. 16, 1953, influential country singer Hank Williams, 29, dies of a heart attack in the back of a limousine on the way to a show in Canton, Ohio. His hits included "Your Cheatin' Heart" and "I'm So Lonesome I Could Cry."

• On Nov. 12, 1980, more than three years after its launch, the U.S. planetary probe Voyager 1 edges within 77,000 miles of Saturn. The photos it beams 950 million miles back to California stun scientists: Saturn has not six, but hundreds of rings.

World War II: Our Finest Hour

(The text of Sun Publisher Henry Bosworth's remarks as keynote speaker at Monday's dedication of the World War II Memorial Statue is this week's column subject.)

As they say, it's nice to be remembered. And today, at this very special dedication, we are remembering—and thanking—Quincy's sons and daughters who served in World War II.

And those veterans of that war who since have come to call Quincy their home.

But we are remembering not only those who fought in battles around the world—in Europe, North Africa and out in the Pacific—but also those who played a vital role on the homefront.

The war ended in 1945 after nearly four years of fighting and sacrifice. Fifty seven years have passed since its end.

But for those of us who were a part of it, that period in our lives will always be a time to remember. And much of it with fondness despite the fact that we were at war.

This nation was never so united. Patriotism was never so high. It has been called "Our Finest Hour." And to those of us who were there—it WAS!

It was an outstanding, unified team effort.

Those fighting overseas. Those working on the homefront in defense plants and shipyards like our own Fore River shipyard to supply the weapons and ships needed to win.

It wasn't just a man's war.

Women played a major role, too.

Women in uniform—the Army WACS, the Navy WAVES, the Coast Guard SPARS, the women Marines and, of course, the nurses. And women in overalls at Fore River and other shipyards. Among them wives, sisters and girlfriends of men overseas who became the Rosies the Riveters and the Wendies the Welders.

Over 16 million Americans served with the Army, Navy, Marines and Coast Guard during World War II. Others served with the Merchant Marine.

Over 400,000 Americans gave their lives—nearly 300,000 of them in battle. Over 670,000 were wounded. Total casualties: over 1 million.

More Americans gave their lives in World War II than in all of our other wars combined.

Among those killed in combat were 255 from Quincy, some just 18 and 19 years old. Kids, who like their classmates, had grown up in the Great Depression and stepped out of high school into the Great War.

In those days at graduation, it wasn't what college you were going to—if you could afford to go. It was what branch of the service you were going into.

Several thousand went in from Quincy.

And four would become Congressional Medal of Honor winners: William Caddy and Everett Pope, Marine Corps, and Charles McGilvray and Fred Murphy, Army.

Today we remember them all with gratitude.

We won that war, as we all know.

But what if we had lost?

Our lives today would certainly be different.

We would be living under the iron fist of the enemy. There would be no gathering such as this one today.

No freedom of assembly.

We wouldn't have had an election to vote in last week. No freedom of choice.

And we would probably have trouble sleeping.

Afraid that someone might break down our door in the middle of the night and drag us off because we happened to say something like: "I wish we had a democracy again. No freedom from fear."

And that American flag—Old Glory—wouldn't be flying over there today.

I remember when no one would let that flag touch the ground out of respect. And men have died in battle to keep it from falling to the ground.

Now, the Supreme Court—by a single vote margin—says the flag can be burned. A Freedom of Expression, they say.

Well, I don't remember any World War II veterans saying burning the flag was one of the freedoms they were fighting for. To them—and other veterans—burning the flag is an abuse. Period.

Those of us who were fortunate to come home from World War II came home thinking it was the war to end all wars.

We never dreamed that Korea, Vietnam, the Persian Gulf, Afghanistan—and terrorism on our own soil—were yet to come. And tomorrow, maybe, Iraq.

The fact that World War II didn't end all wars still bothers many of us today. So does something else: Revisionists—the Monday morning quarterbacks—who don't like the way World War II ended.

They say we should not have used the atomic bomb. We should have invaded Japan instead. The Japanese were ready to quit fighting, anyway, they say.

Don't believe it!

I have asked those revisionists this question before and I ask it again today:

Were you out there in Pacific at the time?

And before then, were you at:

Pearl Harbor, the Coral Sea, Midway, Guadalcanal, the Philippines, the Gilberts, the Marshalls, the Marianas, Iwo Jima, Okinawa? And all those other islands where American blood was shed for nearly four years!

Those of us who were out there, had no problem with President Truman's decision to use the bomb.

My ship, the destroyer Cogswell, and others, had been dodging Japanese suicide planes—kamikazes—off Okinawa. We had no complaints about the bomb.

I have never heard anyone on any ship out there say we shouldn't have used it. And I'm sure the soldiers and marines on Iwo Jima and Okinawa who would have been in the invasion had no objections.

They had been in some of the bloodiest fighting of the entire war. And they knew the Japanese were ready to fight to the death to defend their homeland.

The bombs at Hiroshima and Nagasaki prevented what would have been a costly invasion in lives on both sides.

The Japanese were even training young boys as suicide pilots. And reportedly had some 5,000 planes waiting and ready.

They also had something else:

I was in a scouting party that landed at Yokosuka, a Naval base city south of Tokyo before the formal surrender Sept. 2, 1945.

In caves we found suicide speed boats which were to be piled with explosives to ram our ships and landing craft trying to invade.

The fact that it took two—not one—but two atomic bombs to convince them to surrender tells you how willing they were to fight on.

I have never heard veterans who fought in Europe—Anzio, Salerno, Normandy, in the Battle of the Bulge or the Battle of Berlin—ever say we shouldn't have used the atomic bomb.

They had won their war and hoped to go home. Not out to the Pacific to fight some more. They had done their job and deserved to go home.

Revisionists concentrate on the atomic bomb but seem to overlook the rest of the war in the Pacific. They seldom mention the attack on Pearl Harbor that brought us into the war.

Do they ever think of the 2,403 killed and the 1,180 wounded in that sneak attack?

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1948 POSTCARD is entitled ‘your local Woolworth Store on Hancock Street, Quincy, Mass.’ It also shows part of the old Capitol Theater on the left. The card was published just after this new store opened on the corner of Cliveden Street. They moved here from the Adams Building where they were located for almost 50 years. This store with its popular lunch counter was also opened for almost 50 years when Woolworth’s went bankrupt nationally in the 1990s. Today, this is the home of Landmark Education, a company that provides all types of training for business and personal achievement. From the Collection of Tom Galvin

Quincy’s Yesterdays

Councillors Clash Over Hospital

By TOM HENSHAW

City Councillor Edna B. Austin termed “utterly ridiculous” a late attempt by Councillor-elect Joseph E. Brett to block construction of a $3 million addition to City Hospital.

“Other members of the Council and I have been studying this proposal for more than 10 years,” said Mrs. Austin, chairman of the Council’s Finance Committee.

“We were convinced that it was good business for the city or we would not have approved that $1,750,000 bond issue last October.”

But Councillor James R. McIntyre, noting he had voted against the bond issue, came to Brett’s defense, saying the addition would not be needed if the hospital stopped admitting out-of-town residents as patients.

TRANSIT PLAN BLASTED

A proposal by Boston Mayor John B. Hynes for a $300 million state-finance Metropolitan Transit Authority to absorb the New Haven Railroad’s commuter lines met a hostile reception in Quincy.

Sen. Charles W. Hedges (R-Quincy) called the proposal “one more endeavor for Boston to unload its financial and economic problems on the state.”

George A. Yarrington, executive director of the Quincy Taxpayers Association, demanded that the MTA “put its own house in order” before asking the South Shore to consider the plan.

He noted that the MTA had a record $12 million deficit this year.

NEW POLICE ASKED

City Manager Edward T. Lewis said he plans to ask the City Council for funds to add five new officers to the Quincy Police Department after the city voted a five-day week for patrolmen.

Why Not A Standard Bridge At Fore River?

I have a question about the price of the Fore River bridge. Why not just build a standard bridge (not a raising bridge), and run a pipe to the tanks so the ships do not have to pass under a bridge? Sounds like it would solve a problem and save millions of dollars. They ran an oil pipe before — the Alaska pipe-

November Is Family Caregivers Month

November is National Family Caregivers Month, an annual, nationwide observance dedicated to recognizing the valuable role of caregivers, both to their loved ones as well as to society.

A family caregiver is defined as someone who cares for a chronically ill, disabled or elderly loved one. According to the National Family Caregivers Association, more than 50 million people provide some level of caregiving services for a loved one each year. That is the equivalent of $257 billion worth of “free” caregiving services each year.

Family caregivers support the U.S. healthcare system by providing more than 80 percent of all home care services. Among the services they provide are nursing support, including wound and medication management, as well as assistance with activities of daily living such as dressing and toileting.

Locally, the Bayview Associates (a program of South Shore Mental Health) “Caring Connections” program helps support family caregivers by providing family intervention to improve the caregiving situation. The program offers the opportunity for caregivers and their families to participate in facilitated family decision-making. Family mediation is available to assist problem-solving for troubled caregiving families or those at risk. Referrals for continued community services are available when needed.

For more information about Caring Connections, please call (617) 921-3565.

A Wrong Premise

There is a wrong premise — more of a propaganda slogan — that Saddam Hussein is the No. 1 danger for the United States and the world. All others who possess the same weapons of mass destruction are benign.

That false premise drives to war both pro-war and anti-war American Congressmen. The differences are as to how the United States should proceed to war. Hawks want to give President George W. Bush now a free hand to go to war any time he wants, even if alone. Doves are for war if the American Congress and the UN Security Council approve.

Does it matter that many millions, Americans and non-Americans, disapprove of war on Iraq?

Would somebody remind

President George W. Bush that during his presidential campaign he told us that Jesus Christ is and will continue to be his guide in life?

Pleads Innocent, Pre-Trial Conference Dec. 11

Milton Man Charged In Golf Course Death Of Purple Heart Veteran

A Milton man, charged with manslaughter in the death of a 79-year-old Quincy grandfather in an argument over golf balls, pleaded innocent in Quincy District Court Tuesday.

Judge Mark Coven ordered Robert Carnathan, 54, appearing for his arraignment in a wheel chair, released in $10,000 bail pending a pre-trial conference Dec. 11 at 9 a.m.

Carnathan was charged in the beating death of Donald B. King, an Army paratrooper who won a Purple Heart in the Battle of the Bulge in World War II, Saturday at Presidents Golf Course in Montclair.

The two men apparently got into an argument over lost golf balls they had collected on the 12th fairway while the club was hosting a tournament for the electrical workers union.

Assistant District Attorney Susan Stanziani Cochran, who handled the court appearance for the state, said the manslaughter charge may be changed if an autopsy shows that King died of the beating.

King, the father of five and grandfather of 11, had a history of heart trouble, but the precise cause of death would not be known until the autopsy was completed.

Carnathan appeared at the courthouse unaided but was provided with a wheel chair when he had difficulty standing. He was also bandaged from undisclosed injuries.

Witnesses said the two men, whose homes abutted the golf course although they lived in different towns, were accustomed to collecting lost golf balls. Carnathan for sale to golfers.

King was known to give away the balls he recovered. He had been walking around the golf course for some 20 years but it was not determined if the two men knew each other.

Details of their argument are not clear, only that King was beaten by a cane.

No Lottery Gimmicks Or Higher Taxes, Says State Treasurer-Elect

Solving State Budget Crisis Among Cahill Top Priorities

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

"Taking an active role in solving the state's budget crisis — without short-term lottery 'gimmicks' and burdening taxpayers — will be among the top priorities of State Treasurer-elect Timothy Cahill when he is sworn into the state's fifth highest elective office Jan. 15.

"I want to play a role to help out the new governor and the legislature to solve our fiscal crisis. We need to make sure we make sound fiscal decisions and that we stay away from gimmicks," Cahill told The Quincy Sun. "I think my role will be to make sure that we stay away from short-term gimmicks in the lottery — short-term solutions that may bridge the (budget) gap but lead to long-term problems.

"Statutorily, I don't have a real big function in the budget process but I am looking forward to working with the new governor (Mitt Romney)," the lifelong Quincy resident said. "I think that will be a nice challenge and to try to see where I fit and what kind of role I can play between the two branches of government."

Cahill, who made his mark as an independent voice on the Quincy City Council since he was first elected to that body in 1987, said he will take a bi-partisan approach as state treasurer.

"I see the treasurer's role as less political than anyone else's role — less partisan — I think that's a function of the (treasurer's) office and it's also the way I function because I've been in the city council for so long that I feel comfortable not playing the party first. Other than my treasurer's experience, I've never been a party politician. Although it's important, it takes a secondary role from being state treasurer because I need both sides — Democrats and Republicans — to trust my numbers, to trust what my office gives them."

Cahill said he has heard the state's projected budget shortfall may be between $1 billion and $2 billion. A self-described fiscal conservative, he says taxes can't absorb the state's red ink.

"What's important to understand, based on the results of the election — especially Question 1 and the Republican win for the governor's office — is that we have to be very, very careful of seeing taxes as a solution. I don't think that's a Democrat or a Republican issue. I just don't think people want to or can they afford to pay more taxes. So we need to solve this problem without looking at taxes as a solution."

Besides solving the state budget crisis, Cahill addressed other goals that he would like to achieve during his first four-year term as state treasurer. They include growing the state pension fund, creating more college scholarships and realizing additional state revenues. He also said maintaining the state treasurer's office as an independent department and making government work are of paramount importance.

STATE TREASURER-ELECT Tim Cahill and his wife, Tina, after Cahill's election to the state's fifth highest elective office last Tuesday.

"I want to make sure the office retains the integrity and independence that it has. I want the state to solve its budget crisis and that I am a part of that. I want to grow revenues wherever we have to and that we make money in our pension fund because all of that will help the taxpayer."

"That's what we need to do — that we make sure government runs smoothly without increasing cost to the taxpayer. That's the message that came out of this election. It doesn't matter if you're a Democrat or a Republican — that's the message that we have to take to Beacon Hill. We have to make sure we solve our budget problems without reaching into the taxpayer's pocket."

Pointing to his experience as Norfolk County treasurer, Cahill said government can work. "The economy will turn around and we have to position ourselves to get the best result from that turn-around. I want to do what I did as Norfolk County treasurer — be successful. Have the office be looked upon with respect, that the decisions are made for the right reasons. There are no politics involved in the decision-making that we do."

Cahill said he wants to increase education of fiscal matters, such as credit card debt seminars for high school and college students. "I would also like to see, if we bring casino gambling or another form of gambling to Massachusetts, that some of the money goes towards college scholarships. That's a big goal of mine."

"If we can accomplish those things, in addition to making sure the state runs well, and that the office is looked upon with respect, I'll feel that my first term was a success."

Cahill said he viewed his run for state treasurer as a challenge and as a step up from the county treasurer post he has held for nearly six years. "I thought I could use my experience as a treasurer to help the state through its fiscal crisis," he said.

The state pension fund, with approximately $26 billion in assets, will be an area of Cahill's focus. "We need to come up with a plan to turn it around, to try to get growth and positive returns over the next few years," he said.

The state pension fund — one of the largest in the country — was created in the 1980s. Up until that time, the money was put into treasuries, but a new law passed about 20 years ago allowed the pension fund to be invested in the stock market, fixed income securities and alternative assets "all across the board," Cahill said.

Today, the state contributes about $1 billion annually to the fund, while state employees can contribute up to 10 percent of their salary on a yearly basis. The fund is invested by the state pension board which Cahill will oversee as chairman.

"The fund is invested to make sure there is sufficient revenue to cover future liabilities and future retirements," Cahill said. "It's been very difficult for any pension fund to make money the last three years. We've got a real big challenge ahead of us. You're not going to change things around in a day or a year but you want to come up with a plan that positions your pension fund to make the most gains in the safest, least risky manner."

"That's the philosophy we've always had — not to chase returns, not to get the biggest returns but to make sure you grow without taking too much risk," Cahill said. "You want to diversify as much as possible. The more you diversify, the less risk you have. We'll have to look at all different types of investment strategies and maybe come up with some interesting new ways and VICTORY HUG — Quincy City Councillor and Norfolk County Treasurer Tim Cahill receives a celebratory hug from his daughter, Kendra, 10, after winning the state treasurer's post in last Tuesday's election. look at what other states do."

Cahill said he hopes to learn what other states do while attending a conference for state treasurers later this month in New York.

As state treasurer, Cahill also will oversee the state lottery commission which generated $4 billion last year, one of the most successful in the country. While Cahill has not taken a stand on casino gambling or slot machines, he is adamantly opposed to another lottery issue: reducing payouts.

"I will oppose all attempts to cut back on lottery payouts. In a Shannon O'Brien administration, that probably wouldn't have been an issue. In a Mitt Romney administration, it may be an issue although I haven't heard him talk about that as a way to bridge the budget gap."

Currently, 71 percent of the lottery's receipts are used for jackpots and winnings. Gov. Jane Swift had suggested the payout be reduced to 63 percent.

"We have the highest payouts in the country. (Swift) suggested that we get in line with other states. I feel that is not a good idea. We'll fight to make sure that's not one of the gimmicks and not one of the short-term solutions because we feel that will hurt the overall revenue of the lottery," Cahill said.

Furthermore, the state treasurer-elect said, reducing lottery payouts will mean less dollars for cities and towns. "What will happen (if payouts are reduced) is cities and towns will eventually lose money because if the revenues go down, there will be less money to give out to cities and towns. We need to stay competitive. We have Connecticut (casinos) and lotteries all around us and if we don't keep the payouts where they are, we're going to lose revenue."

Cahill said he is also interested in making the lottery more appealing to the casual player.

"I think, right now, in terms of scratch tickets, you have too few winners in the sense that the attraction is the three or four million (jackpot) winner and a million different scratch games. What we've heard from people — both agents and people who play the games — is that they would like to see those winnings more spread out so that there would be more medium and small winners as opposed to just two or three large winners per game. We want to look to see if there are ways to do that."

As for introducing a $20 scratch ticket — double the highest current ticket — Cahill said he's open to suggestions as to what may generate more revenue. "Other than doing that, it may make more sense to look at other forms of gambling."

Addressing the issue of casino gambling and slot machines at race tracks, Cahill said, "My only function — it doesn't really matter whether I come out for it or against it — is that we need to make sure it's done properly if it's done. It's really a legislative decision."

"My function is to make sure casino gambling or slot machines don't adversely impact the lottery and that there's a system in place that complements the lottery. We shouldn't have a separate gambling commission when we have a lottery commission. It should all be part of the same."

The lottery generated $860 million in local aid to cities and towns last year. That funding level has increased every year. "The lottery commission is responsible for the running of the games," Cahill said, "but it's the legislature that determines the percentage of local aid to municipalities."

Additional revenue can be realized, Cahill said, through unclaimed property and sewer and water abatement trusts — a fairly low-key but a substantial part of the lottery, he said.

Cahill credited his election in part to his message as a "proven treasurer" resonating with the electorate. He was elected Norfolk County treasurer in 1996. The 1977 graduate of Quincy High School has been elected a Quincy councillor at-large eight times, the first in 1987.

But he realizes the step from county to state treasurer is formidable.

"It's a big office and I have a lot of work to do. It's a fairly big transition for me. Cash management, bonding, it all goes under the treasurer's office and some of those areas we did not do a lot in the county treasurer's office."

"It's going to be an education over the next two months and the next few years but I intend to focus on all aspects of the office to make them accountable and to make them count in people's lives."

With O'Brien's defeat in the gubernatorial race, some political observers have already pegged Cahill as a future Democratic candidate for governor. But for now, Cahill, who will celebrate his 44th birthday Dec. 1, insists he has no thoughts on the big office at the State House.

"I'd like to be state treasurer for a while. State treasurer is a big job and a big responsibility. I don't know how you can make the improvements I'd like to make, the changes I'd like to make and look for the successes I'd like to have in four years so at this point in my life I'd like to see myself be there for two terms but who knows. I'm not looking at any higher office right now. For me to run for governor would mean I would have to start in two years and I'm not ready to do that right now."

"The office of treasurer just got through with the last two treasurers running for governor and I think the office needs a treasurer who's going to be treasurer for a while. I may be the treasurer for a long time to come. I promise I won't try to break Bob Crane's record of 26 years but I do hope that I'll be there longer than Shannon O'Brien."

Who Will Fill Cahill's City Council Seat?

Quincy and I would welcome the opportunity to do so.

"I plan on running again next year as well, but in the meantime, there are a lot of important issues facing the city and I think it is important to have a full City Council to address them.

"My understanding is that historically the runner-up has always been appointed."

But not necessarily.

"I've never gone through something like this," said Council President Daniel Raymondi. "I understand that the last few times it was done the fourth place finisher was selected.

"But the councillors may prefer to invite the public to participate in the selection, like we have done for School Committee and for city auditor.

"We may have people submit resumes and letters of interest and appear before us to make a presentation."

Or might the councillors skip over Keenan's name and select Jimmy Liang, who finished fifth in the at-large race and would be the first Asian-American to hold a seat on the City Council?

Cahill was the top vote-getter among the six candidates for councillor at-large in the 2001 city election.

The count was Cahill 13,208, Joseph Finn 11,136, Frank McCauley 11,083, Keenan 10,282, Jimmy Liang 7,173, and Brian McNamee 5,602.

Quincy Medical Center Opens Cancer Care Resource Center

Every year more than 1.2 million people are diagnosed with cancer. For many the journey from diagnosis through treatment and recovery is fraught with anxiety and questions.

What are the latest treatment options? Am I a candidate for a clinical trial? Does my hospital have a support that is right for me?

Quincy Medical Center recently opened a new Cancer Resource Center, offering patients with cancer and their families a comprehensive health and wellness resource, with particular emphasis on the prevention, diagnosis and treatment of many forms of cancer. The Center features a collection of more than 200 books, videos, brochures and health care periodicals. A computer is available for online health care Internet search, and the medical center's librarian is accessible for more specific literature searches.

A specially trained Cancer Resource Center volunteer and/or staff is on hand at all times to help visitors locate articles, answer questions or connect with other community cancer-care services.

Located on the second floor of the medical center's A-Building, the Center is open Tuesday through Thursday from noon to 2 p.m. For more information about the Cancer Resource Center, call 617-376-2077.

Quincy Medical Center (www.quincymc.org) is a 282-bed acute care community-teaching hospital providing South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services. The medical center's Alliance for Quality with Boston Medical Center (BMC), formed in 1999, brings academic medicine to the community. At Quincy Medical Center, physicians from Boston Medical Center direct the departments of medicine, surgery, anesthesia, emergency medicine, and psychiatry. Additionally, physicians from BMC who are board-certified in a range of medical and surgical specialties work alongside community physicians to ensure the continuity of patient care.

Mary is a 46-year-old high school graduate who works full time. She's married with two children under the age of 18, and she does most of the cooking and cleaning in her home. Mary also spends nearly 20 hours each week caring for her 77-year-old mother. But who is taking care of Mary?

With the demands and responsibilities of job, home and family, many caregivers overlook their own health and well-being. In fact, three separate studies show that between 46 and 59 percent suffer from clinical depression.

"Having too many things to do in the day often causes the caregiver to feel guilty that they are not tending to everyone's needs," said Kate Ackerman, M.D., M.P.H., and vice chair of the Committee on Geriatric Medicine for the Massachusetts Medical Society. "This sense of guilt frequently leads to depression."

Mary's situation is not unique. She represents more than a quarter of American households providing care to persons 50 or older, according to the Family Caregiver Alliance (FCA). FCA research also shows this number will likely reach 39 million by 2007.

Data from the FCA indicates that one-third of the caregivers polled describe their own health as only fair to poor.

"Many people who care for a family member or friend have other responsibilities and tend to ignore their own health," Dr. Ackerman said. "They put off regular check-ups with their physician or don't get the rest that we all need to stay healthy."

Caring For Yourself

The FCA suggests a number of steps caregivers can take to maintain their health. These include:

- Give yourself credit for the work that you are doing.
- Arrange for some support and breaks from daily duties.
- Monitor your own health.
- Seek out support groups for emotional support and tips on caregiving.

• Research community or state agencies that provide information and assistance.

You may also want to investigate securing the services of a professional caregiver to supplement your own work. The Administration on Aging of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (AOA) offers some helpful guidelines available online (www.aoa.dhhs.gov).

"There are times when the person requiring care doesn't want someone they don't know caring for them," Dr. Ackerman said. "In that case you might want to secure outside services, such as a housekeeper, for yourself to lighten the load. Most importantly, be aware of your own health issues."

Where To Go For Help

AOA operates the National ElderCare Locator, a service that will direct you to the nearest Area Agency on Aging (AAA) and a variety of community services to support older adults. Call 1-800-677-1116.

Tips For Fighting Seasonal Allergies

(NAPS) — If you sneeze, cough and have a runny nose every spring or fall — or all through the growing season — you probably have seasonal allergies. Doctors call it "seasonal allergic rhinitis." There are ways to control it and, hopefully, to prevent it from triggering conditions like asthma and sinusitis.

Seasonal allergic rhinitis is usually caused by molds releasing spores into the air or by trees, grasses and weeds releasing their pollens. Everybody is exposed to them but only some people develop allergies to them. In these people, the immune system, which protects us from invaders like viruses and bacteria, reacts to a normally harmless substance called an allergen (allergy-causing compound).

Specialized immune cells called mast cells and basophils then release chemicals like histamine that lead to the symptoms of allergy: sneezing, coughing, a runny or clogged nose, postnasal drip and itchy eyes and throat.

"There is nothing wrong with mast cells or basophils," said Dr. Dean Metcalfe, an allergy expert at the National Institutes of Health (NIH). "The immune system is just reacting to something we don't want it to."

Peak seasons for pollens and molds depend on where you live; generally, tree pollen allergies strike late winter to early spring; grass allergies, spring through summer; and ragweed in the fall.

If you have allergic rhinitis, you have many options. First, avoid whatever you react to, if possible. Sunny, dry, windy days can be bad if you have pollen allergies, so stay indoors on those days with the windows closed. Some people move to where the offending pollen doesn't grow. This may help for a while, but people who are allergic to one thing tend to develop allergies to others and may soon be suffering again.

If avoidance doesn't work, allergies can often be controlled with medications. The first choice is an antihistamine, which counters the effects of histamine.

Steroid nasal sprays can reduce mucus secretion and nasal swelling. NIH says that the combination of antihistamines and nasal steroids is very effective in those with moderate or severe symptoms of allergic rhinitis.

Cromolyn sodium is a nasal spray that inhibits the release of chemicals like histamine from mast cells. But you must start taking it several days before an allergic reaction begins, which is not always practical.

Immunotherapy, or allergy shots, is an option if the exact cause of your allergies can be pinpointed. Immunotherapy involves a long series of injections, but it can significantly reduce symptoms and medication needs.

For allergy information from NIH's National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, visit (www.niaid.nih.gov).

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

SHELL OF YOUR FORMER SELF

If you have chipped, broken, misshapen, stained, or discolored front teeth, you may want to learn about porcelain veneers. They consist of thin shells of porcelain that fit over damaged or misshapen teeth. This quality restoration technique can also be used to close small gaps between teeth and to lengthen teeth. The procedure involves removal of a thin layer of the affected tooth's outer surface, after which impressions are taken that are used to create veneers that will fit precisely. At the next appointment, the veneers are fitted, permanently bonded in place, and shaped. The result is a newly surfaced tooth with an extremely durable material that is very similar to enamel in terms of color, translucence, and texture.

A beautiful smile can lighten the hearts of those around you and give you an extra dose of self-confidence at the same time. Our practice is dedicated to offering the best comprehensive dental treatment available, and our focus is always on you and your needs. We provide gentle dental care for the entire family. Do you have dental problems that need professional attention? Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Our staff is made up of well-trained professionals who work together as a team to bring you the highest quality treatment in a warm, caring setting at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. While porcelain veneers are very durable, protect them from chipping by refraining from nail-biting, chewing ice, and biting into hard foods.

Gillis At Veterans Ceremony:

'Show Due Respect To All Who Served'

BY LANCE MORGANELLI

A crowd of several hundred ignored Monday's drenching rain to turn out for Quincy's annual Veterans Day parade and ceremony.

The traditional ceremony was held at the World War I Doughboy Statue on the lawn of the Adams Academy where Gold Star Mother Nellie Bourassa placed a ceremonial wreath and bouquet of flowers at the base of the statue.

She was escorted by Quincy Veterans Council Commander John Joyce and assisted by Thomas Stansbury of the Veterans Services Department past council commander and parade chairman. The Veterans Council sponsors the annual parade and ceremony.

Mayor William Phelan said in tribute, "We can never adequately repay our veterans but memorials like these are a fitting way to remember them always."

"It is through their service that America has maintained its strength and its freedom over the years," said Phelan of the more than 25 million living veterans.

"They [all veterans] are examples of what true patriotism and democracy stand for and by honoring them we are teaching a new generation of Americans what it means to be free," Phelan said.

Keynote speaker Norfolk County Commissioner John Gillis, U.S. Marine Corps Veteran, urged families to save those letters and pictures which have since yellowed from servicemen of past wars "so that your children and your grandchildren will know who served so well in the past."

"We didn't have many luxuries [growing up in the Great Depression] but we certainly had a sense of loyalty to your neighborhoods, to your friends and to your city," said Gillis.

Recalling what was then called Armistice Day in his youth, Gillis spoke of Hancock Street being virtually filled to capacity with spectators honoring the parade of soldiers.

"They [the veterans] were the greatest bunch of guys we ever met; but I'll tell you this: we loved them for what they did for our country and we were proud of them," Gillis said.

"We were so lucky to grow up in a time when honor, truth, loyalty and patriotism was real and respected by all," said Gillis.

"When we came out of the Depression, World War II was in our futures...[and]...everyone, that's right, everyone wanted to enter the various services," said Gillis.

"Show due respect to all those who served this country. I salute this [World War II] great generation and I'm very happy that I'm part of it," said Gillis.

City Council President Daniel Raymondi said Veterans Day is a time for all Americans to take a clear look at both our past, our present and our future.

"Could anything be more contradictory than the lives of our soldiers: they love America so we ask them to spend long years in foreign lands far from our shores...and most paradoxically of all they value life and yet bravely ready themselves to die in the service of our country," Raymondi said.

"One thing has not changed: the valor, the dignity and courage of the brave men and women who wear our uniform," Raymondi said.

Text Of Gillis' Remarks

(Following is the text of the remarks delivered by Norfolk County Commissioner John Gillis, World War II Marine Veteran, as Keynote speaker at Quincy's Veterans Day Ceremony Monday at the World War I Doughboy statue at Adams Academy)

Everyone knows a veteran - if you look around this noble city - you see veterans posts in every section. They are not as busy and crowded as they were in the 50s, 60s and 70s.

In each part of our city from Squantum to Quincy Point and from West Quincy to Houghs Neck, the ranks of veterans are becoming thin.

In homes throughout this city there are letters and pictures of servicemen in World War II, Korea and Vietnam. Most of them have faded and turned brown - but we must not forget these veterans - save these pictures and letters so that your children and grandchildren will know those who served you so well in the past.

Back in 1930 and early 40s when I was growing up in Quincy, Veterans Day was known as Armistice Day. What a great day - Hancock Street was crowded with people honoring those who served in World War I and the Spanish American War.

The main event of the day was to clap as the veterans passed by and to make certain that you saluted each flag as it passed. After the parade we would run as fast as we could to the Wisteria Bungalow, the home of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. It was located where the court house parking lot is now. When the veterans returned we would get treated nice with a sandwich and ice cream. We loved these veterans - not for what they did for us that day - but for their great service to our country.

As late President John F. Kennedy on Oct. 26, 1963 said, "A nation reveals itself not only by the men it produces, but also by the way it honors, the way it remembers."

We grew up during the Great Depression - when most families had just enough money to put food on the table. We did not have many luxuries but we certainly had a sense of loyalty to your neighborhood, your friends, to your city. We were so lucky to grow up at a time when honor, truth, loyalty, duty and patriotism was real and respected by all.

During my years of growing families were poor - no one really knew this, as we were all in the same boat.

The Depression was a great leveler. We were all equal. As we came out of the Depression, World War II was in our future.

On Dec. 7, 1941, when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor, my dad, our neighbors, Pat Noonan, Frenchie LaFavre, Chris McDermot, Patsy Delfano were in my home, and they figured we could lick the enemy in about six weeks. How wrong they were.

Everyone, that is right, everyone wanted to enter the various services. In the class of 1943 from Quincy High School eight of us together joined the Marine Corps. Others quickly joined other military units. We were united in wanting to serve our country.

After Aug. 14, 1945 we came back to this great city, many of us used the G.I. Bill to go to college or buy a home. Some never came home, sorry to say. We are remembering this on Veterans Day in this great city.

Our ranks now are growing thin, but with due respect to all who serve this country during the Korean War, Vietnam, and the Gulf War. I salute the veterans who Tom Brokaw called "The Greatest Generation."

Former President Bush Praises Quincy Veterans As 'Heroes In Truest Sense'

Former President George Bush had a special tribute for Quincy veterans during the dedication of the World War II Memorial Statue Monday.

Bush, who served as a Navy pilot in World War II, praised them as "heroes in the truest sense of the word" in a letter to Mayor William Phelan.

The letter, read at the dedication by Henry Bradley, director of Veterans Services and master of ceremonies, follows:

"I am happy to have the opportunity to pay my respects to all who will gather in Quincy, Massachusetts, on Veterans Day to dedicate the World War II Memorial.

"The men and women to whom you pay homage today are heroes in the truest sense of the word. Their courage and sacrifices reflect the great spirit of which General MacArthur spoke at West Point: that of duty, honor and country.

"As a former Navy man and as a former Commander-in-Chief, I join you in saluting these valiant men and women for taking up the torch of freedom and answering their country's call to duty. All Americans owe them a lasting debt of gratitude.

"Have a wonderful and memorable gathering.

"Sincerely, George Bush"

Do they ever think of the 1,177 sailors still entombed in the battleship USS Arizona at the bottom of Pearl Harbor? Nearly 61 years in a watery grave.

Do they ever think of the Bataan Death March?

Do they ever think of the atrocities suffered by American prisoners of war?

Do they ever think of the Gold Star Mothers whose young sons never came home?

I interviewed Major General Charles Sweeney--a Quincy boy--who took part in both atomic bomb missions and was the pilot over Nagasaki.

Would you do it again, I asked him.

"Yes," he replied. "I would do it again under the same circumstances."

Those circumstances were right 57 years ago. And they can't be changed today by those tinkering with history.

Hopefully, nuclear weapons won't have to be used again. And the circumstances to use them will never rise again.

Time is thinning out the ranks of the World War II veterans. Of the more than 16 million who served, an estimated six million survive. We are now losing between 1,400 and 1,500 a day.

We veterans are not going to be around too much longer to tell about World War II like it really was.

There has been concern about MCAS scores. I wish there was as much concern about the teaching of American history.

Our young people should know more about World War II than they do. Who started it. How important it was to win it. Why it had to end the way it did.

And that, despite the revisionists, we weren't the bad guys.

If there hadn't been an attack at Pearl Harbor, there would not have been an atomic bomb at Japan.

Today we have a friendly relationship with Japan which is now considered an ally.

But we can't compare today with yesterday. Japan was our enemy then. Not our friend.

What we had to do then, --we had to do.

The sad thing about World War II was not the use of the atomic bomb. But that it did not end all wars as we thought it would.

Today we have a new war--the one on terrorism. This one may be a long, long one.

It's hard to spot a terrorist. They don't wear uniforms. They sneak.

Sept. 11, 2001 has joined Dec. 7, 1941 as a date in infamy.

If we unite as we did in World War II, this war will be won, too.

Patriotism became somewhat old fashion sometime after World War II. But there has been an encouraging resurgence. May it never fade again.

We should never let patriotism become like a fashion fad--in style one year. And out the next.

This tribute today may be a little late in coming. But, as they say--better late than never.

Today this statue is being dedicated to those who did what they did to preserve our democracy and cherished freedoms.

Men and women--those kids just out of high school--whose lives as civilians were interrupted for three or four years.

Many--whose lives were forever changed. And--sadly--the too many whose lives ended suddenly on a battle field or in battle on a steamy island or at sea.

This statue may find a few critics. Most statues do. You can't please everyone.

But may it be a lasting reminder to all of what Quincy sons and daughters--and adopted sons and daughters--did in World War II.

And, did so well.

Thank you.

"THE TRIBUTE THAT we are about to unveil is but the smallest of tokens of our undying gratitude," said Mayor William Phelan. At the right is former Mayor James Sheets. Behind Phelan is Henry Bradley, director of Veterans Services and emcee.

"I AM SO terribly proud to live in this city..." said former Mayor James Sheets, during whose administration plans for the World War II Memorial Statue began to take shape. At left is Mayor William Phelan, whose administration brought the effort to completion. Behind them is John (Butch) Mahoney, member of the Statue Committee.

QUINCY SUN PUBLISHER Henry Bosworth, World War II Navy veteran and keynote speaker, said, "The sad thing about World War II was not the use of the atomic bomb but that we thought it was the war to end all wars." UMBRELLAS WERE NICE to have as the rains came pouring down during the dedication of the World War II Memorial Statue Monday.

MAYOR WILLIAM PHELAN and Robert Noble of Quincy placed a wreath and flowers at the base of the World War II Memorial Statue following its unveiling Monday. Noble, a World War II prisoner of war and former state commander of Massachusetts POWs, saluted the statue.

FATHER PETER QUINN, pastor of St. John's Church, and the Rev. Sheldon Bennett, minister United First Parish Church, share a raincoat as an umbrella. The Rev. Bennett gave the invocation and Fr. Quinn the benediction at the dedication ceremony.

Rain Fails To Dampen World War II Statue Enthusiasm

Quincy, Mass. — It felt like the blood in the sand of those hellish battles so that we can live with our loved ones in peace and security.

"The tribute that we are about to unveil is but the smallest of tokens of our undying gratitude. It is long overdue."

Former Mayor James Sheets, during whose administration the plans for the statue first began to take shape, said:

"I am so terribly proud to live in this city that will never, never forget what the men did for this great nation in the Second World War.

"And every time we see this statue we will remember the sacrifice that they made and we will always remember that freedom will never be free."

"In an age of technology that uses missiles and drones, robotics and computers, it is hard to imagine the human toll of war fought nearly all around the world," said City Council President Daniel Raymond.

"The City Council remembers you and we honor you.

"This monument here remembers the living and the dead, the missing and the injured and will stand for decades and generations to come long after the last veteran of this great war passes from this earth."

"It was instilled in my fathers and brothers the importance of defending this country," said state Sen. Michael Morrissey. "From all of us today we really want to say thank you to that generation — it really made America great."

"Our [the state legislature] thoughts, our congratulations and our thanks to the

Quincy Sun Publisher Henry Bosworth, World War II Navy veteran and keynote speaker, said, "The sad thing about World War II was not the use of the atomic bomb but that we thought it was the war to end all wars."

"American servicemen have an indomitable spirit — they cannot be beaten."

Quincy Sun publisher Henry Bosworth, a World War II Navy veteran and keynote speaker, paid tribute to those who served overseas during the war and those who served on the homeland.

"This nation was never so united," he said. "Patriotism was never so high. It has been called 'Our Finest Hour.' And to those of us who were there — it was!" Women in uniform and those in overalls at Fore River shipyard and defense plants — "the Rosies the Riveters and the Wendies the Welders" — all played key roles in the war effort, he said.

He noted that 255 from Quincy — some just 18 and 19 years old who had grown up in the Great Depression and dropped out of high school into the Great War — were among those killed in combat.

Bosworth disagreed with the vote of the U.S. Supreme Court that allows the American flag to be burned as a freedom of expression.

"I don't remember any World War II veterans saying burning the flag was one of the freedoms they were fighting for," he said. "To them — and other veterans — burning the flag is an abuse. Period."

"Those of us who were fortunate to come home from World War II came home thinking it was the war to end all wars.

"We never dreamed that Korea, Vietnam, the Persian Gulf, Afghanistan — and terrorism on our own soil were not by Iraq."

Bosworth, whose ship the destroyer USS Cowell served with the aircraft carrier task forces in the Pacific, took issue with revisionists who say the U.S. should not have used the atomic bomb but should have invaded Japan instead.

Bosworth said the Japanese were ready to die to defend their homeland and that an invasion would have been a costly loss of lives on both sides.

He said revisionists seldom mention the attack on Pearl Harbor and all the island fighting in the Pacific.

"Do they ever think of the 2,403 killed and 1,180 wounded in the sneak attack," he asked.

"Do they ever think of the 1,177 sailors still entombed in the battleship USS Arizona at the bottom of Pearl Harbor? Nearly 61 years in a watery grave.

"Do they ever think of the Gold Star Mothers whose young sons never came home?

"The sad part of World War II was not the use of the atomic bomb, but that it did not end all wars as we thought it would.

"If there hadn't been an attack at Pearl Harbor, there would not have been an atomic bomb in Japan."

Bosworth said the new war on terrorism may be a long, long one but if we unite as we did in World War II, this war will be won, too.

He said patriotism faded after World War II but there has been an encouraging resurgence since Sept. 11, 2001.

"We should never let patriotism become like a fashion fad — in style one year. And out the next," he said.

Conway's Relocation Connections Give Local Customers National Strength

While staying focused on local roots, Jack Conway & Co. recently showcased its national strength at several real estate industry conferences.

Conway's Relocation staff participated in panel discussions at a recent RELO conference in Chicago. Maureen McCaffrey, president of Corporate Services, represented the company at a three-day Employee Relocation Council global management symposium in Boston.

Conway Relocation counselors also attended a regional RELO conference in Pearl River, N.Y. that celebrated the strength of independent companies.

Susan Haigh and Jill Evans represented Conway at the event, which was attended by more than 200 fellow RELO members from the region. Haigh and Evans said the conference's theme - "Declaration of Independents" - mirrored Conway's continued emphasis on the advantages of dealing with a locally owned, independent real estate company.

McCaffrey said the conferences are important steps in forging links among RELO members across the country. Establishing personal relationships allows Conway's relocation counselors to better serve incoming customers and have confidence that people moving outside of New England will be referred to highly qualified realty companies at their destination.

At the RELO conference in Chicago, Evans conducted a roundtable discussion on affinity programs, with a focus on Conway's successful senior-specialist designation. Evans, director of Conway At Your Service, also participated in a panel discussion on marketing, displaying

EPA Ranks Indoor Air Quality Among Top Five Environmental Risks

Checklist For Improving Air Quality

(NAPS) — Most Americans consider their home a sanctuary — a place to raise their children, entertain friends and enjoy life. Unfortunately, poor indoor air quality can make a home a lot less livable.

According to the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), the air inside homes may be up to five times more polluted than the air outside. Moreover, the EPA ranks poor indoor air quality among the top five environmental risks.

The Asthma and Allergy Foundation of America (AAFA) says maintaining clean indoor air is important because, at certain times of the year, people spend as much as 90 percent of their time indoors. Therefore, homeowners need to be aware of the health hazards that lurk within the walls of their seemingly safe haven.

Because indoor air is recycled, it traps pollutants, such as dust mites, pet dander, dirt particles, bioaerosols, odors and chemicals. The resulting poor indoor air quality can cause headaches, nausea and lethargy, and can contribute to the development of chronic respiratory disease.

Lennox Industries, a global leader in air conditioning and heating systems that offers a complete line of indoor air quality products, and AAFA believe that environmental and lifestyle changes can make a tremendous difference in reducing allergy symptoms and providing relief for millions of sufferers.

Lennox Industries has developed simple tips to help even severe sufferers clear the air, including:

Tackle Toxins

Eliminating individual sources of pollution or reducing their emissions is one way to alleviate poor indoor air quality. Here's how:

- Safely store all household products. To keep household chemicals, such as cleaning agents, pesticides, paints and other toxic substances, from releasing hazardous fumes throughout the inside of a home, keep all substances away from return air vents where the toxic fumes might be drawn in and circulated through the home.
- Install carbon monoxide detectors along with smoke detectors throughout the home. These types of equipment will help detect this unwanted toxin from roaming through the home.
- Hire a professional heating and cooling service company to inspect heating and ventilation systems at least once a year. A routine maintenance checkup, along with a proper draft and pressurization analysis of a home, will uncover potential sources of pollution as well as other repairs that are needed.

Pure-ify Your Home
Another way to reduce indoor air pollutants is to dilute their concentration by destroying pollutants or by circulating fresh outdoor air through the home.

- Ventilate the air inside your home with fresh, filtered outside air. Use a quality ventilation system to help remove the particles and bioaerosols that can trigger allergies.
- Clean indoor air further with electric air cleaners and high-efficiency air filters that capture even smaller particles. For example, the new Lennox air purification system has been proven to clean the air inside homes better than any other system you can buy, effectively removing all classes of contaminants and destroying odors and chemicals.

- Monitor humidity and temperature levels. Install humidifiers, such as the new Healthy Climate Power and By-Pass Humidifier by Lennox, and thermostats to improve air quality and enhance comfort. Regulating moisture levels and temperatures helps reduce concentrations of particles and bioaerosols.

• Install exhaust fans in bathrooms and kitchens. Fans in these vulnerable areas can help remove contaminants directly from the room and also increase the circulation of outdoor air.

Make Keeping Clean A Routine

A regular cleaning schedule will help keep pollen, dust and unwanted particles from becoming a problem. Consider these tips:

- Vacuum at least once or twice a week. Use a vacuum cleaner with HEPA (high efficiency particulate air) filter.
- Dust surfaces regularly. Consider wearing a filtered face mask while doing housework, since cleaning tends to stir up dust and particles.

• Regularly wash all bed linens and stuffed toys. To kill dust mites, wash everything in hot water, at least 130 degrees Fahrenheit.

For general information on asthma and allergies, contact AAFA at 1-800-7-ASTHMA or visit www.aaafa.org. The Asthma and Allergy Foundation of America does not endorse any commercial products.

Presidents Make 'Passing' Grade In 29-0 Win

By CHRIS POISSON

Head coach Bob Noble knew there was going to be a time when the Quincy High School football team would need its passing attack to win a game.

After weeks of relying on J.J. Niamkey and the ground game, senior quarterback Kevin O'Connell emerged from behind the scenes to play the lead role in Quincy's 29-0 win over Dennis-Yarmouth last Friday night at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

O'Connell turned in another precise performance, completing 8-of-12 passes for 141 yards with three touchdowns and no interceptions. After a somewhat slow start this year, he now has connected on 50 of 85 pass attempts (59 percent) for 756 yards, nine touchdowns and, amazingly, zero interceptions.

"He is as good a quarterback as anyone in this league," Noble said. "It was his best game of the season. He has played extremely well the last five games. As I said before, we knew there was going to be a time when we were going to have to pass the ball."

In the previous four games O'Connell had been very efficient but was not called upon to carry the team on his strong right arm. Against D-

Y, though, the Presidents needed their signal-caller to be the man as the Dolphins committed to stuffing their running game. And they did just that, holding the explosive Niamkey to 28 yards on 12 carries.

"We're versatile enough offensively," Noble said. "They did a good job of stopping our running game as they committed eight, nine and 10 to the box. Kevin has the ability to throw the football and this game speaks for itself."

"Offensively, I think we as good as anyone," Noble added. "We've scored 28 points or more in five of our last six games. We feel we can score against anyone."

And Quincy (5-3 overall, 3-2 Atlantic Coast League) will need to score tomorrow (Friday) night when it heads to Plymouth North, which has yielded only 27 points this season. The Blue Eagles (8-0, 4-0) knocked off Whitman-Hanson last week to clinch the league's Division 3 Super Bowl playoff berth and a share of the league championship.

"We're 5-3 but we're better than 5-3," said Noble, alluding to the two overtime defeats and a four-point loss to Sandwich. "Our goal now is to finish 7-3."

Quincy couldn't have asked for a better start to the game. On the first play from scrimmage, O'Connell rolled right and hit senior wide receiver Shawn Munchbach in stride along the sideline for a 62-yard TD pass and a 6-0 lead as the extra point failed.

"That set the tone for the rest of the game," Noble said.

On the ensuing possession, D-Y marched 60 yards as Quincy's defense couldn't stop the run — similar to its previous game against Sandwich when it allowed 228 yards to tailback Brian Judge. However, on fourth-and-1 at the Quincy 20 the Presidents stuffed junior Miguel Robinson for no gain.

From there, the defense played like its former self as it forced D-Y to turn the ball over on downs two more times. On D-Y's second series, in which it got the ball at the Quincy 29 after a short punt and a solid return, Quincy stopped the Dolphins on a fourth-and-6 play at the 8.

"Initially they did a good job of running the football," Noble said. "But when they got deep in our territory, the defense dug in deep."

"Defensively, we were embarrassed by Sandwich in our last game," he added. "You have to give them a lot of credit, but we knew we were a much better defensive team than that."

City, Youth Baseball Present $15,000 To Jimmy Fund

Spectators and participants in the second annual Jimmy Fund Baseball Tournament enjoyed another extremely successful event.

The Quincy Youth Baseball League and the city of Quincy recently presented the Jimmy Fund with a check for $15,000 raised by the event.

The tournament played in honor of Patrick White, an 11-year-old player in the Quincy Youth Baseball League who has battled Rhabdomyosarcoma, a form of tissue cancer, for the past three years.

"The Jimmy Fund Baseball Tournament is one of the most remarkable fund-raisers that Quincy supports," said Mayor William Phelan. "There is no better representative for the Jimmy Fund in Quincy than Patrick White, whose courage and determination set an example for all. I am hopeful that the success of this tournament in Quincy will continue to grow in the years to come."

Event co-chairpersons Cindy Ouellette and Jane Warwick lent invaluable assistance in making the tournament a success. Also helping to make the event a reality were "Home Run Sponsors": South Shore Co-operative Bank, Krokidas & Bluestein LLP and Healthcare Financial, Inc.

This year's proceeds brings the two-year total to $24,000. Funds raised will benefit the Pediatric Solid Tumor Program within Dana-Farber/Children's Hospital Cancer Care services, offering comprehensive, multidisciplinary diagnosis, treatment, consultation services and long-term follow-up care for pediatric and adolescent patients with any type of solid tumor.

Contributions in support of next year's fund-raiser may be sent to South Shore Co-operative Bank, 30 Franklin St., Quincy, MA 02169. Checks should be made payable to the Jimmy Fund/QYBL Tournament.

For individuals interested in sponsoring or volunteering, contact Bob Griffin, tournament director, at 617-472-4811.

Red Raiders Aiming For .500

By CHRIS POISSON

It's simple: The North Quincy High School football team is not yet at the same level of Bridgewater-Raynham.

That was evident last Saturday afternoon as the host Trojans, a perennial Old Colony League power who has been to the Super Bowl the past two years, whipped the Red Raiders, 41-8.

North Quincy, though, will not let the defeat, which snapped a three-game winning streak, diminish what it has accomplished so far this season.

"B-R is a very good team. That's obvious," said second-year head coach Tony Green. "In the development of our program, we're not at the B-R level yet. We're focusing on not comparing ourselves to B-R but at how far we've progressed. The kids and the coaching staff are happy with how far we've come since last year and the start of training camp."

North Quincy (4-5 overall, 3-4 OCL) will look to get back to .500 Saturday afternoon at 1:30 when it travels to North Andover

"North Andover is a good team," Green said. "They've been losing a few games lately, but they've been close games. We've scouted them. They're a very talented team, an aggressive team."

"It would be nice to get back to .500," Green added. "The kids have put a lot of work into it. A .500 season would be the exclamation for the seniors. North Quincy High is deep in tradition, and I told the kids they're making their own page in the North Quincy archives because they've stepped up and changed the direction of the program."

After three straight victories — the latest a rousing, 26-25 comeback thriller over Silver Lake — the game against B-R had all the makings of a letdown. Still, the Red Raiders had played league-leader Barnstable to a one-point loss, so maybe they could pull off an upset.

Not a chance.

"The B-R game almost inevitably was going to be a setback," Green said.

The Trojans, led by quarterback Matt Peabody's four touchdown passes, led 34-0 before North Quincy finally got on the board in the third quarter.

Senior quarterback Kevin Holleran fired a 30-yard TD pass to senior tight end Matt Francis and followed with a 2-point conversion pass to senior splitend Rob Mooney.

Francis now has six touchdown receptions this season, placing him third overall in Division 1.

GOING TO EXTREMES

If you think you drive your vehicle within "normal driving" parameters, when considering oil change intervals, be aware that winter temperatures and the cycling between extremes of cold and heat constitute extreme operating conditions. Oil gets contaminated and the additive package breaks down more rapidly under these conditions. If you want to get the longest life out of your engine, change the oil and filter after months of winter harshness. Dirty oil does not lubricate well, and contaminants can quickly gunk up small orifices, such as those in a late-model vehicle's crankcase ventilation system, leading to all sorts of problems. This can be avoided simply by having your vehicle's engine oil changed at frequent intervals. It pays to follow your car's manufacturer's recommendations for routine maintenance, including changing the engine oil. LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO should be your full service auto care center for most every system in your car. If you need us to look at any system in your car or truck our ASE Certified service technicians have the skills to handle it. You'll find us located at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). We're "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Hours: Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm.

11-Year-Old Travel Team Wins Suburban Title

The Quincy Youth Baseball 11-Year-Old Travel team recently completed a successful season by finishing in first place in the Suburban League and capturing the league championship.

Quincy (27-6 overall, 9-1 league) won four straight games in the league playoffs, capped by an 18-4 thrashing of defending champion Canton. It also competed in the Jimmy Fund, Sandwich, Mansfield and Foxboro tournaments, playing sometimes three games a day.

Quincy won five straight tough games in the Foxboro tournament to emerge on top, but ran out of gas as it finished second in the Mansfield and Sandwich tournaments.

Led by manager Mark Vialpando and coaches Andy Hollatz and Rick LeBel, the team was well-balanced with strong pitching and defense and clutch hitting. The starting pitching was led by Scott Warwick and Mike LeBel, who provided the bulk of the early season innings until ace Mike Horgan returned.

Horgan was unhittable late in the season, leading the team to the championship. Warwick pitched a one-hitter in the opening game of the league playoffs against Braintree, losing the no-no in the last inning. LeBel dominated a strong Hyde Park team, 7-1.

Pat White and Joe Vialpando were always ready to shut down the opposition when the starters tired. White also contributed a complete-game victory against South Boston and Vialpando blanked arch-rival Middleboro after Warwick tired in a close, 3-0 tourney win. Alex Tragellis also provided strong relief innings and pitched a complete-game against Scituate in the Jimmy Fund tourney.

Offensively, home run hitters Vialpando and Horgan cleaned the bases of set-up guys Jason Stearns, Chris Brown and LeBel. Stearns scored the winning run in extra innings of a thrilling victory over Hanover in the league playoffs.

The defense was led by Kevin Mahoney at second base, LeBel at shortstop and Warwick at third base. Mahoney's defense saved the bacon more than once as he made sensational plays all year long.

A strong outfield of Tragellis, Brown, Dave Griffin and Alex Hollatz backed them up. Handling the pitching staff behind home plate were Vialpando, strong-armed Kevin Chenette and Dan Richards, who provided the game-winning hit to reach the final of the Sandwich tourney.

Soccer Boosters Host Quincy High Alumni Soccer Game

Alumni soccer players from Quincy High School recently took on the boys' varsity team in an exhibition game hosted by the QHS Soccer Booster Club.

The alumni team, which had players from 1976 to 2002, proved it was still in shape but fell, 2-1, to its younger counterparts on a cold, wet and dreary day.

In the end, though, the real winners were all involved, who demonstrated school spirit doesn't disappear after graduation.

The game featured opposing brothers as well as a father-son duo that created some one-on-one confrontations.

Alumni team members included: Jared Downey, Andy Smith, Tony Monaco, Bill Marchand, Andrew Smith, Peter Keenan, Ed Smith, Bard Hajrizaj, Michael Berry, Jim Sullivan and Donato Cardarelli.

ALUMNI SOCCER PLAYERS (purple uniforms) from Quincy High School recently played the boys' varsity team (blue uniforms) in a scrimmage hosted by the QHS Soccer Booster Club.

Pee Wee C Travel Hockey Wins 2

The Quincy Pee Wee C travel hockey team won two of three games last week.

Sponsored by North Quincy Billiards and RJB International, Quincy stands at 4-2 in the Greater Boston Youth Hockey League.

Seamus McKenna, James

Flaherty and Evan Verhault scored in a win over Hyde Park, while Paul Reardon netted a pair of goals and McKenna added one in a loss to South Boston.

In a 9-0 victory over Dorchester, Paul Blaser exploded for a hat trick.

McKenna and Kevin McDonagh each scored two goals and Matt Sullivan and Zach Helfrich had one apiece.

Goalies Jon Savage and Matt Grady were outstanding as they combined for the shutout.

Presidents Shut Out Dennis-Yarmouth

Senior defensive ends Steve Ekunseitan and Anthony Boyle and senior defensive back Bob Ritchie, who came close to two interceptions, turned in strong outings.

Late in the half, O'Connell also did some damage with his legs, scrambling for 36 yards on third-and-4 to the D-Y 11-yard line. Two plays later, he tossed a beautiful fade to Munchbach in the right corner for a 12-yard TD pass with 38 seconds left. Quincy missed the 2-point conversion and led 12-0 at the half.

In the second half, the Dolphins fumbled on the opening possession and junior Roger Palermo recovered the ball for Quincy at the D-Y 44. The Presidents drove to the 19, with O'Connell completing two third-down passes for first downs, before they stalled and senior Thiago Goes booted a 36-yard field goal for a 15-0 lead with 2:09 left in the quarter.

O'Connell and the starters called it a day with 7:45 left in the game after O'Connell hit senior Matt Hodges for a 13-yard TD pass and a 22-0 lead. On the drive, Munchbach tossed a 27-yard option pass to Boyle for a first down.

The Presidents added their final touchdown when junior John Banks darted around left end for a 45-yard score with 1:56 remaining.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

How young a person are you? Are you a tired 30-year-old or a vibrant 70-year-old? A wise person once said that age is not measured by years.

Nature does not equally distribute energy. Some people are born old and tired while others are going strong at 70.

"Youth is not a time of life; it is a state of mind; it is the temper of the will; a quality of the imagination; a vigor of the emotions; a predominance of courage over timidity. Nobody grows old by merely living a number of years; people grow old only by deserting their ideals. Years wrinkle the skin, but to give up enthusiasm wrinkles the soul. Worry, doubt, self-distrust, fear, and despair are the long, long years of aging. Whether seventy or sixteen, there is in every being's heart the love of wonder, the sweet amazement at the stars and the star-like things and thoughts, the unfailing child-like appetite for what is next, and the joy and the game of life. You are as young as your hope, as old as your despair. So long as your heart receives messages of beauty, cheer, courage, grandeur and power from the earth, from man and from the Infinite, so long you are young."

Quincy Man Among First For Handicapped 'Cycle Plates

Vincent "Vinnie" Judeikis of Packards Lane, Quincy, has a serious back condition, a degenerative disc disease, spinal arthritis, curvature of the spine and bone spurs.

He has a handicapped placard for his car that allows him to park in a reserved space up front when he goes shopping at a mall or eating out at a restaurant.

But when he was riding his favorite vehicle, his motorcycle, he had to go to the end of the line and compete for space with able-bodied drivers and walk long distances.

All that came to an end the other day when Judeikis received one of the first handicapped plates issued by the Commonwealth under a new bill signed into law last month.

"I have a handicapped placard for my car and often become very frustrated when I am forced to park elsewhere when riding my bike, often quite a distance from where I need to be," he said.

"Now, thanks to the MMA, the Legislature and the Registry, I have that access with my bike."

MMA stand for the Massachusetts Motorcycle Association, which lobbied long and hard for the bill, supported by Sen. Michael Morrissey and Rep. Bruce Ayers of Quincy.

"The Joint Committee on Public Safety Kick started this equity bill with the MMA last year, after hearing testimony from several handicapped citizens who ride motorcycles yet couldn't have equal access parking," said Jimi Ricci, chairman of the MMA.

Judeikis was one of three bike riders to receive the first plates from Steve Sebestyen, Deputy Registrar of Motor Vehicles. He was issued "HP 103" with the International Symbol of Access affixed to it.

"The Registry has cross-matched existing handicapped plates with motorcycle registrations. More than 900 riders qualify for these plates," said Paul Cote, the MMA's legislative director.

"Hopefully, it will show others with medical impairments they too can ride a motorcycle and enjoy the wind in their face."

The Registry will be mailing the 900 eligible handicapped riders, advising them that the special plates are now available to make life a little easier for them.

Cote theorized that the handicapped were ignored when the state first issued handicapped plate in 1978 because they had a preconceived opinion that a person with a handicap couldn't ride a motorcycle.

"However," he said, "to those with some handicap, riding a motorcycle is one of their greatest freedoms."

Falco: 'Dragnet Days' Gone From Police Dept.

By TOM HENSHAW

When Bill Falco joined the Quincy Police force in 1971, it was a quasi-military organization, concerned more with law and order than in service to the people.

"The old days of the Dragnet-type of policeman . . . just answer the call and 'what are the facts, ma'am?' . . . those days are gone," said Falco, newly minted as the city's 14th police chief.

POLICE CHIEF

"We're interested now in what led up to the situation we're dealing with.

"The biggest change is that young people of today are better trained, more highly educated on the average. They're better equipped to deal with social problems. We weren't trained for it in the '70s.

Council Has Questions

Phelan Says New QHS 'On Track'

Some city councilors expressed disappointment and frustration Monday night with what they perceived to be a lack of progress in the city's plan to build a new high school at Faxon Field and convert the existing Quincy High School into a new Central Middle School.

But Mayor William Phelan, who is also chairman of the School Committee, said he failed to see what the Council was upset about.

"The School Committee voted last year to site the new high school on Faxon Field and until we're told we can't do that we are moving forward," he said.

"The plans to build it are on schedule. And the state has assured us in writing that we will get the 90 per cent reimbursement."

Councilors got virtually the same answers when they questioned School Supt. Dr.

Richard DeCristofaro, DPW Commissioner Jay Fink and School Committee woman Jo Ann Bragg on the speed at which the city has moved, particularly in obtaining the necessary permits.

DeCristofaro said the city is on track to receive its 90 per cent reimbursement and Phelan said he has a letter from the state Department of Education assuring him that the city is in line to receive the reimbursement.

"The issue is not will we get the 90 per cent, but when," said the Mayor.

Nominations Open For Sun 'Citizen Of Year'

Nominations are now open for The Quincy Sun's 18th annual "Citizen of the Year" award.

Established in 1985, the award recognizes an individual for outstanding community service or a special achievement.

Last year, Henry (Hank)

Bradley, director of Quincy Veterans' Services, was honored for his compassion, dedication, commitment and humility as veterans' services director and for his volunteer work for many civic and charitable causes.

Bradley was selected from among 25 nominees submitted by Sun readers. A panel of judges representing a cross-section of the community made the final decision.

Again this year, Sun readers may nominate the person they feel is the most deserving of the award.

A nomination ballot to help the selection process

After nominations close Tuesday, Dec. 31, a judging panel will be selected to make the final choice from nominations submitted.

Coughlin's Battle Continues

Electronic Brakes To Halt Abandoned Shopping Carts?

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin's battle against pesky abandoned shopping carts goes on.

Coughlin, who zeroed in on the problem last month, renewed his campaign against the carts Monday night.

And to accent the matter, he wheeled into the council chamber, as evidence, a shopping cart he said was abandoned in his own yard.

Coughlin at an Ordinance Committee meeting suggested a possible solution to curtailing the abandoning or theft of shopping carts in the city, electronic brakes.

Electronic braking systems for carts could be used to prevent them from leaving the premises of a supermarket or other store, he said.

But Charles A. Sweetser, Jr., president of the Carriage Trade Service Company which retrieves abandoned carts for the city, thought electronic brakes might not be the cure-all to the problem.

The mechanism can break down, he said. And the braking system causes the carts to come to a sudden stop, which can be dangerous to those using them.

The braking system on a cart would be engaged if the car passes over or comes close to an electronic surveillance system, Sweetser said.

Coughlin said his proposal is "flexible." And later, at the regular council meeting, introduced a four-page proposal ordinance to control abandoned shopping carts. The Ordinance Committee will study it.

Mark DePasquale, manager of the Stop & Shop supermarket on Newport Avenue, said that store loses approximately 100 carts a week.

Many customers, he said, do not have transportation and choose to walk home with their shopping in the cart.

Coughlin said stores must clamp down on abandoned shopping carts, calling them "eyesores" and "safety hazards."

Merchants must take a more proactive approach in dealing with the problem, he said.

Abutter Holds Up Lodging House Transfer

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

When the License Board after nearly two hours of discussion was about to grant the transfer of lodging house license at 50—52 and 54-56 Spear St. to Caritas Communities, they were stopped in their tracks by an abutter.

First of all, Caritas Communities asked for the transfer of the property presently owned by Madden Properties

Nancy Jolly who lives on Woodward Ave., questioned whether if the original license was worded to the effect that the license could never be transferred.

Taken by surprise by Jolly's request Walter White, director of inspection service, who had earlier made a motion to grant the request called Jolly's action "an highly unusual one," but said he was willing to procure the old records.

Chairman Joseph Shea said he was willing to find the documents while the meeting was still on going to other items in the agenda. Atty. Edward Fleming who even if it were found that it stated on the original license stated that it could never be transferred it was "not an enforceable restriction".

White said he was "confident that the issue of transfer was addressed."

Shea said if it were so stated it would be a "glaring oversight" and something "we would've known after all these years."

Abutters, Nancy Jolly and Mike McKenna, who are members of the Quincy Center Neighborhood Association said they had concerns over the "saturation of rooming houses in the area of Spear St. and the parking situation. Also drug dealing and alcohol problems as mentioned by another abutter.

Shea said the reason for rooming houses all in the same area was the proximity to the T.

Even though Ward 1 Councillor Greg Hanley and Councillor at-large Joseph Finn both supported the transfer, Jolly said Hanley's analysis of an earlier neighborhood meeting was "less than thorough."

Fleming said the rooming house which has about 25 units will be rented to those with low incomes with salaries from $12,000 to 15,000 a year. They include persons in the service industry, security, taxi drivers and those trying to get a college education.

He said they offer safe and affordable housing for the working poor.

Each person, he said would sign a lease for one year and said persons usually end up by staying 2 to 2 1/2 years.

Abutters had asked for a full-time manager as one of the conditions of the transfer. Fleming said Caritas Communities plan to have a live-in manager, which he said is unheard of in any other lodging houses in the city.

At the end of the lengthy meeting, Shea promised to procure the necessary documents calling Jolly's request part of a "freedom of information act" which states the board has 10 days to respond.

Liquor License Suspension Put On Hold By Board

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board issued a three-day suspension to Paddy Barry's at 1574 Hancock St. for serving alcohol after hours on July 28, but will hold the suspension in abeyance for 12 months unless there is another incident.

Capt. Robert Crowley told the board that on the night of July 28, he was in the area at 2:30 a.m. and a light was still on in the bar, with three cars parked outside.

He went into the establishment and found three 16 ounce beers on the bar and three persons at the bar, while the bar tender was counting his receipts.

Atty. James Murray, representing Paddy Barry's said the owner didn't go home the night in question until 2 a.m. thinking all was well and was surprised to hear what had happened..

The owner, Murray said has instructed all employees to count their tips earlier because one of the employees was being taken home by a friend who was at the bar.

Det. Lt. Robert M. Perchard said bars sometimes slip and "tighten up" and likened this to Paddy Barry's who he said had done everything I asked them to" even to the hiring of a door man since the July 28 incident.

Police Chief William Falco, who called for the suspension said it was "clear that they were in violation" and that based on Perchard's analysis, he would hold the suspension pending another incident.

Murray had asked the board to roll back the suspension to July 28, instead of Nov. 19. However, Fire Chief Paul O'Connell said persons have to take responsibility and "do what you're supposed to do." The suspension stands at one year from Nov. 19.

For Elementary Instrumental Teacher, Two High School Teachers, Two Security Aides City Council Approves $100,000 For School Dept.

The City Council Monday voted 7-1 to approve a supplemental appropriation of $100,000 to the School Department to hire an elementary instrumental music teacher, two teachers at the high school level and two security aides.

The elementary music program was cut earlier this year due to budget constraints.

Councillor Francis McCauley, the lone dissenter, said the city's budget problems precluded him from voting in favor of the appropriation.

"We've been pretty generous with the school department," he said. "Don't you think the mayor should put their feet to the fire over there in the school department?" he asked.

McCauley said the city is operating with a very small reserve fund. Currently, that reserve fund is approximately $7 million below acceptable standards for a city budget, he said. Overall, the reserve fund makes up about 1.8 percent of the total budget.

McCauley said Mayor William Phelan was not to blame for the current fiscal situation in Quincy.

"He was dealt a bad hand," McCauley said.

Councillor Joseph Finn and Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin disagreed with McCauley, saying the city should afford the budget request.

NEW CITY AUDITOR Richard Fitzpatrick (center) is sworn in by City Clerk Joseph Shea after being elected by the City Council last week. At left is City Council President Daniel Raymondi. Fitzpatrick, assistant auditor for the past three years, was selected from a field of 16 candidates to succeed Michael McFarland in the $84,000 post. McFarland resigned to become business manager of the Norfolk County Agricultural School in Walpole.

Fitzpatrick Choice As New City Auditor

The City Council last week appointed assistant city auditor Richard Fitzpatrick, 51, to the top post in the department, succeeding Michael McFarland.

Fitzpatrick, with Councilors Douglas Gutro and Joseph Finn voting for James Mullaney, a CPA. Later the vote was made unanimous.

Councillor Frank McCauley did not vote since his son-in-law Steven Higgins, was one of the 16 who applied for the job.

Fitzpatrick, who is a lifelong resident of Quincy, was named to a three-year term. He was controller at Mechanical Design Services of Winchester before accepting the assistant's job in Quincy.

He and his wife, Margaret, have two sons, Mark and Chad, and a daughter, Liz, who works in the Mayor's office.

McFarland resigned the office to become business manager of the Norfolk Agricultural School in Walpole barely a month after being reappointed to a second three year term in the post.

Plan Worked Out To Pay Rolled Over Insurance Debt

The City Council cleared the way for a solution to the city's health insurance problems Monday night by voting unanimously to defer $2.8 million in costs for the city's health care provider, Harvard Pilgrim.

As a result of the vote, the Mayor will enter into a contract with Harvard Pilgrim to pay the provider $350,000 semi-annually over the next four years at 2 per cent interest.

The total cost of the item, including interest, will be about $2.9 million, erasing the last of a nearly $7 million difference between health insurance costs in the Fiscal 2003 budget over Fiscal 2002.

The $2.8 million represents the last of $4.6 million in bills that the city rolled over from one fiscal year to the next before William Phelan took office as mayor.

Much of the deficit was absorbed in the Fiscal 2003 budget but the budget was unable to absorb the $2.8 million.

Kristin Priscella, the Mayor's executive assistant, told the City Council that restructuring the debt would help the city to deal with its present financial woes.

"It is the most responsible way to handle the insurance debt," said Phelan. "We want to do it before we set the tax rate."

The agreement, he said, does not preclude the city from paying off the debt ahead of time.

Cahill Council Seat Election Would Have Cost $40 - 50,000

Quincy taxpayers might want to say "thank you" the next time they see Tim Cahill.

He just saved you between $40,000 and $50,000.

City Clerk Joseph Shea figures that's about how much it would have cost the city for a special election to fill the council at-large seat Cahill

will be leaving to assume his new duties as state treasurer.

Under the city's charter, a special election would have been mandatory if Cahill resigned his seat before the first Monday in January when the council begins its second year. That date would be Jan. 6.

Resigning after Jan. 6 leaves it up to the eight remaining councillors to select his successor.

Cahill put the matter into the hands of the council and eliminated the need or call for a special election by his decision not to resign until he is sworn in as state treasurer Jan. 15.

Shea notes that a special election for just that one seat would cost the city as much as a full ballot city-wide election.

"We would still need 180 election workers at the 30 precincts and 45 police officers," Shea explains.

And another thing:

Quincy now has 52,977 registered voters.

And is required to have a ballot on hand for every single registered voter in case of that miracle election day when every one of them actually votes.

"That means we would have had to print 53,000 ballots just for one contest," says Shea.

The election workers, police detail and ballots would add up to the $40,000 to $50,000 cost.

"It would have been expensive for just that one contest," says Shea.

Especially these days of economic crunch.

IN RECENT TIMES, the runner-up in the previous election has been the choice to fill a council at-large vacancy when it occurred.

But that is not mandatory.

John Keenan, executive secretary to former Mayor James Sheets and now executive director of the Norfolk County Retirement Board, was the runner-up in last year's city election.

But at least two others are "campaigning" for the soon to be vacant seat: Jimmy Liang

and Denis Tardo,

both candidates

last year.

Both have sent letters to the eight councillors who will make the choice informing them of their interest day, Dec. 5, from 6 to 7 p.m. at North Quincy High School.

Teenage Drinking Prevention NQHS Topic For Parents

and requesting that they be considered.

Keenan's vote last year was 10,282 -- 801 behind third seat winner Frank McCauley.

He told The Sun last week he "absolutely" would take the appointment if he were the council's choice and "welcome the opportunity to serve the people of Quincy."

He could serve in the council while holding his county job. Cahill did while county treasurer.

Liang, a Quincy restaurant owner, became the first Asian-American candidate for the city council in Quincy's history when he ran last year.

Making his political debut, he polled 7,173 votes -- 3,109 behind Keenan.

Tardo, a real estate broker and a member of the Quincy Board of Registrars, was one of nine candidates in the preliminary election but failed to win a nomination for the final election.

That preliminary election was held Sept. 11, the day of the terrorist attacks and believed to be a main reason for the low 29 percent voter turnout.

In his letter, Liang says his vote last year made him "the largest vote getter among minority candidates in Quincy's history."

"The City Council," he says, "does not represent the diversity of Quincy. Asians aside, there hasn't been a woman on the council in many years. Making the City Council more diverse will serve to strengthen it and the city it serves."

Tardo, in his letter, notes that in the past an open seat has "ceremoniously" gone to the runner-up in the previous election.

But says "now is the time to appoint a candidate with the ability to bring a new bipartisan and enthusiastic vigor to the council. I believe I am that person."

Brian McNamee, who finished 1,571 votes behind Liang, has not indicated if he is interested in the vacancy.

PAUL HAROLD, who lost a courageous battle to cancer Aug. 12, was honored in memorial Wednesday night at the Charitable Irish Society's sixth annual Silver Key Awards Reception.

The event, at the Union Club on Park St., Boston, recognized him for his "outstanding contributions to the Irish community."

Members of the Silver Key Award honorary committee included Brian Donnelly, former Congressman and ambassador to Trinidad, and state Senator Michael Morrissey, both close friends of Harold's.

For those of us who were close to him, it's still hard to believe that Paul is gone. He was so active and had such a presence wherever he went.

And in his career as a city councillor, state senator and register of deeds, he was always a breath of fresh air on the political scene.

JIM BOTTARY isn't wasting any time in his bid for the Ward 1 city council seat in next year's municipal election.

Bottary officially kicked off his campaign at a party last week at the Quincy Yacht Club with an estimated 200 or more attending.

Main concerns reportedly expressed by those attending: disrepair of city streets especially in Ward 1, reduction of public services and rising property taxes.

Incumbent Greg Hanley will be leaving the seat the end of the next year.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1920s postcard view of Elm Avenue in Wollaston looking southwest towards Hancock St. Phillips St. crosses on the right and the left in the foreground. When this section of Wollaston was divided into house lots the Wollaston Park Land Company laid out this wide avenue and planted double rows of Elm trees on both sides. The roadway was originally the driveway from Hancock St. to Josiah Quincy, Jr.'s mansion that later became the home and site of Eastern Nazarene College. The trolley tracks in the center ran from Hancock St. to West Elm Ave. then turned onto Billings Rd. northwest to Norfolk Downs where they rejoined Hancock St. Today, Quincy's Park Department maintains flower beds of Salvia and Marigolds along the center islands where flowering trees have also been planted.

Thanksgiving At Howard Johnson's A $2.25 Delight

By TOM HENSHAW

The Thanksgiving dinner for $2.25 at the Howard Johnson's Restaurant in the Granite Trust Building on Chestnut St. was a holiday gourmet's delight.

Fresh fruit cup, cream of celery soup, with croutons, roast stuffed young turkey, giblet gravy, cranberry sauce, baked potato, hearts of lettuce with French dressing, sweet mixed pickles, hot rolls and butter, mince pie, coffee, Tokay grapes, apple cider, mixed nuts and after dinner mints.

CURB ON DRINKING

Drinking, particularly among teen-agers and war workers, captured the attention of official Quincy.

The Council for Alcohol Education called on the city to reduce the number of liquor licenses available and control the hours of sales.

"Some bars in Quincy are open 110 hours a week," Mayor Charles A. Ross was told, and the easy access to intoxicating beverages "impairs the efficiency of war workers."

Meanwhile, Capt. George W. Fallon, head of the Quincy Police Criminal Investigation Bureau, promised swift prosecution of bartenders and cafe owners who sell liquor to minors.

Teen-agers who falsify their ages to obtain alcoholic beverages also faced court action.

"There is all together too much drinking and drunkenness in Quincy among teen-aged boys," said Capt. Fallon.

LEBANESE PROTEST

Peter S. Antoon, president of the Quincy Sons of Lebanon, wired Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Sen. David I. Walsh (D-Mass) to protest "hasty and oppressive measures on the part of the French military authorities" in Lebanon.

Praise For Jane Reikard

Our staff at the Office of Constituent Services was delighted to receive the endorsement of John Noonan (letters to the editor, Oct. 24) for our new "Guide to Senior Housing in the City of Quincy." We've mailed out more than 100 hundred copies of the Guide and attribute this response in part to Mr. Noonan's letter.

In listing the members of our staff, however, Mr. Noonan inadvertently left out our most experienced employee: Jane Reikard. Mrs. Reikard has served as the City's Rent Grievance Officer for more than 26 years, providing invaluable assistance to landlords and tenants, and doing so with enormous kindness and warmth. We are proud of our new department and especially proud that Mrs.

Reikard is part of our staff.

Sees Concourse As Road To No Where

Something like the Quincy Center Concourse is a silly idea and always has been. Spending money on a project that serves no good purpose is just plain stupid politics. What are the benefits of a dinky road to no where?

Maralin Manning from the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association apparently believes this bridge to no where as I like to call it will "open up an avenue to the garage. It has to be positive for the area." Mayor William Phelan seems to agree, saying "I see it as an integral part of the downtown development."

It would be one thing if the concourse actually linked Route 3 with Route 3A but it doesn't and probably never will. All you get is this tiny little bridge going over three train tracks from Burgin Parkway to the Parkingway. We have been told that the bridge will have a ribbon cutting sometime real soon. A ribbon cutting for a road to no where? Any pols that show up for this one doesn't deserve to be re-elected. And as far as this bridge being a quarter-mile, whoever said that obviously failed sixth grade math. This bridge is so short that if it had two names like all those bridges in Charlestown, the sign would be longer than the actual bridge.

We spent $6.5 million taxpayer dollars to build a bridge that runs into a garage. As for unclogging the bottleneck at Granite and Hancock Streets, the only thing that will happen is moving the bottleneck a block back at the Parkingway. Joe Mannarino from Quincy 2000 says the bridge will bring shoppers and commuters into downtown Quincy. I think that's nothing but a pipedream.

Mannarino also thinks this concourse or bridge will be necessary for the development of downtown Quincy. Another pipedream.

This bridge will become just another shortcut for commuters passing through Quincy on their way to and from work in Boston. Nothing more, nothing less. I agree with former Mayor Frank McCauley who said it best not long ago. According to him the bridge "ends in a parking lot." A $6.5 million lane to a parking lot hardly deserves a ribbon cutting.

Thanksgiving Day Meat Stuffing

Not wanting to wait for Thanksgiving Day, I decided over the weekend to cook a turkey dinner and used an old recipe for the stuffing—delicious for those who enjoy a meat stuffing.

I made it the night before and then just placed it in the turkey in the morning.

Sausage, Beef Stuffing

- 2 Italian sausages (skinned and chopped)
- or 1/2 pound ground pork (sometimes hard to find)
- about 6 ounces ground beef
- 1 package of Pepperidge Farm stuffing mix

- 3 slices bread (soaked)
- 2 tablespoons Bell's seasoning
- 2 stalks celery (cut up in small pieces)
- 1 small onion (chopped)
- 1/4 cup white cooking wine
- salt and pepper to taste
- enough oil to saute the celery and onions

In the hot oil, saute the celery and onions. Add the pork and beef and the wine, salt and pepper. Cook until meat is almost done. Turn off the heat. Add the soaked stuffing mix and the bread and blend together until mixture looks moist. Add a smidgen of water if dry and some plain breadcrumbs if too moist.

The next day or whenever you stuff it, make sure the stuffing mix is cool. Place the stuffing in the turkey and cover the stuffing cavity with foil. I also place a piece of foil loosely around the thighs to keep them from getting too crisp.

In the roasting pan, add a cup of water, and a stick of margarine or butter. Bake in a 350 degree oven, 20 minutes to the pound and baste every hour. It took me four hours for the 14.11 pound turkey. We waited about an hour before we carved it and it was perfect.

With so many different tastes, I served a variety of veggies including mashed potatoes, sweet potatoes, butternut squash, peas, corn, and broccoli rape. After giving the leftovers to some of the children, my husband and I had just enough for a sandwich the next day. But I made turkey soup too!

P.S. For those who prefer a bread stuffing, the recipe is the same without the meat. Mushrooms are great in place of the meat if you prefer. Happy Thanksgiving!

Patrolmen Contract To Be Signed Today

The city has reached agreement with the Quincy Police Patrol Officers' Association on multi-year contracts that will net patrolmen a one per cent raise this year and a 14 per cent hike spread over three years starting Nov. 15, 2003.

The agreement involves two separate contracts covering a span of four years.

The first is valid from July 1, 2002 to June 30, 2003, and includes the one per cent increase effective Nov. 15, 2002. This contract is less than a full fiscal year and the raise is not retroactive to the beginning.

The second is valid from July 1, 2003, to June 30, 2006, and includes several staggered increases between Nov. 15, 2003, and June 30, 2006, totaling 14 per cent.

Mayor William Phelan said the "long-term contract agreement will benefit the city's financial planning needs and provide stability to the department's staffing requirements."

He said the staggered dates and incremental increases over the four-year period will make any increase per fiscal year less costly to the city budget than a full increase would be.

"I was thoroughly impressed with how responsive the Quincy Police Patrol Officers' Association was to the city's needs and how hard they worked to reach a four-year agreement that benefits both parties," said Phelan.

The agreements, which were reached after summer-long negotiations, were at first rejected by the union membership but were ratified on a second vote without a change in terms.

"The union negotiating team and the membership understood the city's budget position and its constraints and took that into account during the early phases of the contract negotiations," said Phelan.

Another contract item, long sought by the city, is the development of a light duty agreement, under which injured officers can be required to return to work in a light duty capacity if they are cleared by an independent doctor.

Salvation Army Seeks Volunteers To Man Christmas Kettles

The Quincy Salvation Army is seeking volunteers to man its Christmas Kettles this season.

Majors Doug and Linda Jones, commanding officers of the Quincy Corps, 8 Baxter St., said both individuals and groups are needed from now until Dec. 24.

"Money collected at the kettles will benefit those in need in our area not only this Christmas but during the winter season, too," said Major Doug Jones.

Volunteers are asked to take day or part of a day at a kettle.

Churches, civic clubs and companies are asked to volunteer as their own group to man a kettle for a day with two members working a one of two-hour shift together.

Help from individuals is also needed.

In addition to helping those in need at the Christmas season, the Salvation Army assists many throughout the year with emergency food, rent, clothing and utilities, and other needs.

The Salvation Army Quincy Corps also conducts adult day health and pre-school programs and a summer residential camp for youths.

The Salvation Army has been helping those in need in Quincy for more than 100 years.

The Army started collecting money in soup kettles just before the turn of the 19th century following a shipwreck in San Francisco.

The Army was helping and feeding the survivors when the soup kettle and its resources ran dry.

A Salvation Army worker took the empty kettle off the stove and ran out into the street asking passersby to "keep the pot boiling" by making donations.

Today, the Army uses the red kettle on a tripod in 107 countries to collect funds for those in need.

Those wishing to volunteer are asked to call the Quincy Corps at 617-472-2345.

'Strived To Improve The Quality Of Life Within Her Community'

Mini-Park Dedication Honors Thelma Rogers, Beloved Activist

A new mini-park in her beloved Germantown was dedicated Sunday to the late Thelma Rogers as a woman who "strived to improve the quality of life within her community."

Despite a chilling rain and gusty wind, nearly 50 people — officials, friends and family — attended the tribute to the long-time affordable housing advocate and community activist who died at age 71 in 1992 after a battle with cancer.

The Bicknell St. rest-stop park has a flagpole, two benches and a granite marker with a bronze plaque inscribed:

"This flagpole and stone is dedicated to Thelma Rogers, for her many years of service to the families of Snug Harbor Development.

"A woman who has strived to improve the quality of life within her community.

"We here dedicate this repose in her honor for future generations."

The invocation was given by the Rev. M. Alicia Corea, pastor of Houghs Neck Congregational Church. Roses wrapped in plastic to protect them from the rain were placed at the base of the marker.

The marker was part of a former lot, which has been a tribute to Mrs. Rogers but had deteriorated.

Sunday's dedication was sponsored by the Harborview Residents Committee of which Mrs. Rogers was a member.

Following the dedication, those attending gathered in St. Boniface Church Hall where Mrs. Rogers was praised for her community activism by several speakers in an informal setting.

Tributes came from Mayor William Phelan, City Council President Daniel Raymondi, state Rep. Steve Tobin, former City Councilor Leo Kelly, Jack Mather, executive director of the Quincy Housing Authority; James McDonald, chairman of the QHA Board; Jean Kennedy, QHA commissioner; George Shields, chairman of the Harborview Residents Committee; and Rosemary Wahlberg, former executive director of the Quincy Community Action Program.

There was also praise earlier from Fr. Michael Kearney, pastor, at a Mass at St. Boniface in her memory.

Mrs. Rogers, a World War II welder at the Hingham shipyard, was the mother of four daughters and three sons.

A resident of Germantown for 42 years, she was an active member of St. Boniface Church, and served on the boards of the Quincy Community Action Programs, the Quincy Housing Authority, the Quincy Rent Grievance Board, and the Mayor's Task Force on Housing. She was also a member of the legislative committee of the Massachusetts Union of Public Housing Tenants.

A MINI-PARK in Germantown was dedicated Sunday in memory of Thelma Rogers, affordable housing advocate and community activist. The inscription on the marker reads: "This flagpole and stone is dedicated to Thelma Rogers for her many years of service to the families of Snug Harbor Development. A woman who has strived to improve the quality of life within her community. We here dedicate this repose for future generations."

Quarry Hills Project In New Agreement With Residents

A local citizens group has reached a settlement with the Finger Companies under which the Texas-based development corporation will provide additional environmental assurances for a proposed 316-unit Village at Quarry Hills apartment complex in West Quincy.

The agreement was the result of a citizens' appeal by members of the Friends of the Blue Hills and 14 other West Quincy residents from a wetlands permit issued to Finger by the Quincy Conservation Commission.

Under the agreement, Finger will enlarge the storage capacity of the largest wetland on the site to help avoid downstream flooding and will also perform additional groundwater testing before and after construction, which is expected to begin in 2003.

Finger also has agreed to test for an hazardous materials in Cashman's Quarry and remove any materials that place the public at risk. The developer will also build a footpath along the property boundary to provide a link between Cunningham Park in Milton and Granite Rail and Swingle's Quarries in Quincy.

Quarry Hills Associates, who plan to develop a $100 million, 27-hole golf course on adjoining land and sold 16 acres of its 450-acre site to Finger, has agreed to use the $5 million from the sale for the completion of the golf course.

Part of the $5 million sale price will be used for slope stabilization within the project site in order to reduce runoff, which has plagued downstream residents of West Quincy for years. The Associates also agreed that none of the $5 million will be used in construction of the $8 million clubhouse.

The funds from the sale are required to be deposited into an account which is controlled by the city of Quincy to be sure it is not used improperly.

"We're pleased with the outcome and delighted that the issues of runoff, slope stabilization and completion of the Quarry Hills facility are finally being addressed," said Thomas Palmer, a member of the board of the Friends of the Blue Hills.

"Mayor William Phelan and Ward 4 Councilor Bryan Connolly were instrumental in settling this dispute and we are very appreciative of their efforts in our behalf. They provided the necessary leadership during the negotiations that led all the involved parties toward the successful agreement."

Under the agreement, Palmer, who has kept such a close eye on the project for environmental violations that he had been ordered to stay away from it, was now free to visit once a month.

"I'm extremely happy for the citizens of West Quincy, who now have a resolution to this long-standing issue," added Mayor Phelan. "The first priority in any development project like the one at Quarry Hills should be the health and safety of the surrounding residents. I am pleased that it finally appears we will be able to ensure the safety of the community."

"It is very encouraging that all the involved parties have reached a favorable and constructive agreement on this matter and we can proceed with the Finger development and put the proceeds of the sale towards the completion of the Quarry Hills Recreation Complex."

Still pending is a request by the Quarry Hills developers for a two-year lease extension from the city to enable them to seek financing to finish the project. They say they need $20 million to complete the job. The current lease expires at the end of the year.

The hangup is the developer's plan to move the 42,500-square-foot clubhouse from the south side of the property to the north side, where it would be placed between two protected wetlands. The state has decreed the developer needs a new environmental review to cover the move.

Used Car License Hearing Delayed To Dec. 3

Because License Board members did not have a chance to review the request of Mark Brewster doing business as G & M Auto Sales, 30 Liberty St. for a used car license, the hearing was delayed until Dec. 3.

Walter White, director of inspectional services said he wanted to review the conditions set by Ward 4 Councilor Bryan Connolly at a recent neighborhood meeting. And also to ask the traffic engineer about traffic problems in the area.

An abutter complained of cars parked in front of her home on Penn St. and asked the board to limit the hours of operation.

Atty. Steve Colman told the board that the hours would be from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Saturday with no hours of operation on Sundays. He also said that any work done on the cars would stop by 6 p.m. Colman also said that there would be no test driving on that street, but instead would take place on Burgin Pkwy.

The building, which was formerly Bay State Equipment and before that a tile business will be renovated, but not expanded said Brewster.

Chairman Joseph Shea told Brewster that he had to "stick to the number of cars at 40," and not the 50 requested.

Phelan called the timing of reimbursements "a moving target, depending on the legislature. Last year it was $50 million. This year it was $20 million. I'm not willing to say when we will get it but it is there."

Ward 1 Councilor Greg Hanley was concerned about progress in the permitting process, noting that "Weymouth and Milton started the same time we did and they are going forward. We are regressing to a degree."

DeCristofaro said the city has submitted most of the necessary documentation, all except site and construction information. The city has hired a consultant to conduct the environmental site assessment, which is necessary since Faxon Field is classified a wetland.

Fink said the consultant, Camp, Dresser, McKee (CDM), should finish the work some time this week. CDM says we are sure to get the permits, said Phelan.

"We are told by experts that we will get the permits necessary to build there," he said.

Ward 3 Councilor Kevin Coughlin said that he has made inquiries into the reimbursement process and found that 49 other schools in Massachusetts are on the reimbursement list but not Quincy because the permitting process has not been completed.

Fink said it could take up to two more years before the Army Corps of Engineers decides whether to grant a permit to build on the wetland.

Bragg said she was told by state officials that "the reimbursement is still there but the waiting period is getting longer." She said Quincy school officials plan to meet with the state to determine what is left in the submission process.

Coughlin said that schools that were put on the list in 1999 are receiving reimbursements from the state in Fiscal 2003 and the slow permit process and the state's fiscal crisis means that Quincy could wait another 10 or 12 years to receive reimbursement.

Since fewer cities are eligible for the 90 per cent reimbursement, said Bragg, Quincy may not have to wait 10 or 12 years. DeCristofaro agreed that Coughlin's assessment might be too high.

The overall school plan has been to build the new high school, move the students in, renovate the old high school and move in Central Middle School students, then move the Sterling Middle School students into Central while Sterling is being rehabbed.

Councilor Hanley was particularly displeased with the failure of the School Department to begin renovations on the Sterling Middle School.

DeCristofaro said he plans to meet with state officials and find out whether the 90 per cent reimbursement would be jeopardized if the city moved forward with renovations to Sterling during the summer.

Consider Hiring A Qualified, Licensed Professional For Electrical Work

(NAPS) — The Electrical Safety Foundation International (ESFI) cautions homeowners to think twice about doing their own electrical work. If you don't know what you're doing, consider hiring a qualified, licensed electrician.

The group offers consumers these tips for choosing a qualified electrical contractor:

- Check the phone book, ask friends and family, or call the Better Business Bureau for names of contractors. Beware of door knock-ers — most reputable companies don't need to go door-to-door for work.

- Interview before you hire. Are the contractors certified, licensed, bonded and insured? Insurance should include property damage and workers compensation coverage. Are they members of a national or regional trade association?

- Get estimates from two or three contractors — over the phone for small jobs, in person and with an hourly rate for larger jobs.

- Find out what kind of work the contractors do. Large or small jobs? Residential or commercial?

- Will a permit be required? It should be under the contractor's name, not yours, and posted at the job site.

- Get references from other homeowners and ask about their satisfaction with the work done.

- Electricians generally do not repair holes cut or drilled in walls, trenches dug or landscaping that is disturbed in the course of the job. Know in advance what work will be left to be done after your electrical job.

QUICK AND EFFECTIVE

If a listing does not sell within a month or so of coming onto the market, it may be overpriced. If so, this may be a costly error. Overpriced homes, when they do sell, often sell for less than they would have if they had been priced right initially. Thus, proper pricing is perhaps the most critical factor affecting the time it takes a listing to sell. A listing is most marketable when it is new on the market. Sellers should seize this as an opportunity to price their homes correctly. If a listing does not sell during the initial marketing effort, the showing activity will likely fall off. Buyers will then turn their attention to new listings. Although the real estate market continues to be strong, sellers are advised to price their homes correctly in order to attract qualified buyers. When CENTRAL REAL ESTATE provides a market analysis, we consider the features of the home, location, and values of comparable homes in the same neighborhood. Our mission is to sell your property quickly and for full market value. To experience our award-winning service, call us at (617) 328-1312, or visit us at 128 Mayor McGrath Highway.

Red Raiders State Volleyball Champs Again

By CHRIS POISSON

Honestly, is there anyone who really thought the North Quincy High School volleyball team wasn't going to capture its sixth overall Division 1 state championship Sunday night?

Even after the Red Raiders fell behind 17-11 in the first game, is there anyone who thought Billerica — Billerica — would be able to pull off the shocking upset? Don't think so.

After all, North Quincy (26-2) really successfully defended its state title last Wednesday in the semifinals with a 3-1 win against undefeated Barnstable, which handed North Quincy its only two losses during the regular season.

Sunday night at Wheaton College in Norton may have been the final game, but it was just a formality. North Quincy soon found its groove after a slow start and completed the sweep, 30-19, 30-20, 30-20, for its third championship in the past four years.

"Relatively easy games," said head coach Jim Rendle the next morning. "The superior match of the tournament was against Barnstable in the semifinals. That was the big match."

For the eight seniors, they could not have asked for a better ending to their remarkable careers. In their three years as varsity starters, they compiled a 75-5 overall record and notched the program's second back-to-back championship.

If you go back to 1999, you can trace this group's rise to prominence. As freshmen, they watched from the bench and saw how a championship was won as the upperclassmen knocked off Dracut to end a seven-year title drought.

As sophomores, they finished 23-3 in what was considered a rebuilding year. Although they lost to Newton North in the Division 1 Central final, they gained valuable tournament experience.

Last year, they turned all that information and experience into arguably the greatest season in school history. They finished with a perfect 26-0 record, lost only two games, and ousted Barnstable for the championship.

And now Makini Thompson, Krystle Neves, Casey Lorman, Shannon Desmond, Julia McGunigle, Kathleen McCarthy, Kristen DiMattio and Emily Haskins have done it again.

"This is a pretty dominant group of athletes," Rendle said.

After getting down 17-11 in the first game, Thompson, a 6-foot 2-inch middle blocker headed to Division 1 powerhouse Long Beach State in California next fall, came into the game and sparked the team with 11 kills as the Red Raiders scored 19 of the next 21 points.

North Quincy breezed through the next two games. In the final game, Neves sealed the victory with five consecutive aces late in the SENIOR MAKINI THOMPSON (center) signs a letter of intent last week to continue her volleyball career at Division 1 powerhouse Long Beach State in California. Thompson, a 6-foot 2-inch middle blocker, and the seven other seniors wrapped up their high school careers at North Quincy Sunday night with their second state championship in a row. game.

Thompson finished with 20 kills and Neves, the other big hitter, totaled 12. Although they attract the attention, it was defense and unselfishness that propelled North Quincy to the top.

Lorman and Desmond each recorded 25 digs and McGunigle added 22. McCarthy, a setter who received all-state honors for the second straight year, tallied 23 assists and nine digs.

"We got the ball to our big hitters," Rendle said. "I was pleased with our defense and passing. Lorman, Desmond, McGunigle and McCarthy didn't let the ball hit the floor. We got major contributions from all our seniors down the stretch and that made us a balanced team."

"I was very pleased with how we came through at the end of the season," he added. "We have a lot of good players, but to be a great team you have to limit roles. We made some kids defensive specialists. Our unselfishness down the stretch made us a much better team."

In the match against Barnstable — the only other team in the state that's worth mentioning when it comes to high school volleyball — North Quincy received a huge momentum and confidence booster by taking the first game, 30-23.

"Winning the first game was huge," Rendle said. "You could see Barnstable trying to pick up their play after that."

As expected, the next three games were extremely close, with North Quincy taking the second game, 30-27, dropping the third game, 28-30, before closing out the match with a 30-28 win.

"It's an intense rivalry," Rendle said. "The level of volleyball between North Quincy and Barnstable is the highest level of volleyball in New England."

Thompson (33 kills, 7 blocks) and Neves (19, 5) powered the offense and added some defense against Barnstable's all-state frontline of Liz Curley and Amanda Clement. McCarthy set them up with an amazing 43 assists. The difference-maker, though, was the back line of Lorman (56 digs), Desmond (50) and DiMattio (30).

"We dug a lot of balls," Rendle said. "We played tremendous defense and that picked us up. It got the offensive players pumped up. We didn't play that level of team defense the first two times we played them."

As for the future, the North Quincy juggernaut didn't come to an end Sunday night. Just like four years ago, another team is waiting in the wings.

The JV and freshman teams went a combined 34-4 this season, and some players will be participating in junior programs, camps and clinics during the off-season.

"All our main players will be graduating so we'll be rebuilding," Rendle said. "Around here we call it reloading. We have a good nucleus of athletes coming up from the JV program. It will take a lot of work for them to make the transition. They'll start going to work today."

"We expect to be good every year."

You Auto Know

by Bill Starkie and Kevin McGroarty

MANAGING JUST FINE

Your late-model vehicle's engine management system utilizes data received from various sensors located throughout the engine. Among other things, these sensors read engine temperature, the amount of oxygen in the exhaust, the amount of air flowing into the injection system, and the position of the throttle. The data are analyzed by the computer and translated into commands called "engine controls." These commands are then sent to various components that use them to make on-board engine adjustments as the vehicle is running. Within milliseconds, adjustments for fuel mixture, ignition timing, engine cooling, and engine idling are being constantly monitored and readjusted to maximize the performance. It takes a person who is both auto mechanic and auto technician to understand this technology.

No matter whether your car is a late model or an older car, our ASE Certified service technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO will do their part in making sure your car is properly maintained for maximum performance and efficiency. We use the AllData CD-ROM based system for the very latest in maintenance and service bulletins for all makes of cars. Here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550), we look forward to meeting you and to giving your car the same level of personal attention we give our own. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

HINT: There is smart software that the auto technician uses to trace the problem in a late-model vehicle by virtue of a self-executing, built-in diagnostic process.

Raiders 'Rocked,' Fall 40-19

By CHRIS POISSON

The North Quincy High School football team seemed to be sitting pretty with a 19-12 lead in the third quarter of last Saturday afternoon's game at North Andover.

Little did it know it was about to be hit by a storm. Not the nor'easter that produced a mix of snow and rain; rather, Matt Rock.

The tailback scored four second-half touchdowns to hand the Red Raiders a 40-19 loss. Rock finished the afternoon with six touchdowns and over 300 yards of total offense.

"It was the Matt Rock show," said head coach Tony Green. "They kept feeding him the ball and we couldn't tackle him in the second half. In the first half we did. It was like a whitewash out there and he was just running all of the place."

After winning three straight games to reach the .500 mark, North Quincy has now dropped two straight. It will carry a 4-6 overall record (3-4 Old Colony League) into the annual Thanksgiving Day game against a strong Quincy team.

After a scoreless first quarter, North Andover grabbed a 6-0 lead in the second quarter on a Rock TD. The Red Raiders answered when senior Chris Dolbear returned the ensuing kickoff 85 yards for a touchdown to tie the game. The kick failed.

North Quincy took a 13-6 lead on a 35-yard TD run by Dolbear. Senior Lindy Lave kicked the extra point. North Andover closed it to 13-12 at the half on Rock's 10-yard TD reception.

In the third quarter, Dolbear scored his third touchdown of the game — and 12th of the season — when he returned a punt 35 yards for a 19-12 advantage.

After that, Rock took over with touchdown runs of 53 yards, 46 yards and 1 yard and an interception return for another score.

Presidents Bow To Plymouth North

The Quincy High School football team discovered first-hand last Friday night just how good the Atlantic Coast League champions are this season.

After falling behind by three touchdowns at Plymouth North (9-0), the Presidents had their chances in the second half but failed to convert on several trips inside the red zone en route to a 28-6 loss.

"There's no question they're the class of the league," said head coach Bob Noble. "It's the first time all year that a team has been superior to us."

Quincy drops to 5-4 overall and finishes league play with a 3-3 mark. Next up is the annual Thanksgiving Day game against an improved North Quincy team.

Although, point-wise, Quincy suffered its worst loss of the season, it was able to move the ball effectively against the Blue Eagles, who have one of the stingiest defenses around having yielded only 33 points.

"We moved the ball against them so I'm encouraged by that," Noble said. "But I feel we can move the ball against anybody."

To beat the best, though, you need to move the ball in the end zone — something Plymouth North did on all three first-half possessions.

Quincy executed an impressive opening drive, marching to the PN 26-yard line before stalling. Senior kicker Thiago Goes attempted a 44-yard field goal, which had plenty of distance but went wide left by a foot.

"Psychologically, that would've been a good boost to start the game," Noble said.

PN scored in the first quarter on tailback Tim Brouillard's 56-yard touchdown run and backfield partner Sean Ketterer plunged in from 2 yards out in the second quarter for a 14-0 lead. Quarterback Greg Borsari fired an 8-yard TD pass to Ryan McLean to make it 21-0 at the half.

In the second half, the Blue Eagles fumbled on their first play on the opening possession and Quincy's Mike Cox recovered at the PN 30. The Presidents, however, wasted an opportunity as they fumbled at the 2.

"That would have put us back in the game," Noble said.

After the defense forced PN to punt deep in its territory, Quincy got the ball back and drove to the PN 14. But that was as far as it would go as a fourth-down pass was batted down in the end zone.

In the fourth quarter, Quincy orchestrated a 12-play scoring drive capped by senior quarterback Kevin O'Connell's 1-yard TD run with about eight minutes left in the game. The extra point failed due to a bad snap.

PN sealed the game on Brouillard's 17-yard TD run. At that point, Noble put in the reserves to avoid any injuries to his starters with the Thanksgiving Day game around the corner.

"We did have some opportunities in the second half," Noble said. "We had the ball in the red zone three times and only scored once.

That was the turning point of the game."

For the second straight game, junior tailback J.J. Niamkey was held in check as he gained only 19 yards on 13 carries. In the win over Dennis-Yarmouth he had only 28 yards on 12 carries. He needs only 21 more yards to reach the 1,000 club.

"We felt it would be difficult to run the ball against Plymouth North," Noble said. "Teams have been gearing up to stop J.J. and in the last two games they've been successful in doing so. That has forced us to pass the ball and we've been successful doing that."

Indeed, O'Connell has been locked in lately. He completed 17 of a season-high 29 attempts for 206 yards and no interceptions. In his first year as a starter, O'Connell, who has completed 58 percent of his passes, has a chance to throw for over 1,000 yards (967) and reach double digits in TD pass (9) — all without tossing an interception.

The Houghs Neck Manets recently captured the Quincy Youth Football championship with a 14-12 victory over defending champion Milton Mistings at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Tailback Brian Sullivan led the way, scoring both touchdowns for the Manets.

Houghs Neck dominated the regular season with a perfect 8-0 record, scoring 182 points and giving up only 32.

"This is the best team I ever coached," said head coach Dan Morrell.

"They came to play every game," said defensive guru Jason Dilks.

five touchdowns and no interceptions. He also starred on defense at outside linebacker.

The Manets' success, though, would not have been possible without the strong play of the offensive and defensive lines. The defensive line recorded 24 sacks, while the offensive line allowed only 4 sacks and opened many holes for the backs.

The lines were led by brothers Steve and Andy Livingstone, center/nose tackle Charlie McGee, Gerard Shea, Diego Arredondo and defensive end Michael Little.

Little was a menace to opposing quarterbacks as he tallied six sacks. He also contributed offensively by making nice catches at tight end.

Houghs Neck also had the soft hands of Tom Conley and Pat Austin at tight end.

Other players who played major roles were defensive backs Teddy Walsh, Matt Healy, Sean McDonald and Paul Oldham.

On the line were Joe McDonald, Paul Carson, Anthony Muise, Axel Chapman, Camron Connor and brothers Sean and Denis Carey.

The Manets plan to have their championship banquet Dec. 7. Also, the Quincy High School football team has invited the Manets to accompany them to the Boston College-Rutgers football game Nov. 30.

Tips For Family Caregivers

By CAROLYN HOUSMAN, LICSW

In any given year, more than 50 million people provide some level of caregiving services to a loved one. That is the equivalent of $257 billion worth of "free" services each year.

Family caregivers support the U.S. health care system by providing more than 80 percent of all home care services. Among the services they provide are nursing support, including wound and medication management, as well as assistance with activities of daily living such as dressing and toileting.

While family caregivers are the major source of long-term care in America, the physical and emotional demands of caring for an elderly loved one can be isolating and stressful.

The Stress Of Caring
The demands of caring for older persons with disabilities can cause health problems, both physically and emotionally.

Interrupted sleep, chronic fatigue, muscle aches and exhaustion are among the most common physical complaints of family caregivers. Additionally, caregiving can generate a wide range of emotions. The primary caregiver is at risk for feeling trapped, isolated or depressed.

The caregiver can even have feelings of anger over the loss of control over their own life, their new role demands and the restrictions on their time and contacts within the community. These feelings can alternate with feelings of guilt for harboring negative feelings about a close family member.

Tips For Family Caregivers

- Choose to take charge of your life. Don't let your loved one's illness or disability always take center stage.
- Remember to be good to yourself. You're doing a very hard job and you deserve some quality time, just for you.

- Watch for signs of depression, and don't delay in getting professional help when you need it.

- Accept other people's offers to help. Suggest specific things they can do for you.

- Educate yourself about your loved one's condition. Information is empowering.

- Be open to technologies and ideas that promote your loved one's independence.

- Trust your instincts.

- Grieve for your losses, then allow yourself to dream new dreams.

- Stand up for your rights as a caregiver and a citizen.

- Seek support from other caregivers or local agencies.

Support For Family Caregivers

In response to the growing need for support for individuals and families caring for an elderly family member, and through a grant from South Shore Elder Services, South Shore Mental Health developed a service called "Caring Connections," which offers support for caregivers of elderly family members.

Unlike support groups, Caring Connections focuses on the specific needs of the individual or family. Services are provided by specially trained mental health clinicians with expertise in gerontology and experience in family dynamics. Referrals for continued community services are available when needed.

For more information about Caring Connections call 617-921-3565.

Housman is program coordinator for Caring Connections of Bayview Associates, a program of South Shore Mental Health. For more information call 617-847-1950.

A Portrait Of Eye Health: Eye Exams Key For The Whole Family

(NAPS)—A recent study showed that 47 percent of Americans 45 and above feared losing their sight more than mental or emotional illness, loss of a limb or loss of hearing. This same group would miss seeing their children or grandchildren more than driving, reading or watching television.

Yet, many of the diseases that have caused legal blindness for more than 900,000 adults over the age of 40 could have been prevented by regular checkups. In order to better prevent common eye diseases, every family member should have a preventative eye health checkup that starts early.

Eye Exams For Children

According to the American Academy of Ophthalmology (AAO), nearly 80 percent of preschoolers have not had their eyes screened for eye diseases such as strabismus (crossed eyes), amblyopia (lazy eye) and refractive errors (nearsightedness, farsightedness and astigmatism). Nearly one-quarter of school-aged children have vision problems. With these statistics in mind, the AAO recommends a child should receive at least one complete eye exam by the age of 5.

Eye Exams For Young And Middle Age Children

Often, younger adults feel that eye problems are not a concern for them. However, vision naturally changes as we get older. Whether it's difficult to read the computer screen or see road signs, many eye problems at this age require prescription glasses or contact lenses. The number of eye doctor visits during this time generally depends on the health of your eyes and your family history of eye diseases. Once you have your eyes examined for the first time, your doctor will recommend how often you should be examined.

Eye Exams For Older Adults

Due to an increased risk of age-related eye diseases, such as macular degeneration, cataracts and glaucoma, adults over age of 50 are encouraged to have yearly eye exams. If fact, macular degeneration, the leading cause of blindness for people over 50, can cause very quick loss of central vision, which impedes daily activities such as recognizing faces, walking, driving a car, reading and watching television. Yet two-thirds of Americans are not familiar with the disease. In the United States alone, there are more than 13 million cases of macular degeneration—that's more cases than cataracts or glaucoma. Many of these diseases are preventable or at least treatable if caught early.

Make sure you and your family keep your vision healthy at every age by scheduling the recommended number of eye exams. If someone you love is over 50, remind them to schedule a yearly eye exam for the best preventative care against age-related eye diseases. Remember it's never too late early to teach your family about safe, healthy eye care.

For more information about macular degeneration or to receive an eye exam pledge card, visit www.amafacts.com or call 800-AMD-4636. For more information on other eye diseases or conditions visit www.nowartisophthalmics.com.

DENTISTRY for the 21st century

by Steven A. Brustlin, D.M.D.

EARLY WARNING

According to the American Dental Association, an increase in sugar consumption among children is causing a rise in tooth decay. With this in mind, parents should make every effort to schedule an appointment with the dentist as soon as the child's first tooth appears. The problem is that a recent survey by the American Academy of Pediatric Dentistry found that 70% of American children start receiving dental care two years too late, most often at age three. As a result, children who might otherwise get their first cavities at age six are now getting cavities before age three. When this happens, a real disservice is being done to the child. As far as dental care goes, the earlier the better.

We recommend a balanced diet for all members of the family. We encourage you to talk to your dentist about oral issues. Your health is our first priority. Preventing dental disease is less costly and more rewarding than correcting the problem. We will show you how to care for your teeth. After all, teaching you how to prevent dental disease is our primary goal. We provide quality, personal care in a comfortable, immaculate, professional environment at 44 Greenleaf Street. Let us help bring out that natural smile. Call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Even before your child's first tooth erupts, take a soft, damp washcloth and gently wipe his or her gums after eating or drinking sugary liquids.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Someone once said that of all subjective blessings, that which most directly makes us happy is a cheerful disposition: for this excellent trait is its own immediate reward. Yes, those who bring sunshine into the lives of others cannot keep it from themselves.

A well known man noted for his cheerfulness was once asked how he managed to keep himself so happy, and he replied that it was not by allowing himself to anticipate the misfortunes which might come to him. He always expected the best, and when unpleasant things came he made the best of them. He tried to see the ludicrous even in mishaps.

"You will find yourself refreshed by the presence of cheerful people. Why not make earnest effort to confer that pleasure on others? You will find half the battle is gained if you never allow yourself to say anything gloomy." ... L.M. Child

Falco: 'Dragnet Days' Gone From Police Dept.

"The biggest difference between the department then and now is that it was more militaristic in the '70s. Now it has become more socially oriented."

"But in the transfer from then to now we've become somewhat more lax. We have to have a happy medium. The theory today is more socially oriented."

"I wouldn't describe today's policeman as more of a social worker. I'd say he or she is just more in tune with servicing the public, more aware of contemporary social problems."

"But we don't want to lose sight of the fact that we still are a semi-military organization."

It is to find that happy medium between the old military and the new social aspects of police work that the 54-year-old Falco has set about reorganizing a department that has been in disarray lately.

"We're going to reorganize the structure of the department which will make for a better line of communication and a more clear cut hierarchy," he said.

"Then it will be clear which person reports to which person and that will increase discipline and make for a better reporting process."

Under the Falco reorganization plan, the department will be divided into two sections.

One is a "line" section, which includes the patrols, the detectives and other divisions, under Capt. Robert Crowley, the second in command. The second is an administrative section under Capt. Vincent Flaherty, in effect the third in command.

"Prior to this, we've had five captains, all of them reporting directly to the chief. Instead of having one to five people, there will be three captains to report directly to Capt. Crowley," said the new chief.

A more noticeable difference between the police forces of 1971 and 2002 is the presence of women officers. Falco is all for it, even though three sex discrimination suits have rocked the Quincy department.

"They came on about three years after I came on and I found no problem," he said. "Of course, there are varying opinions over the years."

"I've always thought that it was a good addition. Currently I believe we have 10 female officers and as we go along into the future hopefully the percentage will increase."

Falco bridges when it is pointed out that his strong points as a superior officer has been on the administrative, financial and negotiating side of the business.

"I think what's been overlooked here is that I have actually spent 21 years in the patrol force," he said. "That hasn't been mentioned by anyone."

"My first 21 years was spent on patrol up to the position of lieutenant. Even though I'm best known for administrative, financial and negotiating, most of my career has been spent in the patrol division."

"I think I'm well rounded."

He was in the patrol division the only time he ever fired his pistol at a miscreant.

"It was about 20 years ago, a person who was wanted for armed robbery," he recalled. "I missed. Very few officers have to fire their guns at people. Very few."

Falco was born and raised in Quincy Point, Harrington Street, to be exact, and lived there most of his life before moving to Weymouth and then to Hingham, where he lives with his wife, Bernice.

They have two grown sons, Anthony, 29, and Christopher, 21.

He joined the Quincy Police Department after a four-year stint in the U. S. Coast Guard, including a tour in Vietnam.

"I first became interested when I got out of the service," he said. "Some friends of mine in the service went on the Boston police force. Listening to them and what they did got me interested."

Falco was in the patrol division when he was promoted to sergeant in 1985 and night lieutenant in 1991 when he moved into Communications & Records as director of Planning & Research and administrative assistant to the chief for Internal Affairs.

In the meantime, while holding down a full-time job as a policeman, he obtained an associate's degree from Quincy Junior College in 1975 and a bachelor's in law enforcement and a master's in public management from Boston State College.

He served as president of the Superior Officers Union from 1987 to 1988 and again from 1991 to 2000. He was promoted to captain in 1991 and became acting chief in May, 2001 after Chief Thomas Frane went on sick leave following heart surgery.

Now, the title is permanent chief. The difference is more than just a word.

"Once you become permanent chief, for those who might not agree with your plans, it now becomes a moot point," he said. "Once you become permanent chief, whatever decision you make, that's the way it's going to be."

"In Quincy, it's the strong chief position. Internally, the chief's decision on operating the department is final. Outside, they may fund it but for the assignments and internal working of the department, the chief is free to do whatever he thinks is best."

As far as Falco knows, he is the first police officer in his family. None of his relatives wore the badge. His father was a laborer. And he will probably be the last.

Sons Anthony and Christopher are in sales.

Phelan: 'This Is A Good Start'

Concourse Bridge Opens, Seen Redevelopment Key

The $6.5 million Quincy Center Concourse — called a “key to downtown redevelopment” by some — officially opened Tuesday with appropriate fanfare.

Mayor William Phelan presided at the ribbon-cutting ceremony which opened to traffic the 200-foot bridge that connects Burgin Parkway to the Parkingway across the MBTA tracks.

“This is a good start on which to build,” said the Mayor. “I see this as a beginning step for the redevelopment of Quincy Center.”

The bridge, planned and replanned, cussed and discussed for years, also is designed to take traffic congestion away from the busy intersections of Granite Street with Burgin Parkway and Hancock Street.

The original plan, formulated years ago, called for the Concourse to extend all the way to Southern Artery but it was scaled back until only the bridge over the tracks remained.

“I am excited to continue with the plans for completion of the road as well as the development and redevelopment of the Hancock Parking Lot and the surrounding area,” said Phelan.

“We are in the process of reviewing and amending our plan for the development of the area.”

Eventually, the Concourse may be extended across the Ross Parkingway to Hancock Street and even beyond, joining the Southern Artery by way of McGrath Highway.

“I hope to see that ultimately occur,” said the Mayor. “But we’re taking this one step at a time. We’re trying to get financing from the state to get to Hancock Street and go on from there.”

Sen. Michael Morrissey; Rep. Joseph Sullivan of Braintree, House chairman of the Joint Committee on Transportation; State Transportation Secretary James Scanlan; and Mass Highway Commissioner John Cogliano were scheduled to join Phelan as speakers at the ribbon-cutting.

The bridge was funded by the state.

QUINCY CENTER Concourse bridge from Burgin Parkway over the MBTA tracks joins the Parkingway, allowing traffic bond for downtown Quincy to avoid the congested intersections of Granite Street with Burgin Parkway and Hancock Street.

23 Residents On IRS Undelivered Tax Refund List

Twenty three local residents are among the 1,650 Massachusetts’ taxpayers that the Internal Revenue Service is looking for with more than $1.4 million in undelivered tax refund checks.

This year, a new Internet feature makes it easier for taxpayers to track down whether they have an undelivered check. The service, which lets people check on the status of refunds online at any time, is available through the “Where’s My Refund” section on the IRS home page at www.irs.gov.

To use the site, taxpayers must enter their Social Security number, their filing status, and the amount of the refund shown on their 2001 tax return. When this information is submitted online, taxpayers see a Web page that shows the status of their refund check. It also gives instructions to resolve problems, whether it’s an undelivered refund check or some other issue.

Taxpayers without Internet access, who think they may be missing a refund check should first check their records or contact their tax preparer, then call the IRS toll-free assistance line at 1-800-829-1040.

Local residents on the undelivered refund list are:

North Quincy
Lewis G. Whittemore,
Paul M. Kelley, Yu Yan and Yanling Xue Ng, Joelle M. Telis.

Quincy
Karen J. Moorhead, Brian P. English, Katie L. Brewster, Tiffany Chan, Xie-Gai Kho, Adam J. Brewster, David A. Aubin, Mary A.

Folan, Ming Sheng and Al Yue Li Chen, Richard A. Bonia, Helan R. Harding, Wollaston
Kenneth L. Pringle.
The “Where’s My Refund?” feature, which can be used to check to status of undelivered refunds, will not be available after early December in order to prepare for the 2003 filing season in January. Beginning Dec. 2, taxpayers can check on refunds by calling the IRS Refund Hotline at 1-800-829-1954.

Not anymore!

Not long ago, some people thought having a Certificate or Passbook Savings Account was hopelessly old-fashioned. Today those former “stock market wizards” — the ones who couldn’t talk about anything else! — have developed a new appreciation for the safety insured bank accounts provide. There’s nothing like the peace of mind that comes with having money in the bank. And that’s a fact that will still be true even when the market starts going up. • On Nov. 28, 1919, American-born Nancy Astor, the first woman ever to sit in the House of Commons, is elected to Parliament with a substantial majority. Lady Astor took the Unionist seat of her husband, Waldorf Astor, who was moving up to an inherited seat in the House of Lords.

• On Nov. 26, 1922, in Egypt's Valley of the Kings, British archaeologists Howard Carter and Lord Carnarvon become the first souls to enter King Tut's tomb in more than 3,000 years. A Time To Remember

(The following was written by Henry Bosworth for the recent reunion of his Quincy High School Class of 1942. Classmates suggested he re-print it for those who were unable to attend the reunion and for members of other classes of that era that might identify with it.)

Sixty years!
W-h-o-o-s-h!
Gone, it almost seems, like 60 minutes.

But the calendar insists 1942 was, indeed, 60 years ago and we can't change that. But we wouldn't really want to because 1942 will always hold a very special meaning for us. A year, and a time, we wouldn't want to have missed.

That June, 496 of us graduated as the Quincy High School Class of 1942. We had our dreams for the future back then. Some, no doubt, came true. Some did not. Dreams are like that.

We apparently were destined from birth to be there in our lifetime for the "big ones."

We grew up in the Great Depression. And stepped out of high school into World War II.

We never thought of that as being anything special but today we are proud to take our place in what has come to be known as "The Greatest Generation."

A year and a time for nostalgic memories we share today with our other classmates, members of the Quincy Trade School Class of 1942.

Let's go back and take a look.

Bing Crosby sang "White Christmas" for the first time. Glenn Miller had us humming "Elmer's Tune." The Andrews Sisters warned "Don't Sit Under The Apple Tree." And Spike Jones was giving Hitler a bad time with "Der Fuehrer's Face."

Movies weren't rated PG, R or X back then. They were either great, good or lousy. There were three great ones that year.

Greer Garson and Jimmy Cagney won Oscars for "Mrs. Miniver" and "Yankee Doodle Dandy." And Humphrey Bogart was in "Casablanca" with Ingrid Bergman and telling her "Here's looking at you, kid."

Television was yet to come. But we had radio and Bob Hope, Jack Benny, Kate Smith, Walter Winchell and Fibber McGee and his cluttered closet.

Gasoline, sugar and coffee were being rationed. Victory gardens sprouted.

Average income was $2,500 but a dollar went a long way. You could buy a three bedroom house for under $4,000, a diamond wedding ring starting at $22 and a washable rayon dress for $3.95. And a first class stamp for three cents.

Franklin D. Roosevelt was in his third term, the only President we could remember. There were only 48 states.

Joe Louis was the heavyweight champ. The Yankees won the pennant again with the Red Sox second, nine games behind. The Braves were still in Boston and finished next to last in the National League.

The street cars were still running in Quincy. Most of the cars parked in front of QHS belonged to the teachers, who were great teachers. The few the kids drove were jalopies with rumble seats. The Pony heard all but said nothing.

A sad 1942 memory: the Coconut Grove nightclub fire that took 491 lives and reached into our class.

If we are now members of "The Greatest Generation" we also belong to "The Last Of The Innocents."

Coke was cola. (You could get a dash of lemon with it at the Alhambra Tea Room). Grass was what you mowed. Pot was something your mother cooked in. Sex meant male or female. And later we got married first and then lived together.

During our time, Lindbergh flew the Atlantic and Neil Armstrong stepped onto the moon. The atomic and computer ages were born. The Berlin Wall went up and came crashing down. A President was assassinated.

We remember Dec. 7, 1941 as a day of infamy but one that sent our patriotism soaring.

Now we have another one: Sept. 11, 2001. And another war, this one the war on terrorism. And with it, thankfully, a resurgence in patriotism.

We've been here for it all.

Sadly, 180 classmates are known to be deceased. Among them those who gave up young lives right out of high school in World War II. And, the too many who have left us since our last reunion five years ago.

So today — Sept. 19, 2002 — is a day of mixed feelings. Joy to be with classmates and friends, some of whom we have known since the first grade. Sadness as we pause to remember those who no longer can be with us.

But for them and for us a toast: here's to 1942.

A year and a time to fondly remember. And to cherish.

for almost 20 years.

Interested parties should contact Cleta or Lena at the Quincy Council on Aging, Department of Elder Services, 617-328-1246.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1956 POSTCARD showing the Texas Tower built the prior year at the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy Point. Christened "The George's Bank," the 200-foot wide structure got stuck sliding down the ways. It took two weeks to get it afloat. The first of five planned radar stations to help protect the northeast US, this tower was positioned 110 miles east of Chatham. It stood 150 feet from the sea bottom and 65 feet over the water. It communicated with the North Truro Air Force Station via the three dishes on its side. Satellites were not yet in use. Later two more of these towers, built elsewhere, were deployed off Nantucket and New Jersey. In 1961, after being battered by two hurricanes, the latter collapsed killing 28 men. The whole project was then abandoned. The radar in the domes never worked very well anyway. And now, today, a group known as Cape Wind Associates, LLC wants to build 170 428-foot windmills at the old Fore River Shipyard. The 40-story towers would be placed five miles off the south coast of Barnstable in Nantucket Sound. Hopefully they would be designed to withstand the worst possible storms, as were supposedly the Texas Towers.

READERS FORUM

His Response To Letter On World War II Statue

My answer to Jim Mileski's letter dated Nov. 14 to Readers Forum is he had better read his history books.

He asked why they are dedicating a memorial statue to honor World War II veterans 57 years later when most of them are dead.

I have 6 battle stars, 5 invasions and 1 German sub sunk.

If it wasn't for us veterans, you would be under the dictatorship of Adolf Hitler and Hirohito.

You wouldn't be allowed to write letters.

Autism Center Of The South Shore

The Autism Center of the South Shore is a group of parents and professionals dedicated to providing resources and support to families living with Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD).

The Department of Mental Retardation (DMR) made a suggestion that an Autism Resource Center be founded to help the growing number of families affected by ASD. Autism is a lifelong neurological disorder, affecting every demographic and socio-economic group worldwide.

ASCC currently serves 10 South Shore communities: Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Randolph, Scituate and Weymouth. There are a number of recreational programs, including swimming, bowling and ice skating.

Each of these activities affords the children to be involved with other children and adults, and affords parents the opportunity to share with other parents. A music therapy group started recently, and there are plans for other support groups.

To a parent of a newly diagnosed child, there is a bewildering amount of information to process, on both the medical and educational fronts. Having access to parents who have been through the process gives some sense of balance, that the road need not be traveled alone. It may be that there are siblings, another area of concern for the parent. Once again, the ability to talk with parents who have been in the situation gives a hopeful perspective from which to begin.

If you would like more information about the Autism Center of the South Shore, call 1-800-482-5788 or visit the Web site (www.autismsouthshore.org). Please take the opportunity to sign up for the newsletter, which has information on upcoming events, such as the Educational Conference, for parents and professionals, on Feb. 8, 2003, at Eastern Nazarene College.

Teachers To Get Pay Increases

By TOM HENSHAW

The School Committee listened to a preliminary report from its salary steering committee and voted to place an additional $14,000 in the 1945 budget to provide pay increases for most teachers.

This Week
58 Years Ago

It was estimated that the new salary schedule, which would do away with the $300 differential between men and women, would in eight to 12 years cost the city $290,000, or about $2.20 on the tax rate.

Teachers with four years preparation would start at $1,600 a year and reach $2,800 in 13 years. Those with six years preparation would start at $1,800 and reach $3,400 at the start of the 17th year.

Dr. William L. Connor, one of the three consultants who received $2,000 for helping out with the survey, told the School Committee that Quincy was one of the lowest paying cities in the East.

NEW CITY HALL

The City Council's Veterans Memorial Committee voted to ask Mayor Charles A. Ross and City Engineer Gerhard E. Schafer to ascertain the current and future space needs of the city departments.

It also voted to ask city Auditor Leo E. Mullin if the city was in a financial position to build a new City Hall to be dedicated to those who fought in World War II and past years.

"In making an estimate of the future needs of a Quincy City Hall," said Ross, "I think we should look forward to 50 to 100 years. This old City Hall, incidentally, has served us for a complete century."

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Individual Turkey Pot Pies

Here's the deal with Thanksgiving Day leftovers. The first thing I do is prepare two dinner plates with all the trimmings: turkey, stuffing, squash and potatoes and freeze it. Then it just goes into the microwave some night when you don't feel like cooking.

In addition, here's another way to use the leftovers. Instead of a pot pie in one dish... it's made in muffin tins.

Individual Turkey Pot Pies

- Light or dark meat (cut in small pieces)
- 1 package of frozen mixed vegetables
- Leftover gravy
- 2 fresh carrots (cut up) (optional) we like carrots

At this point, I use basic cream sauce, the two tablespoons butter or margarine, the two tablespoons flour and then a cup of milk. I also add about 8 ounces of chicken stock or leftover gravy. If you don't want to make the cream sauce, use a can of mushroom soup.

After this is done, mix everything together. Using either a prepared pie crusts or home-made, place a piece over each muffin tin leaving an edge on each one. Fill each tin with the turkey mixture. Then turn each piece of the edge over slightly onto the mixture... leaving a little space in the center.

Bake in a 350-degree oven for about 30 to 35 minutes or until crust is golden brown. They are easy to serve and the kids will love them!

Red Sox' Coleman, Morgan In Second Parade Appearances

Two men, long associated with the Boston Red Sox, will reprise earlier appearances at the 50th anniversary Quincy Christmas Parade Sunday.

They are Ken Coleman, the Quincy-born legendary radio and TV voice of the Red Sox for 20 years, and Joe Morgan, arguably the most popular Bosox manager in recent years.

Coleman, who began his radio-TV career with WJDA in Quincy, broadcast Red Sox games from 1966 to 1974 and again from 1979 to 1989. He is a member of the Red Sox Hall of Fame.

He called play-by-play in two World Series, the Impossible Dream year of 1967 and later in 1986. He was also behind the mike for the Sox in two playoff series in 1986 and 1988.

Morgan, who lives in Attleboro, was grand marshal of the parade in 1989 and Coleman, who lives in Cohasset, took part in the parade in 1991 along with Luis Tiant, the former Sox pitcher.

Tiant, who now lives in Canton, was invited to participate in the 50th anniversary parade but was forced to bow out at the last minute.

Other past grand marshals who will participate in the 50th anniversary parade include:

John "Jake" Comer, past national commander of the American Legion (1987); John Gillis, retired Quincy city clerk (1992); James Sheets, former mayor of Quincy (1993); George White, general chairman of the Quincy Festival Committee (1995).

Peter Chrisom and Lloyd Hill, former principals of North Quincy and Quincy High Schools respectively (1998); John Noonan, citizen activist committee member (1999); Eugene Creedon, former superintendent of Quincy Public Schools (2001).

Getting Help To Delead

Daniel and Adrienne Schaeffer are homeowners living on a shoestring, not unlike most young families today. Their family consists of mom, dad, a five-year-old daughter and new twin boys age three months. The Schaeffer's own a recently purchased older home.

On a regularly scheduled trip to the pediatrician,

Adrienne was told her daughter had an elevated blood level possibly due to lead paint. The Schaeffer's panicked and immediately thought about the new twins and if this happened to their daughter it could also affect their twin boys.

With money being tight Daniel and Adrienne did not know where to turn; they must delead their home to protect their children, but had no money to do this job.

They heard about Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore and knocked on the door. NHS was happy to help. Their home was built in 1952, and was full of lead paint. Lead paint was used in many homes prior to 1978. It was considered to be the finest paint available at the time.

However, over the years studies have shown lead paint poses a health threat to young children. As the paint ages it begins to break down, peel, and chip. The paint chips have a sweet mint taste that children like. Once in the blood stream, lead paint can cause learning difficulties and mental retardation.

Most families are unaware of the problem until a child is given a physical by their pediatrician. In many cases it is too late the child is already lead poisoned. Toddlers sometime chew on windowsills and can swallow the sweet tasting particles. Without knowing, children can also ingest lead dust from their fingers and toys.

Daniel and Adrienne will be eligible to receive up to $20,000 from The Mass Housing Agency in the form of a 0% deferred loan to delead their home. In most cases, windows, doors, and even siding can be replaced to bring the home into compliance.

If you are a homeowner or an investor and suspect you may have lead paint, Neighborhood Housing Services may be able to help you.

This program is open to both single, multi-family and investor owners.

For more information about making your property lead free, call Janice Tucker at 617-770-2227 ext. 22.

Bay State Home Sales Slip In Third Quarter

But Strong Demand Pushes Prices Higher

After experiencing unexpectedly strong sales gains in the first two quarters of 2002, the Massachusetts housing market showed signs of cooling this past summer as the weak economy and steep declines in the stock market dampened interest from home buyers at least temporarily, according to data issued recently by the Massachusetts Association of Realtors® (MAR).

Despite the slower sales pace, home prices continued to rise steadily across much of the state during the third quarter, an indication that demand for housing continues to exceed the supply of homes in most areas.

The MAR report specifically shows that sales of detached single-family homes declined 4.6 percent during the third quarter of 2002 compared to the same period one year ago, falling from 13,902 units sold between July and September 2001 to 13,263 during the same three-month period this year. Meanwhile, condominium sales were flat, rising just 0.1 percent during the summer quarter from 4,191 units sold in the third quarter last year to 4,194 in the comparable quarter of 2002.

"The modest retreat by home buyers we witnessed this summer was to be expected given the instability in the general economy and the steep losses that have occurred on Wall Street this year," said MAR President

David Drinkwater. "The fundamentals of a strong housing market remain in place however, with historically low mortgage rates, rising home values, and modest income and job growth all helping to fuel the demand for housing during this otherwise slow economy."

In fact, strong sales in the first half of 2002 — when detached single-family homes sales climbed 9 percent and condo sales rose 14 percent — are partly to blame for the third quarter slowdown, as mild winter weather and pent up demand from buyers who delayed purchases after the terrorist attacks altered buying habits and led to a busier than normal spring market.

On a regional basis, third quarter sales of detached single-family homes fell from year ago levels in every market of the state except Worcester County, where sales increased 0.8 percent over the third quarter of 2001. Sales also remained healthy in greater Boston, dipping just 0.5 percent compared to the third quarter last year, and decreased by 2.3 percent on Cape Cod, but larger declines of 7-9 percent occurred in the remaining regions.

In the condominium market, sales activity varied greatly by region, with sales growth observed in the Northeast (+0.4%), greater Boston (+4.4%), and South Shore (+11.8%) regions, and declining sales reported in Cape Cod, Central, Southeast, and West regions in the summer quarter.

In many areas of the state it appears to some degree to be the limited inventory levels in selected markets and price ranges that is frustrating buyers and hampering sales activity, Drinkwater noted. "In communities where there's a lack of good, available inventory to choose from, we're seeing a fair number of homeowners who would normally trade-up to a larger home are instead renovating or adding onto existing homes, and that's affected our business in some areas."

While improving since the second quarter, the inventory of single-family homes and condos for sale has diminished over the past year, with residential listings statewide off 3.2 percent compared to the third quarter of 2001, from a monthly average of 34,526 homes for sale in the summer quarter last year to 33,412 homes for sale in the third quarter of 2002.

"It's been a challenging year for consumers, emotionally and financially, so it's not surprising this summer was a bit slower than previous ones," Drinkwater said. "There's still great confidence in housing as a solid long-term investment, and nothing to suggest that this is the beginning of a major correction in the market. We think those who've chosen to delay the purchase of big ticket items, like homes, will re-enter the market early next year once the economy improves."

Indicative of the market's strength, home prices continued to climb at a healthy rate in the third quarter the MAR report shows. The statewide average selling price for detached single-family homes increased 12.3 percent during the past 12 months, from an average of $325,556 in the third quarter of 2001 to $365,533 in the same three-month period this year. In addition, the statewide average selling price for condominiums has risen 15.1 percent since last summer, from $218,111 in the third quarter one year ago to $251,065 in the three months from July through September 2002.

"The tremendous appreciation we're seeing in home prices is a function of today's active market in which the demand for homes is greater than the supply, but is also reflects the fact that we're not building enough starter homes or mid-level units for first-time home buyers and empty-nesters who want to downsize," Drinkwater said. Four and five bedroom homes on half-acre lots and luxury condos with lots of amenities are going to carry high price tags, he noted.

Double-digit price gains were observed in every region of the state except southeastern Massachusetts (Fall River-New Bedford), where selling prices declined 1.1 percent for detached single-family homes and 29.5 percent for condos.

Over the next several months, it's anticipated that inventory levels will also begin to improve in other markets of the state, and this factor along with today's attractive interest rates — which have declined in the last year by more than half a percentage point for a 30-year fixed-rate mortgage from 7.08 percent in the third quarter of 2001 to 6.44 percent in the third quarter of 2002 — should help affordability and lead to even better conditions for buyers this winter and early next spring.

Sales and price data from the MAR report reflects transactions occurring through Realtor® affiliated multiple listing services in the Commonwealth, and account for approximately 70 percent of all real estate sales in Massachusetts.

50th Anniversary Special Pull-Out Section

Starts 12:30 p.m. At Elm, School Sts.

100 Units, Memories In Christmas Parade Sunday

The 50th anniversary Quincy Christmas Festival Parade with nearly 100 units — including the Boston College Screaming Eagles marching band and the Shriners Fire Brigade — and Santa himself, will step off Sunday at 12:30 p.m.

The three-mile parade will start at Elm and School Streets in Quincy Center and proceed north along Hancock Street to East and West Squantum Streets at North Quincy High School.

General Chairman George White said that because this year's parade is being held a week later than usual, there will be no rain date.

Among the near 100 units will be 13 marching high school bands, 24 floats, 14 color guards, other bands and specialty units.

The Aleppo Shriners Fire Brigade will feature miniature fire trucks and a contingent of colorful clowns.

The 150-member Boston College band's appearance is being sponsored by South Shore Savings Bank.

There will also be a fleet of antique cars.

Marching in the parade will be Quincy's six mayors: Mayor William Phelan and former mayors James Sheets, Francis McCauley, Arthur Tobin, Joseph LaRaia and Walter Hannon.

Former Boston Red Sox manager Joe Morgan and Quincy native Ken Coleman, longtime radio and TV voice of the Red Sox, will be among past parade grand marshals participating in Sunday's parade.

This year there will be 21 grand marshals — all members of the Christmas Festival Committee.

There will be a special tribute to the late Fr. Thomas J. Tierney, who as a curate at St. John's Church founded the Christmas Parade in 1952.

Theme for the parade is "Golden Jubilee of Christmas Treasures," submitted by Patricia Sageney of South Weymouth in a contest and selected by judges as the winning entry. She will ride in the parade.

Past parade theme winners will ride on a special float.

Winners of the elementary school poster contest will ride in a convertible.

Ronald McDonald and the Hallamore Clydesdales horses will make return appearances.

Assisting White as parade coordinators are Jack Nigro, Paul Kennedy and Dave Murphy.

High school bands include in order of appearance:

David Prouty, Immaculate Heart of Mary, East Bridgewater, Bridgewater-Raynham, Chicopee, Douglas, Quincy-North Quincy combined, Weymouth, Pittsfield, Holbrook, New Bedford Junior High, New Bedford Senior, Bishop Hendricken.

Other bands are: Waltham Legion, 103rd Electricians Pip Band, Canton Legion, Boston City, Cran Tara Pipe Band, Boston Police Gaiac.

THIS SUNDAY'S 50th anniversary Quincy Christmas Parade will bring back fond memories of parades past. Like this one in 1974 showing the North Quincy High School band stepping smartly along crowded Hancock Street. Theme that year was "Happiness Is..."

Entered floats include:

Past grand marshals, South Shore Savings Bank, past theme winners, Quincy public schools, Eastern Bank, Quincy Partnership, Eastern Nazarene College — floats in tribute to Father Tierney: Germantown Yacht Club, Woodward School, Quincy Citizens Police, Bar Cove Fire Museum, Quincy High School — Quincy College, Quincy Park Department, St. John's Church, Quincy Youth Hockey, Jack Conway Co., Koch Club, Grand Marshal Festival Committee, Concert In the Park Gazebo, Santa Claus.

Other attractions: Rick Cobban, costume characters,

Silver Dolphin drill team, Quincy Police and Fire Department vehicles Tortorelli music vehicle, Toys For Tots with trucks, DARE vehicle with McGruff and Smurf, Red Cross unit, Fallon ambulance.

Father Thomas Tierney, Christmas Parade Founder, Special Tribute Sunday

By JOHN NOONAN

The late Fr. Thomas J. Tierney, who founded the Quincy Christmas Parade, will receive special tribute during this year's 50th anniversary parade Sunday.

Fr. Tierney, a curate at St. John's Church, Quincy Center, and Quincy Fire and Police Departments chaplain, established the parade with the first one held Wednesday, Nov. 22, 1952.

It was a mini-version of the parade as we know it today.

There were only a dozen units with one musical unit, the Sir Thomas More Drum & Bugle Corps of Brantree.

And it was a short parade route: School Street to Hancock Street to the Sears store — "a walk around the block," as it has been described.

But it was the start of something big. The parade is now considered one of the largest of its kind along the East Coast.

Sunday's parade will have nearly 100 units in a three-mile route from School and Hancock Streets to North Quincy High School.

Fr. Tierney, who became known as "The Parade Priest," served as general chairman of the Christmas Parade from 1952 to 1956.

The Father Thomas Tierney Trophy was established in his honor in 1964 and is awarded with a $1,500 cash prize to the float entry judged best in the non-commercial category. The float must be independently constructed by the organization entering the float.

FR. THOMAS TIERNEY

Several of the winners in past years, in tribute to Fr. Tierney, plan to recreate their winning floats for this year's parade.

Fr. Tierney was ordained by William Cardinal O'Connell in 1931 and appointed by the Cardinal as the first archdiocesan fire department chaplain with the Cambridge Fire Department when assigned to Blessed Sacrament Church in Cambridge.

Fr. Tierney was one of the first to arrive at the Coconut Grove holocaust in Boston Nov. 28, 1942, which took 491 lives. He gave conditional absolution and finale rite to more than 100 victims at the fire scene.

He also assisted and directed in smashing windows and battering down interior partitions of the night club to provide more exits for trapped patrons. His action is credited with saving many lives.

In 1950, he was assigned to St. John the Baptist Parish, where he was again appointed chaplain with the Quincy Fire Department and also the Quincy Police Department.

In 1952, he organized the first Quincy Christmas Parade which attracted some 5,000 spectators. Today the parade is seen annually by many more thousands.

According to the Boston Business Journal, today's Quincy parade ranks third in terms of attracting large crowds for a single three-hour event in the Greater Boston area. The top attraction for the area is the Boston Marathon on Patriots Day followed by the Boston Pops Fourth of July concert on the Esplanade.

Fr. Tierney served as general chairman of the parade from 1952 through 1956. He was associated with almost every veterans, civic and fraternal-sponsored parade in the Quincy area. He was nicknamed "The Parade Priest."

As fire chaplain, he rescued the blessed sacrament when fire gutted the Blessed Sacrament Church in Hough's Neck. He manned hose with firefighters to stop flames in the fire at the First Baptist Church in Wollaston. He raced in and carried out the sacred Torah from the Temple when fire threatened to destroy the Quincy Jewish Community Center.

Each year a trophy and $1,500 is given in the name of Fr. Tierney to the first place float winner. This year's parade will include the recreation of some of those top prize winning floats.

Also as part of the parade nostalgia will be floats for past grand marshals and past parade theme contest winners.

The parade will feature high school marching bands, floats, specialty units, color guards and a few celebrity surprises.

Santa Given 'Clearance' To Arrive By Parachute

Santa has been given FAA clearance to arrive by parachute Saturday at 12:30 p.m. at Faxon Field, behind the Center For Technical Education.

Last year Santa was "grounded" due to Federal Aviation Authority (FAA) regulations following the terrorist attacks Sept. 11.

At that time, the use of air space within a 15-mile radius of Logan International Airport or any other metropolitan airport for non-regularly scheduled flights was restricted.

Santa last year arrived on a Quincy Fire Department fire engine instead.

But this year, Santa is being allowed to return to his traditional parachute jump from a plane along with four of his elves.

Costume characters will use a fire engine for their arrival at noon to distribute candy canes to children. Santa, the elves and the costume character will then board the fire engine and ride through the downtown Quincy area.

Burial Of Hancock Streets Utilities Gains Support

DPW Commissioner Jay Fink's proposal to seek state funds to bury Hancock Street utilities underground from Albion Road to Wayland Street has drawn the support of Quincy officials.

The effort to seek funding to bury the overhead utilities beneath the ground would be part of a project that includes street repaving and new sidewalks along the street in Wollaston.

"The neighbors I have spoken with were united in their support to pursue monies to do that project right the first time," said Ward 5 Councilor Doug Gutro, following a neighborhood meeting.

"Although I am reluctant to delay any repaving or sidewalk repair work that has already been scheduled, this opportunity comes once every 30 years or so. We need to see if we can make it happen."

"The indications from the state are that it can happen, possibly as early as 2003," said Fink. "It makes sense that we have a uniform look along Hancock Street."

State Representative Bruce Ayers, who also attended the meeting, agreed to work with Fink, Mayor William Phelan and Gutro to help secure the necessary funding.

The DPW awarded a contract to Derbes Brothers in 2001 to repave the stretch of Hancock Street from Wayland Street to Albion Road. The work included new sidewalks.

Earlier this year, City Engineer Fran Sandomato re-evaluated the work and recommended a slight delay to pursue funding needed to bury overhead utilities, add a brick border and incorporate ornamental lighting to keep a consistent look along Hancock Street.

In the 1990s, similar improvements were made to the Wollaston and North Quincy Business Districts using monies from a mitigation account from Shaw's Supermarket.

Gutro hosted the neighborhood meeting Oct. 30 at which the option of a slight delay to secure funding to bury the utilities was discussed.

North Quincy Red Raiders vs. Quincy Presidents

Seek Fifth Victory This Season

Thanksgiving Win Would Give North Quincy Reasons To Celebrate

By CHRIS POISSON

The seniors on the North Quincy High School football team haven't had much to cheer about in their careers.

A win in tomorrow's 70th annual Thanksgiving Day game would give them plenty of reasons to celebrate.

First, a victory would be their fifth in 11 games this season, matching the total number of wins from the three previous seasons combined. Second, it would finally put an end to the Red Raiders' holiday horrors, having lost three straight and seven of the last eight Turkey games.

"For the program, it would be the first time we'd have five wins in 11 don't know how long," said head coach Tony Green. "It would also be the first time that we've won on Thanksgiving in 11 don't know how long. It's been a little while."

Certainly has. When North Quincy last tasted victory on Thanksgiving, the seniors were eighth-graders and had not yet arrived on Hancock Street. Now they have a chance to walk away from their high school careers having put the program back on track.

"Our seniors have hung in there for four years," Green said. "They've taken their lumps. They've really helped to turn the program back to the way that it should be."

After starting the year with a victory over Boston Latin and a tough loss to a strong Marshfield team, North Quincy bottomed out. Over the next two weeks it was blown out by Cohasset and Falmouth by a combined score of 82-8. Although North Quincy doesn't use it as an excuse, injuries were a factor in those games.

On Oct. 11, the Red Raiders' fortunes began to turn around as they played Barnstable, the eventual Old Colony League champion, to a surprising one-point loss.

North Quincy, Quincy Represented On All-Star Teams

Six local high school football players have been named all-stars by their respective leagues for their outstanding play this season.

The Quincy High School football team, playing in the Atlantic Coast League, had four players honored.

Seniors Kevin O'Connell (quarterback), Shawn Munchback (defensive back), Anthony Boyle (defensive end) and junior J.J.

Niamkey (running back) were named to the first team.

O'Connell, in his first year on varsity, was the only quarterback selected. He has completed 58 percent of his passes for 967 yards, nine touchdowns and no interceptions. Niamkey is 21 yards shy of 1,000 and has nine touchdowns.

For North Quincy, seniors Chris Dolbeare (running back) and Darryl Zoia (linebacker) were named Old Colony League first-team all-stars. Senior tight end Matt Francis received the league sportsmanship award.

Dolbeare, who missed the first game of the season and most of the second, has six 100-yard rushing games and 12 touchdowns, three of which came on special teams. Zoia leads the team in tackles, averaging 16 per game.

Comebacks, Heart-Breakers Mark City Football Rivalry

Last-second comebacks and painful heartbreakers have turned the Quincy-Quincy North Quincy high school football rivalry into an annual fight for city bragging rights.

Close, competitive games have defined the series.

Fifteen of the last 19 meetings have been decided by eight points or less.

In 1997, Quincy edged North Quincy, 7-0, on a late fourth-quarter touchdown run by Nathan DoRosario.

That game, along with the '85, '87, '89 and '93 matches, ended on the final play of the game.

In 1984 and 1994 the Presidents grabbed interceptions in the final minutes to thwart North Quincy's comeback bids.

The only game to go into overtime was in 1975, which the Red Raiders won, 15-8.

Of the 69 meetings, 39 have been decided by eight points or less. The outcome has been greater than two scores in only 18 games.

Unbeaten In Last 3 Thanksgiving Games

Presidents Seek Second Straight Winning Season

By CHRIS POISSON

Although they've won the past three years, the seniors on the Quincy High School football team have a different perspective about tomorrow's 70th annual Thanksgiving Day game.

As they see it, they haven't defeated the North Quincy seniors. Like they needed any more motivation.

"I wasn't aware of this and they brought it up the other day," said head coach Bob Noble. "They haven't beaten them as freshman players and they haven't beaten them as JV players."

"Since they've become varsity players their junior year, some of them as sophomores, yes, they were involved in winning on Thanksgiving. But to their point of view they haven't beaten this North contingent. They're aware of that and want to be successful on Thanksgiving."

If they are successful, it would continue the program's upward swing since Noble took over the reins in 1999. A victory would mark the second straight winning season and would be the highest number of wins since the 1994 squad went 6-4.

"The program has gotten continually better in terms of wins and losses every season," Noble said. "Hopefully that will continue."

The Presidents were in the hunt for the Atlantic Coast League championship and, perhaps, going undefeated. But those plans were ruined after devastating overtime losses to Hanover and Whitman-Hanson and another heart-breaking loss to Sandwich.

"I have mixed emotions about the season," Noble said. "On one hand it's been somewhat disappointing given the nature of some of the games we've lost. But in the same respect we're right there on the verge of being a league contender."

In the first half of the season, junior first-team all-star J.J. Niamkey and the running game carried the team offensively. An explosive runner who can strike from any where on the field, Niamkey has rushed for 979 yards and totaled nine touchdowns (7 rushing).

Lately, opponents have finally caught on and have been committed to stopping him by putting more men in the box. And it has worked in the last two games, as Niamkey has rushed for only 47 yards on 25 carries.

Not a problem, though. Noble had stressed throughout the season that his team needed production out of its passing game if it were to be successful. In steps senior quarterback Kevin O'Connell out of the shadows and into the spotlight.

Quincy, North Victorious Over Common Opponent

Playing in separate leagues, the Quincy and North Quincy high school football teams had only one common opponent this year: Plymouth South.

Deciding who might have an edge in tomorrow's 70th annual Thanksgiving Day game will be more difficult than in recent years. The Presidents and the Red Raiders both cruised to easy victories over the Panthers.

On Oct. 4, Quincy sprinted out to a 28-0 first-quarter lead and coasted the rest of the way for a 28-7 win.

On Oct. 25, North Quincy trailed, 14-8, at the half but erupted in the second half by scoring on its first four possessions en route to a 34-22 victory.

As for the rest of the schedule, Quincy faced some tough competition in the Atlantic Coast League. Plymouth North, Whitman-Hanson and Sandwich have a combined 21-6 record. North Quincy also took on three powerhouses in the Old Colony League. Barnstable, Marshfield and Bridgewater-Raynham have a combined 22-7 mark.

ABSORBING SHOCKS

All shock absorbers work by converting motion into heat. Tube shocks utilize a piston moving through oil, with valves controlling the flow of oil through holes in the piston. What makes shocks wear out is their own heat. With the suspension in constant motion, mostly up-and-down movements that are not readily noticeable, the piston will spend most of its time in a very small percentage of its stroke. This causes heat to be concentrated in a small area in the cylinder. Eventually, the piston loses its seal against the cylinder in that small area, and the shock absorber will no longer dampen the small motions. This diminished dampening ability will occur long before a bounce test will reveal it.

HINT: A bounce test consists of pushing forcefully down on the fender over the wheel and observing whether the vehicle bounces more than once, indicating a worn shock absorber.

Quincy's Bill Sullivan Top Holiday Coach

Bill Sullivan is Quincy High School's most successful head coach in Thanksgiving Day games.

He went 6-2 against North Quincy from 1952-59. He also led the Presidents to five consecutive wins from 1954-58, the longest win streak in series history.

Sullivan lost to the Red Raiders in 1953 and 1959.

He was an assistant to Munroe MacLean from 1939-51.

1970 Presidents Perfect 9-0

Quincy's 1970 team, coached by Hank Conroy, ran through its opponents on its way to a spotless 9-0 record.

That year, the Presidents knocked off North Quincy, 16-6, and captured the Greater Boston League title.

Rejuvenated — and somewhat healthy — they reeled off three straight victories, including a memorable 19-point comeback against Silver Lake.

North Quincy heads into tomorrow's game having lost its last two games, its latest being a 41-19 setback at North Andover. Despite the score, the Red Raiders actually held a 19-12 lead in the third quarter before they suddenly forgot how to tackle tailback Matt Rock.

"I would have to say we're the underdogs," Green said. "We're a little bit beat up and I think they're healthy. And in the developmental stage of each program, they're a couple years ahead of us, which on Thanksgiving may not matter. It's a big emotional charge so you never know what can happen."

North Quincy boasts one of the top players in Division I in first-team all-star tailback Chris Dolbeare. The senior quad-captain, who possesses amazing speed and power, has six 100-yard rushing games and 12 touchdowns, despite missing the season opener and most of the second game to injury. He's also a threat on special teams, where he has scored three times.

Rob Fleming have opened up their share of holes.

Senior James Coughlin will serve as Dolbeare's backup. Coughlin has three rushing touchdowns, including the winning score in the Silver Lake game. Senior Ryan Farnham is out for the game, still recovering from a concussion he sustained in the third game of the season against Cohasset.

The Red Raiders can't be overlooked in their passing game. Senior quarterback Kevin Holleran is among the league leaders in touchdown passes with nine. Senior tight end Matt Francis has been his favorite target all season, as the two quad-captains have hooked up six times.

Defensively, North Quincy has given up 28.5 points per game, including 40-plus points three times, and will need to turn in its best performance of the season to slow down Quincy's potent attack.

The Red Raiders will go with a 5-3 defense, hoping their line can overpower the undersized Presidents. Senior quad-captain Darryl Zoia anchors the team at linebacker. A first-team all-star, he averaged a team-high 16 tackles per game. He'll be joined by senior Gary Dalton and Francis.

The defense will need to find away to contain junior J.J. Niamkey, an explosive tailback who is chasing 1,000 yards and has scored nine touchdowns. In the past two games, however, opponents have shut him down by committing more guys to the run.

"Niamkey is going to be a problem," Green said. "He's been a problem for everybody. Why wouldn't he be a problem for us. We'll do the best we can to shut him down."

"But they have so many other weapons we can't just focus on one kid. Their quarterback can throw well and he has a couple of good receivers."

Indeed, senior quarterback Kevin O'Connell and his receivers have turned it on lately, and could be a headache for corner backs James Burke and Mike Delahoyde and safety Tim Coughlin.

O'Connell has been extremely accurate, completing 58 percent of his passes with no interceptions and nine TD passes. Senior wideouts Shawn Munchbach (21 catches, 363 yards) and Anthony Boyle (18, 311) each have three TD receptions. Senior wing back Matt Ramponi has caught 10 balls and a touchdown.

Having already made major strides in turning the program around, the seniors would like nothing better than to finally experience the joy of winning on Thanksgiving.

"For them to win on Thanksgiving would be a real exclamation point on what these kids have done for the program," Green said. "They've made a page in their own history book. That would be a great ending — a Thanksgiving win."

The Series Record:

Quincy 36, North 28 5 Ties In 69 Games

Entering tomorrow's 70th annual Thanksgiving Day game, Quincy High School holds the edge with a 36-28-5 series record.

The contests in 1934, 1937, 1940 and 1983 were scoreless affairs, while the 55th meeting in 1987 ended in a 14-14 stalemate.

The series was last deadlocked at 7-7-3 going into the 1950 game.

The Presidents have won seven of the last eight Turkey Day games and are looking to win their fourth straight in 2001. They won four straight from 1994-97.

The Red Raiders will be trying to rebound after last year's 12-7 loss. They haven't won consecutive games since they three-peated from 1991-93.

North Quincy's Dolbeare, Quincy's Niamkey Top Scorers

One familiar face and a newcomer occupy the top spot in the scoring leaders' department in 2002.

North Quincy's Chris Dolbeare, last year's leading scorer, once again tops the list for both schools heading into tomorrow's showdown with Quincy.

The senior tailback with blazing speed has totaled 74 points, rushing for seven touchdowns, catching two more and returning two kick-offs and a punt for scores, in addition to a 2-point conversion.

Senior tight end Matt Francis checks in with 38 points, catching six touchdowns passes and a 2-point conversion. He is ranked among the Division I leaders in TD receptions.

Senior tailback James Coughlin follows with 18 points on three rushing TDs. Senior Ryan Farnham and Gary Dalton each have two TDs for 12 points.

Senior kicker Lindy Laze has nine points (7 PATs, 2-point conversion). Senior quarterback Kevin Holleran has rushed for a score and senior Rob Mooney rounds out the list with two 2-point conversions for 4 points.

For Quincy, junior tailback J.J. Niamkey, a huge play-maker, leads the team with 54 points, rushing for seven TDs and catching two more.

Senior wing back Matt Ramponi and his tough running has produced 30 points, four rushing scores and a receiving touchdown.

Senior wideout Shawn Munchbach has three TD receptions, a kickoff return for a score and a 2-point conversion for 26 points. Senior kicker Thiago Goes and his powerful foot has generated 23 points (17 PATs, 2 field goals).

Senior quarterback Kevin O'Connell has three rushing TDs and a 2-point conversion for 20 points and senior wide receiver Anthony Boyle has three TD catches and a 2-point conversion for 20 points. Senior Mike Cox checks in with 12 points, rushing for a score and catching one. Junior John Banks closes out the scoring with a rushing touchdown.

Red Raiders Perfect In 1966, 1992

North Quincy High School has strutted into the Thanksgiving Day game with an unblemished record twice, 1966 and 1992, in the 70 annual matches.

Ken McPhee played a role in both as the starting guard on the '66 team and the head coach of the '92 club.

Dave Drucker Hockey Coach For Franklin Institute

Dave Drucker of Quincy recently wrapped up his season as head coach of the soccer team at the Benjamin Franklin Institute of Technology in Boston.

Although the team fell short of the postseason, it did receive the league sportsmanship award.

The '66 group finished the regular season with a 9-0 record. It captured the Greater Boston League title, shared the Class A crown with Arlington and blanked Quincy, 8-0.

The '92 squad compiled an 11-0 record to win the Old Colony League title. It knocked off Arlington to become Division 1B Super Bowl champs and also shut out Quincy, 20-0.

North Quincy Red Raiders vs. Quincy Presidents

been asked to win games with his arm since the ground game has been contained. Named a first-team all-star in his first season at the varsity level, he's completed 58 percent of his passes for 967 yards, nine touchdowns and no interceptions.

"I think we're diversified enough offensively — for any team, not just North Quincy — that we present problems in that you can't focus on one aspect of what we do offensively," Noble said. "We throw the ball as effectively as we run the ball."

Quincy also has another dimension to its offense: senior kicker Thiago Goes, who has connected on 17-of-23 extra-point attempts and 2-of-3 field goals, including a long of 36 yards.

"In my 17 years we haven't had a kicker as good as Goes," Noble said. "He's a threat to put points on the board from 40-plus yards out. You have another option on fourth down inside the 30 that a majority of teams don't have."

Defensively, Quincy has had its good and bad moments, yielding 125 points (14 per game). It has posted two shutouts and allowed eight points or less in four more games, but it has also allowed 33, 31 and 28 points in three other games — all losses.

"We didn't play defensively as well as we would have liked," Noble said. "We've given up roughly 14 points per game, most teams would be happy with that. We take a lot of pride in what we do. There were a couple of games where a lot of points were scored on us."

The primary concern for the defense tomorrow is Chris Dolbear, North Quincy's multi-dimensional weapon. And one area where the Presidents have shown they are vulnerable this year is run defense. Remember when Sandwich's Brian Judge shredded them for 228 yards?

Well, Dolbear is just as explosive at tailback, where he runs behind a big offensive line that could pose a problem for the undersized Presidents. He has six 100-yard rushing games and 12 touchdowns. Also, Quincy has to worry about him on special teams, where he has scored three TDs.

"The Dolbear kid is a tremendous player," Noble said. "Obviously we have to focus on stopping him. That's what they like to do."

"We ain't gonna kick it at him," he added about Dolbear's ability on special teams. "That's kind of a no-brainer. He's very dangerous because he's very quick and he runs extremely hard. He's not one of these guys that goes down when someone taps him on the ankle."

Quincy also has to respect the Red Raiders' passing attack. Senior quarterback Kevin Holleran and senior tight end Matt Francis have formed a potent duo. Six of Holleran's nine TD passes have been to Francis.

"North Quincy has a couple of weapons that do a tremendous job," Noblesaid. "They also offer a two-pronged attack that can be difficult to stop. The Holleran kid and Francis have had a very successful year."

As the three-time defending Thanksgiving Day winners, Quincy is the favorite to repeat until it loses. But, again, don't try to sell that to seniors.

"They look at it not that we've won the last three in a row, but that they haven't beat this group, which I think is a pretty healthy way to go into the game," Noble said. "Again, that was not something we fed them. They brought it up. They're very conscious of that."

1947 Game Largest Crowd?

There has always been debate as to which Quincy-North Quincy game drew the largest crowd.

It appears the 1947 game had the largest paid attendance, reported to have been 18,003. In 1946 the paid attendance was 16,065.

Many estimate that close to 25,000 saw the '47 game, if you count those who watched from the walls and trees, and those who lined the bus yard where the MBTA garage now stands.

Thousands of extras also watched the '46 contest.

Before 1947, the '39 game attracted the largest crowd with 15,000 fans showing up.

In recent years an estimated 9,000-12,000 have attended the annual game.

All Children Welcome To Play YMCA Church Basketball

All children are welcome to participate in the YMCA church basketball league.

That's the message Ralph Yohe, president of the South Shore Y, is sending after a controversial situation last week.

The church league — the oldest church basketball league in the United States — had decided this year to enforce a rule requiring that children must be members of the church, synagogue or mosque their team is affiliated with.

After Yohe received a letter from a parent saying a child was not allowed to play because the child didn't belong to a religious institution, he said he knew right away the rule had to be changed.

Last Thursday night, the directors of the program met and unanimously decided to abolish the rule. Now, those who do not belong to a religious institution can play for the one nearest to them.

"The YMCA has always believed that it is important that anybody can participate in the Y," Yohe said. "Everyone is invited, regardless of race, religion or financial situation."

Yohe said the intent of the rule, which has been around since the 1920s, was to promote fair play by preventing coaches from loading their team with superior players out of the area.

"By enforcing that rule, it had unintended consequences of a child not being able to play on a team," he said. "We tried it to have fair play between the teams. We weren't trying to deny access to a child. When the issue came up it was certainly disconcerting."

Those who may have been denied earlier and for anyone else interested in joining the program, Yohe said they can sign up by calling the YMCA at 617-479-8500.

The league, open to children from elementary school to high school, has roughly 80 teams in Quincy, Braintree and Weymouth. Yohe said he expected enrollment to reach 900. The season will begin in December.

Game Could See Rare Feats For Quincy's O'Connell, Niamkey

By CHRIS POISSON

Statistically speaking, the Quincy High School football team has a chance to accomplish a rare feat in tomorrow's 70th annual Thanksgiving Day game.

Seniorquarterback Kevin O'Connell and junior tailback J.J. Niamkey each have a legitimate chance to surpass the 1,000-yard plateau. Of course, they wouldn't be in this position if it weren't for the other 10 guys on the field.

"To have a 1,000-yard rusher and a 1,000-yard passer, that's quite a testament to these guys," said head coach Bob Noble.

O'Connell, in his first year on the varsity level, enters tomorrow's game with 967 passing yards and nine touchdowns. While 1,000 yards and double digits in TD passes would look nice, he also has a chance to do something perhaps even more amazing.

In 115 attempts this season, O'Connell has not thrown an interception. Has that ever happened before?

"Not to my knowledge," Noble said. "I don't know of anyone. We've had some great quarterbacks here and they've all thrown interceptions at some point in the season."

"Originally when I started mentioning it I thought I might be jinxing him. Now, quite frankly, I want to go the other way with it. I feel like I have to say it or otherwise I would be jinxing him."

A 58-percent passer, O'Connell has come close to throwing a pick; he almost threw two against Plymouth North in his last outing.

"He's come close," Noble said. "The other night there were a couple of balls that could've very easily been picked off. But they weren't."

As for Niamkey, he strolls into Veterans Memorial Stadium with 979 yards rushing. The way his season was going after the first seven games, you would have thought he'd have 1,000 yards before Thanksgiving.

In his last two games, though, Niamkey has rushed for only 47 yards on 25 carries as teams have committed more guys to the run. Still, he should become the first Quincy running back to reach the milestone since Sam Brown did seven or eight years ago.

"The last couple of weeks teams have been geared to stop him, which they've done successfully," Noble said. "If he has even a mediocre game he should break 1,000 which would be a great thing."

Noble noted that their selection as Atlantic Coast League first-team all-stars is quite an achievement as well. O'Connell was the only quarterback named to the squad and Niamkey made the senior-dominated team as an underclassman.

Quincy JV Football Edges North Quincy

The Quincy High School junior varsity football team edged North Quincy, 7-6, last Saturday at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The Presidents struck first when John Banks scored on a 1-yard touchdown run with under a minute left in the second quarter. Annad Jaggermath added the extra point for a 7-0 lead. The score was set up by a 35-yard pass completion from quarterback Brian French to Jeff Reggerio.

Quincy opened the second half with a tremendous drive but North Quincy's tough defense prevented the Presidents from reaching the end zone.

Late in the fourth quarter, the Red Raiders capitalized as they recovered a Quincy turnover at its 5-yard line. On fourth-and-goal, quarterback Jimmy Burke rolled out and hit tight end Kris Borgendale in the back of the end zone.

On the go-ahead 2-point conversion attempt, Quincy's Ian Jorgenson and Angelo Venturin sacked Burke.

Quincy turned in a strong defensive game, led by Steve Costigliola, Scott Patington, Ledion Proto and Jose Ortiz.

North Quincy's ensuing on-side kick was unsuccessful and Quincy kneeled on the ball to seal the victory. Quincy finished the season with an 8-2 record.

Are You At Risk For Blindness?

Glaucoma, one of the leading causes of blindness in the United States, can be treated when caught early thus preventing loss of vision.

There are nearly 3 million Americans who have glaucoma. Half of them do not know that they have this eye disease because there are no early warning symptoms. In Massachusetts, approximately 63,500 people have glaucoma and 31,750 of them do not know it.

The good news is that a simple, painless eye exam can detect glaucoma and early treatment can preserve vision. The EyeCare—Glaucoma Project promotes awareness of the glaucoma risk factors and provides access to care for those at risk.

You are at risk for getting glaucoma if:

- Someone in your family has glaucoma
- You are an African American
- You are over 50 years of age

For free glaucoma information or to see if someone qualifies for an examination at no cost, your readers can call the project's 24-hours-a-day, seven-days-a-week, toll-free help-line at 800-391-EYES (3937).

Working in collaboration with the Massachusetts Society of Eye Physicians and Surgeons, volunteer ophthalmologists in Massachusetts are available to provide eye examinations for patients referred through the project. This public service project is co-sponsored by The Foundation of the American of Ophthalmology and Pharmacology Ophthalmology.

Please encourage your readers to have their eyes examined before it's too late. Don't keep glaucoma a family secret.

See Your Doctor: 'Tis The Season To Be Safe

(NAPS)—Winter brings colder temperatures, snow and the holiday season, making it an ideal time to travel or participate in such activities as skiing, snowboarding or ice skating. Unfortunately, the pain resulting from injuries can sometimes overshadow the enjoyment of participating in these common activities.

Here are a few tips that may help prevent injury and pain.

• Skiing/Snowboarding: The key to preventing injury is proper conditioning, which can be accomplished through aerobic exercise and strength training, as well as stretching. Stretching allows the muscles to work more efficiently, helping to reduce the risk of injury in the event of a fall. Snowboarders also should wear wrist guards made for snowboarding, use the right equipment and wear a helmet, which is particularly important for beginners.

• Holiday Driving: "Over the river and through the woods" can spell lower back pain for many drivers. To minimize strain, properly align your seat and elevate the headrest until it is directly behind the back of your head. Good posture also is important — sit straight against the back of the seat; and don't sit too far back — reaching for the steering wheel or pedals puts strain on the spine. Frequent breaks — stretching and walking every one to two hours — can also help reduce back strain.

• Shoveling Snow: Shoveling snow can be a real pain in the neck, back, shoulder and wrist. To reduce your risk of injury, shovel early and often (new snow is lighter); push the snow rather than lifting it, but if lifting the snow is necessary, be sure to lift with your legs, bending properly at the knees, with your legs apart and back straight; don't throw snow over your shoulder or to the side, twisting motions put strain on your back; and pace yourself — take breaks if you're tired.

• Ice Skating: Ice skating and falling go hand in hand. Taking a lesson on how to fall safely and correctly can greatly decrease the risk of injury, including wrist fractures, the most common injury. Being in shape and having the proper equipment also can help to reduce injuries.

Despite your best efforts, injuries can occur, and may lead to persistent pain. But you don't have to miss out on winter activities; there are things you can do to manage your pain.

Speak with your physician for help in determining a pain management program that is appropriate for you. While treatment programs will vary, based on the individual and the type and intensity of the pain, a program that includes both non-drug treatments and medication is recommended.

Non-drug treatments may include heat, cold/ice, massage therapy. Stretching and strengthening activities, as well as low-impact exercises, also can help reduce pain. The most common types of pain medications are aspirin, acetaminophen, non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDs) and opioids.

For more information about pain management, consult your doctor or a pain specialist. Also, the Partners Against Pain Web site (www.partnersagainstpain.co) is a valuable resource for pain management information.

Simple Tips To Help Relieve Holiday Stress

(NAPS)—Stress doesn't have to put a damper on merriment this holiday season. Taking these tips to heart can help turn tension into a ghost of Christmas past:

• Shop early, at one location. The sooner you get started on your holiday shopping spree, the better off you'll be. See if you can narrow down the number of stops by finding a diverse, useful store that offers delightful gifts for everyone on your list.

• Get organized. Make a list of everything that needs to be done, from shopping to entertaining to decorating, and divvy up the work you need to accomplish between family and friends. There's no need to do everything yourself — and the feeling of being overwhelmed is a major contributor to stress.

• Have extra holiday gifts on hand. When unexpected guests arrive, a simple something can go a long way toward making them feel welcome. Some suggestions include festive and fragrant candles, pampering personal products and beautifully wrapped soaps and lotions.

• Paper yourself, and others. Taking time out for yourself is key to keeping calm during this busy season. Try Bath & Body Works' Slipper Set to comfort your feet after a hard day of holiday shopping or a therapeutic Aromatherapy product such as a Holiday Cylinder filled with lotion, bath oil, mist or scrub in three soothing, relaxing and energizing scents.

• Celebrate life. Take some time and treat yourself to a massage or relax and soak in a soothing bath. When you feel fresh and rejuvenated, you're much more likely to appreciate, and revel in, the magic of the holiday season. Remember, it only comes around once a year.

GUM DISEASE CONTRIBUTORS

While plaque is the primary cause of periodontal disease, there are other factors that are thought to increase the risk, severity, and speed of gum disease development. These include tobacco use, which is one of the most significant factors associated with the development of periodontitis (advanced gum disease). Then, there are hormonal changes, which may make the gums more sensitive and make it easier for gingivitis (early stage gum disease) to develop. Stress may make it difficult for the body's immune system to fight off infection. And, clenching and grinding teeth may put excess force on the supporting tissues of the teeth and speed the rate at which these tissues are destroyed.

If you have questions about gum disease, or any other dental concerns, we invite you to call us at 617-479-6220. There is an abundance of innovative technologies and devices available to help us improve the quality and comfort of care we deliver. We stress preventive dentistry for the entire family. SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

It's not too early to begin thinking of the things for which we are thankful... the things we will include in our blessings on Thanksgiving Day.

A lot of people include the big things... things like peace, freedom, sufficient food, clothing and shelter, good health for friends and loved ones.

Yet, we think it important that we also include some of the smaller gifts we receive during the year... the friendly greetings from both acquaintances and stranger... visits we've had from relatives, friends and new neighbors... thanks to those who have taught our children... The list is endless...

On Thanksgiving Day, most of us will sit down before a food-laden table and we will express our gratitude for the bounties and blessings we enjoy BUT...

Let us not forget that there are some out there who do not share in these blessings and bounties. If there is a way you can improve their situation, then your own Thanksgiving Day will be more complete... HAPPY THANKSGIVING DAY...

REQUEST FOR EXPRESSIONS OF INTEREST

CITY OF QUINCY, MASSACHUSETTS
Department of Public Works

REQUEST FOR EXPRESSIONS OF INTEREST

This Request for Expressions of Interest (REEI) is being issued by the City of Quincy, Massachusetts and the Town of Weymouth, Massachusetts in connection with their Curbside Refuse and Trash Collection and Disposal, Yard Waste Collection and Stockpiling, and Recyclables Collection, Hauling, Processing and/or Marketing. Proposals will be accepted until 1:00 p.m. in the offices of the Commissioner of Public Works for the City of Quincy, Massachusetts, 55 Sea Street, Quincy, MA 02169 on January 7, 2003.

The purpose of this REEI is to identify potential proposers of a variety of solid waste services that the City and Town will collectively bid on within the next few months. Prospective bidders will be provided with two alternative bid approaches: 1) to bid on separate collection, handling, processing and disposal tasks, or 2) to bid on these items collectively. This REEI is also intended to solicit responses from the vendor community that the City and Town may use as they deem appropriate to guide the structuring of their impending solid waste contract(s).

A proposal packet may be obtained from the City of Quincy Department of Public Works on or after November 25, 2002. Proposers wishing to have the packet mailed must provide a non-refundable mailing fee, payable to the City of Quincy, in the amount of $10.00.

A pre-response meeting for the municipalities to answer questions concerning this REEI is scheduled for December 18, 2002 at 1:00 pm in the offices of the Commissioner of Public Works for the City of Quincy, at the address noted above. All vendors are invited to attend.

The period of the proposed solid waste contracts will be for one year, beginning on July 1, 2003. The final contracts will also provide the City and the Town with options to extend the contract(s) for up to two additional years.

The City/Town reserve the right to reject any and all proposals if deemed in the best interest to do so.

It's Beginning To Look Like Christmas

SANTA CLAUS HIMSELF was there to greet children of all ages at the end of this year's 50th annual Christmas Festival Parade which took place Sunday along Hancock St., drawing thousands of spectators.

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH was a grand prize winner in the float competition with this entry in memory of Fr. Thomas Tierney who founded the Quincy Christmas Parade while he was a curate at the church in November, 1952. Fittingly, St. John's Church received the Fr. Thomas Tierney Trophy and $1500 as the grand prize winner.

Supplemental Funding May Solve Fire Department Dilemma

$800,000 Shortfall Could Sideline Wollaston Engine

The City Council learned to its dismay Monday night that the Fire Department is facing an $800,000 shortfall for Fiscal 2003 that could cost the city the services of Engine 4 in Wollaston.

A visibly angered Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin pledged that he would personally stand in front of the Wollaston Fire Station to block any attempt to do away with Engine 4.

"Over my dead body," he cried, "will there be a reduction in the firefighting capacity of the Wollaston Fire Station and a jeopardizing of the safety and welfare of the citizens I represent."

Coughlin moved, and the Council unanimously adopted, a resolution opposing any reduction in equipment or minimum manning and asking the fire chief to appear before the Council to report on his department's needs.

The news of the shortfall came to the Council in the form of a memo from Mayor William Phelan, who attributed the shortfall to overtime costs that have ballooned the department's budget.

"In the absence of supplementary funding, (acting) Chief (Paul) O'Connell is proposing to reduce the minimum number of personnel on duty to 38 (from 41), including 10 officers," said the Mayor.

"This reduction would necessitate a pulling from service of Engine 4 (Wollaston Station)."

Phelan told The Quincy Sun that he saw two ways out of the fiscal dilemma — a supplementary appropriation, or removing a piece of equipment from active service if the personnel is not available to man it.

But no layoffs and no more costly overtime.

"The memo was to alert the City Council to the problem," he said. "It's a problem many cities and towns are faced with. I would welcome any suggestions from the Council."

Councillors reacted angrily to the memo.

Coughlin called the proposed reduction in service an affront to residents of his ward and an assault on public safety.

"The Wollaston Fire Station is once again in the cross hairs of an unconscionable and unacceptable ambush," he told The Sun.

Council President Daniel Raymond vowed that the city would lose neither personnel or Engine 4 in Wollaston.

He called the recom-

$350,000 For Unemployment Insurance Special Council Meeting Tonight To Take Up $2.7M In Appropriations

The City Council will hold a special meeting tonight (Thursday) to deal with two appropriations totaling more than $2.7 million, including $350,000 for unemployment insurance.

Councillors agreed to take up the appropriations in a special meeting of its Finance Committee at 6:30 p.m., followed by the special Council meeting at 7 p.m.

The Council postponed the appropriations issues Monday night because they were unsure of the revenue numbers coming from the Mayor's office.

They said they wanted to confer with representatives of the administration before signing off on the appropriations.

Easier Access, Development Seen

City, State Officials Hail Concourse Bridge Opening

Enthusiasm flowed like a heady wine at the opening of the Quincy Center Concourse last week.

"This project will encourage more development in Quincy and will be an integral part of the resurgence of the downtown area," said John Coghiano, the Massachusetts Highway Commissioner.

"Commuters and shoppers will enjoy easier access to the area and traffic flow will be improved in the city's business district."

Coghiano was but one of a bevy of state and city officials who helped cut the ribbon to open the $6.5 million Concourse, funded by the state, that connects Burgin Parkway via a bridge over the MBTA tracks to the Parkingway.

The 200-foot Concourse is the first step in what is planned to be a connector from Burgin Parkway to Hancock Street and eventually to Southern Artery by way of McGrath Highway.

"Reps. (Bruce) Ayers, (Ron) Marrano, (Steve) Tobin and I are pleased with the completion of this important project," said Sen. Michael Morrissey.

"It is an important part of JAMES SCANLAN, Transportation Secretary, calls Quincy Center Concourse 'significant commitment by the state in the city of Quincy.'

JOHN COGLIANO, MassHighway commissioner, tells Concourse ribbon-cutting 'it will be part of the resurgence of the downtown area.'

SEN. MICHAEL MORRISSEY predicts the Concourse will be important to Quincy development.

"This project represents a significant commitment by the state to the city of Quincy," said Transportation Secretary James Scanlan. "Everyone benefits from

The ribbon-cutters were optimistic about the state picking up the tab to extend the Concourse through to Southern Artery (Route 3A).

Coghiano said MassHighway has more plans for Quincy and environs. Mayor William Phelan said he is confident that the city can raise funds for design work needed before the state will finance step two to Hancock Street.

The $6.5 million cost not only includes the bridge and the roadway but also two sets of interconnected traffic signals and reconstruction of part of Burgin Parkway, Granite Street Connector and

Parkingway

Other work consisted of new street lighting, landscaping and retaining walls.

The Concourse is also expected to relieve the daylong traffic congestion that has plagued downtown Quincy for years at the intersections of Granite Street with Burgin Parkway and Hancock Street.

Phelan-Sheets Team Among Those Helping Needy 48 Community Leaders To Man Downtown Salvation Army Kettle

Forty-eight community leaders including four mayors will ring the bell in Quincy Center beginning Friday to help the Salvation Army help those in need this holiday season.

The four mayors are Mayor William Phelan and former Mayors James Sheets, Francis McCauley and Arthur Tobin.

Phelan and Sheets will be returning as a bell-ringing team Thursday, Dec. 12.

Phelan has proclaimed December "Salvation Army Month in Quincy," urging residents, businesses and others "to join in providing for those less fortunate this holiday season."

The community leaders for the sixth year have volunteered to man a "Celebrity Kettle" in front of the former Ryder's Home Decor store, 1489 Hancock St., next to the Alba Restaurant.

They will team two together in one-hour shifts this Friday (Dec. 6), Thursday, Dec. 12 and Friday, Dec. 13.

And ask friends, colleagues and others to stop by and "help fill the kettle" to help the many in need of help especially in these difficult times.

Money raised will go directly to the Salvation Army's Quincy Temple Corps, 6 Baxter St., to aid local families.

Major Doug Jones, who with his wife, Major Linda Jones, are co-commanders of the Salvation Army's Quincy Corps, said:

"We are most grateful to these community leaders who are taking time from their busy schedules to help us with our Christmas Kettle effort. Because of them and other volunteers, Christmas will be a little brighter for many in need."

Jones said he was also grateful to representatives of Quincy's service clubs, businesses, organizations and individuals, who are also volunteering to man kettles at various stores and other locations.

"But, as always, we still need help," he said.

Any person or group wishing to give a day or a part of a day or a couple of hours to help man a kettle is asked to contact the Quincy Temple Corps at 617-472-2345.

"We would appreciate it so much," Jones said.

The Yakoo: Let Him Be

The Yakoo is under fire again. This time it's the Quincy Human Rights Commission targeting the North Quincy High School mascot as a "racist representation of a Native American."

A letter written by Chairwoman Donna Johnson "on behalf of all the members" says there have been "observations that students in North Quincy High School have been insensitive and racist in their depictions of Native Americans."

And that "there have been violent demonstrations of school spirit such as students seen around the school dressed in stereotypical garb and wearing war paint."

Wonder if that garb and war paint were kids getting a little overenthusiased at a prep rally for the big Thanksgiving Day game with Quincy?

None of the names of the other commission members appear on the letter which went out to the media and apparently to city and school officials.

But it's not surprising that one of those members is Ed Grogan who has been trying to bring down the Yakoo for over a decade.

It almost seems like it has become an obsession with him to run the Yakoo out of town.

The Yakoo has been North Quincy's mascot and symbol of school spirit for 45 years. And that school spirit is something special.

The Yakoo symbol, which came into being in 1957, depicts a stern American Indian with feather headband, carrying a stone hammer and a NQHS pennant.

He was modeled not after an American Indian but

Dr. Allan Yacubian, a 1958 NQHS graduate and now a well-known Wollaston dentist and school booster who happens to be an Armenian American.

The symbol hasn't bothered him these 45 years. And it didn't seem to bother most other people until Grogan -- a teacher at Atlantic Middle School, not NQHS -- decided to make an issue of it.

He filed a civil rights complaint in 1991, claiming the symbol was offensive, especially to Native Americans.

But that same year, the vast majority of parents and students rallied to the Yakoo's defense as a beloved school symbol.

An ad hoc committee comprising students, parents and alumni overwhelmingly voted to keep him as the school's symbol.

In a school referendum, 88 percent of those participating voted to retain him, just the way he is. (Approximately 7.8 percent favored retaining him but perhaps altering his appearance.)

The ad hoc committee's vote and the referendum came after students invited representatives on both sides of the issue to speak at the school.

And, after a thorough investigation, the U.S. Department of Education ruled in 1995 that the mascot did not violate the U.S. Civil Rights Act.

The Human Rights Commission letter concedes: "While we believe the 'Yakoo' is a racist representation of a Native American, we also recognize that legally it can remain."

The letter contends that being legal doesn't make the Yakoo right.

But, if he is legal, shouldn't he be left alone?

Despite the U.S. Department of Education ruling in 1995, Grogan decided to try again to topple the Yakoo.

He filed a complaint last year with the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination. And it was turned down because he is not a Native American and thus cannot be affected by the Yakoo's image.

Interestingly, it was Grogan -- not a Native American -- that filed the complaint.

But Grogan apparently hasn't given up.

Now, for the first time the Quincy Human Rights Commission has its sights trained on the Yakoo.

And with Grogan, a member you can't help wonder if he did a little prodding on the letter.

Principal Louis Ioannelli says the claims in the commission letter are "absurd" and that the school does not tolerate racism, discrimination or harassment against anyone.

The fact of the matter is that the kids at NQHS hold the Yakoo in high esteem and it's difficult to understand why some adults can't see that.

Critics claim the stone hammer is a tomahawk and that the Yakoo is projecting a fighting stance.

Dr. Yacubian doesn't see it that way.

"The hammer," he has said, "denotes hard work. His look is that of determination and perseverance. Critics have miscalculated that whole image."

He and other Yakoo supporters see it as a competitive stance for football, basketball games and track meets.

And, if it is a fighting stance, is that so wrong?

Native Americans down through history have been known to take a fighting stance when the occasion called for it. Custer found that out at Little Bighorn.

Grogan also finds fault with NQHS teams being nicknamed the Red Raiders or Raiders.

If the Yakoo and the Raiders are banned as racist, what else are we going to ban? The names and uniform logos of the Washington Redskins, the Atlanta Braves, the Cleveland Indians, the Chicago Blackhawks? Names and logos in tribute to Native Americans.

And then demand that Notre Dame change its "Fighting Irish" nickname because someone might feel offended that it denotes that all of Irish descent want to fight?

We don't see anyone pushing for that.

Maybe it's time to recall the words of a Native American -- Louella Fallis, a Sioux Indian originally from South Dakota who was among those who spoke at NQHS in 1991.

"The students," she said, "have so much pride behind the mascot that I can't understand the controversy. I don't find anything derogatory about it."

And, she added:

"With all the other problems today -- to take and place it under a microscope -- I'm just appalled."

Today, 11 years later, the problems have gotten bigger. Like terrorism. And maybe another war.

Those are things to be even more concerned about.

The Human Rights Commission and Ed Grogan are entitled to their opinions.

And so are we.

The way we see it, the Yakoo issue has been a case of someone trying to make a mountain out of a molehill.

How many times does the Yakoo have to go on trial?

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1926 POSTCARD view of Hovey Street in Atlantic looking east towards the beach from Wadsworth Street. The empty lots on the left were soon after built upon with the same type of multi-family housing as shown here. At this time this section of Quincy was growing rapidly, new houses were being built on every street. In 1926 the city issued 699 building permits for single and two family dwellings, over half were for wards five and six, which were Atlantic and Wollaston. At the time there were few building regulations and no zoning laws. This street and those around it have single and multi-family dwellings on lots smaller than 4,000 square feet. Henry Frink, a Quincy photographer whose car is parked in the right center, published the postcard.

A Vote For Jimmy Liang

Jimmy Liang is the best person to take Tim Cahill's place on the City Council. He is an example of the quality people the city of Quincy can produce. He has accomplished a great deal with his business in Wollaston.

Clearly, he could have opened a great restaurant anywhere, but he chose Quincy. This shows me that he has great attachment to his hometown. We need more young people like him to be involved.

Jimmy attracted a lot of voters in his first run for office. So many votes that no one should dismiss him as being a candidate who is just for the Asians. Clearly, many people believe that there is room for a decent and capable man with the potential to become a strong leader on the City Council. I believe in Jimmy. I hope the councilors pick Jimmy Liang.

Donald W. Hoffman
Jackson Street

A Vote For John Keenan

Regarding filling Tim Cahill's city council seat, I'm an Asian-American and I would like to see Jimmy Liang fill the seat, but John Keenan should fill it because he has more votes.

This is the democratic process. Even if Keenan had only one more vote than Liang, Keenan should fill the seat. It's only fair, and the only right decision. Jimmy Liang should win a seat by receiving more votes.

Gene Lee

Runner-Up Keenan Should Fill Cahill Seat

The recent Quincy Sun front-page story ("Who Will Fill Cahill's Council Seat?") made me curious. I've been told under current laws or ordinances if a vacancy happens before a certain date (this time Jan. 6, 2003), a special election is needed. If a councilor resigns after that date as Tim Cahill is planning to do, the new councilor would be chosen by the remaining members of the Quincy City Council.

Council President Dan Raymondi, while recognizing that the City Council at large runner-up is usually selected, has stated, "... the councilors may prefer to invite the public to participate in the selection like we have done for school committee and for city auditor."

I remember the zoo atmosphere earlier this year at City Council chambers when I was one of 15 or so candidates vying to replace Mayor Bill Phelan on the School Committee. He still had two years to go in his four-year term. That joint session of the City Council and School Committee was not a pretty sight. The last thing we need this time around is another dog and pony show to pick a replacement for Cahill's vacant council seat.

When I hear polls talking about inviting the public "to participate in the selection," is it my imagination or didn't the public already do this last November at the polls? In that 2001 election, John Keenan finished in fourth place, the runner-up who collected 10,282 votes, 801 votes behind Frank McCauley. Keenan shouldn't have to go politicking or kissing up to get what he already earned at the polls.

Across the Neponset River in Boston, Felix Arroyo is about to become the newest Boston city councilor at-large in January when Councillor Mickey Roache gets sworn in as the Suffolk County Registrar of Deeds.

Arroyo gets to the City Council by way of Boston's city charter. Isn't it time for Quincy to change its city charter in the same way?

The runner-up in Boston moves automatically. Quincy should fill at large vacancies the same way. We don't need polls forcing folks like John Keenan or Jimmy Liang or Brian McNamee to beg for the council seat. And why stop there? Why couldn't I or anyone else seek to replace Tim Cahill on the City Council?

The answer to the "Why" question is simple and easy. The people of Quincy have spoken. The process by which they did was public. An election was held. John Keenan finished in fourth place and should now move into third joining councilors Frank McCauley and Joe Finn in January.

There is nothing left to be vague about. Save the next round of politics for the 2003 council race.

Pearl Harbor Attack Sends City Into Action

Quincy responded with feverish activity to word that the Japanese had attacked Pearl Harbor.

"If the Japanese can bomb Hawaii, which is 3,000 miles away, then the Germans can bomb Quincy, which is only 2,700 miles away."

Mayor Thomas S. Burgin cut short a Cape Cod holiday and returned to confer behind closed doors with Police Chief John J. Avery, Solicitor John D. Smith and Fore River Police Chief Howard H. Dacey.

1 Co., commanded by Capt. John Bower, one of Quincy's two state guard companies, was mobilized and ordered to report to the Armory at 7 p.m. Sunday night.

Z. Cranston Smith, chief air raid warden, sent out a call for 1,000 additional volunteers to augment the force of 30 air raid wardens that were to be graduated on Monday.

Chief Avery directed members of the Quincy Police Department not to leave the city without permission and he cancelled orders to put the Police Boat "Guardian" in winter storage.

Police, alerted by the New Haven Railroad that a Japanese was aboard a southbound train, stopped the train at Wollaston and took him off only to find it was a prominent Chinese laundryman from Weymouth returning from a week-end date in Boston.

Dr. Anderson's Pie Crust

It was a bitter cold blistery morning and the last thing I wanted to do was to go into Boston to see the doctor. However, seeing this doctor was like nothing else when he began asking me if I had written a food column for Thanksgiving.

As I was answering him, he said he had a trick for making pie crust and said he surmised I would already know about it. After he told me what it was I told him I had never heard of it. And so it was with our daughter Rita who drove me that morning for my appointment, and who makes pie crust all the time. One of her tricks was using half unsalted butter and half Crisco for the crust.

Anyway here is the trick for making the pie crust.

Dr. Ronald Anderson's Pie Crust
2 cups flour

1 teaspoon salt
2/3 cups plus two tablespoon shortening
4 tablespoons cold water

And here's the trick. He said he uses one tablespoon white vinegar along with the cold water and said the dough is much easier to handle something to do with the gluten combination.

When I read a recipe, I never like it when you have to refrigerate something before you can finish. But Dr. Anderson has a trick for that also. He keeps the flour refrigerated so that he doesn't have to wait to roll out the crust.

He said his favorite pie to make was apple, and also a raspberry and blueberry combination which sounded delicious.

In between all of this I did manage to get my check-up, but learned something about baking too.

QEN Announces New 'Environmental Teacher' Award

The Quincy Environmental Network (QEN) has created a new award for Quincy educators. The Environmental Teacher of the Year. Purpose of the award is to highlight the work of those educators who have demonstrated a significant commitment to environmental education through their work in the classroom.

"We know there are some terrific teachers in Quincy who are working hard to incorporate environmental education in their classrooms. This award wants to recognize those efforts," said

Steve Perdios, a spokesperson of the QEN.

Dr. Carmen Mariano, assistant superintendent of Quincy Public Schools, expressed his support of the initiative.

"Our earth is fragile, he said. "It is also irreplaceable. So, it must be treasured. It must be protected. What more valuable lessons can we teach than those? And who better to honor than the teachers who share those lessons?"

Teachers, school administration, colleagues, community members and parents can nominate any Quincy public or private school teacher of grades K-12. Teachers are also encouraged to nominate themselves.

Nominees will be evaluated according to several criteria including demonstrated leadership in the area of environmental education and the development of special projects or units about the environment. The winner will be announced in April of 2003 and will receive $300 for the purchase of classroom supplies related to the field of environmental science.

mended cuts "draconian," adding that the Council would make a supplementary appropriation if necessary to ensure that the prospect does not happen.

Currently, the city's fire department has 12 public safety vehicles in service.

William Arienti, president of the Quincy Firefighters Union, told the councillors that the city is already below minimum manning standards recommended by the National Fire Protection Association.

"Any further cuts will make the department ineffective," he said.

The union head said the city failed to hire additional firefighters after some 23 retired during the summer. As a result, he said, the undermanned department was forced to use excessive amounts of overtime.

To date, the department has hired 15 new firefighters but is still eight men short, he said.

Raymond vowed that the Council would find out what caused such a large shortfall in such a short period of time. Fiscal 2003 began only last July 1.

Coughlin expressed dismay that the shortfall was brought to the Council's attention by memo.

"The magnitude of this issue and the growing overtime deficit should have required a request for an appropriation by the administration and an appearance by the fire chief," he said.

"The problem with the overtime deficit is not new and at least in part is due to the failure to hire sufficient firefighters in a timely fashion."

Suggests Stocked Trailer

Gorman Finds Emergency Shelters In Disarray

Emergency Management Director Thomas E. Gorman announced Tuesday he has completed assessing all emergency shelters located in the city.

The assessment, which was conducted with the assistance of Health Commissioner Drew Scheele, included a personal inspection of each shelter by Gorman, former chief of the Quincy Fire Department. The inspection revealed serious problems with the shelter network.

"Every shelter was in a state of disarray," reported Gorman. "The food was not fit for human consumption and most of the medical supplies have been tampered with. The shelters have been very poorly maintained."

TOM GORMAN

In addition to overseeing the clean-up and rehabilitation of the shelters and updating the emergency contact information, Gorman has suggested the city consider using a police grant to purchase a trailer that could be stocked with food, equipment and up-to-date medical supplies.

"The concept has worked well for many years in England," Gorman said. "The trailer is highly mobile, responsive, and is not likely to lose power in a fire, flood or other disaster. The supplies can be rotated and refreshed efficiently and at a reduced cost."

Mayor William Phelan has endorsed the proposal in principle.

"The need for an effective system of providing emergency shelter to the citizens of the city is of paramount importance," he said.

The reception is to help retire Koch's debt from his campaign for Norfolk County treasurer. Suggested donations is $100.

First-Time Homebuyer Grants Awarded To Quincy

Quincy's legislative delegation — Sen. Michael Morrissey and Reps. Ronald Mariano, Bruce Ayers and Stephen Tobin — announces Quincy has been awarded $15,000 from the state's Department of Housing and Community Development (DHCD) to be used to assist first-time homebuyers of low and moderate income.

The grant funding comes from the state's Soft Second Loan program, administered by DHCD and the Massachusetts Housing Partnership Fund (MHP).

"The Soft Second Loan program makes buying a home easier by providing a subsidized second mortgage to go along with a conventional first mortgage from a private lender," Morrissey said.

The mortgage is arranged with 75 percent of the purchase price representing the first mortgage, 20 percent of the purchase price being financed by the soft-second mortgage and the remaining 5 percent being provided as a down payment by the buyer.

Furthermore, the state subsidizes the interest payments on the second mortgage for the first nine years of homeownership.

"Home prices in Quincy have skyrocketed," Ayers said. "The soft-second program will help some families that might not otherwise be able to buy a home."

The program is limited to first-time homebuyers who meet certain income guidelines.

"We encourage any interested parties to contact the MHP Fund at 617-727-7824 or DHCD at 617-727-7824 for information on these loans," Mariano said.

For example, the income limit for a family of four in the Greater Boston area is approximately $58,300. Eligible properties must fall in the following price ranges: $150,000 to $180,000 for condominiums and single-family homes; $180,000 to $225,000 for a two-family home; $200,000 to $275,000 for a three-family home.

"I am pleased that there is help for hard-working people to realize the dream of owning their first home," Tobin said.

The Soft Second Loan program was established with the help of the Massachusetts Bankers' Association, in cooperation with major private lenders, Fannie Mae and a coalition of community groups. More than 6,200 first-time homebuyers have participated in the Soft Second Loan program.

CENTRAL REAL ESTATE
MOVING OUT AND MOVING ON
 Increasing numbers of empty nesters are choosing to sell their big family homes and downsize to residences that are more in tune with their new lifestyles. This trend has been helped along by the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997. This law grants a $500,000 capital gains tax exclusion to couples and a $250,000 exclusion to single filers on the profit of the sale of their primary residence, as long as they have lived in the home for two of the past five years. This extra capital can be put to good use as retirement approaches. Many homeowners purchase a smaller primary residence, plus a vacation or retirement property. The new legislation has also prompted greater activity on the condominium market.
 If you are an empty nester, it is likely that you have specific requirements. At CENTRAL REAL ESTATE, we recognize that each homebuyer has individual preferences. We can review your wish list of features and price range and show you a wide range of homes that meet your criteria. In addition to locating the home of your dreams, we can help sell your current home quickly. Call us at (617) 328-1312 to arrange a consultation. Visit us at 128 Mayor McGrath Highway.
HINT: Empty nesters are encouraged to discuss the sale of the family home with their grown children, who have an emotional investment in the transaction.

Neighborhood Housing Services Awarded $50,000 Grant

Neighborhood Housing Services recently was awarded a $50,000 grant for its work with low/moderate income families through its Financial Literacy program.

Neighborhood Reinvestment Corporation, a federally funded, national non-profit, recently ranked Neighborhood Housing Services' Financial Literacy program best in the nation. NHS has been working with the local FDIC office to adopt a curriculum called "Money Smarts." The program was designed to help adults outside the financial mainstream enhance their money skills and develop positive relationships with financial institutions.

To date, NHS has successfully educated over 200 participants. The average income is $24,800. Nearly 91 percent are renters, 58 percent are minorities and 96 percent women.

Dwayne Watts, Financial Literacy coordinator, who manages the program, said, "Very few of us learn financial management skills from our parents or even through school. Unfortunately, we must learn it through our mistakes — over spending, maxing out our credit cards and generally handling our money poorly."

NHS has included the Financial Literacy program throughout its already successful credit and budget classes, first-time homebuyer workshops and the Section 8 to homeownership program. All workshops are free of charge and held at least once monthly.

For more information, call NHS at 617-770-2227, ext. 31.

QCAP Homebuyer Workshop

Quincy Community Action Programs has scheduled a free homebuyer workshop beginning Wednesday and continuing Dec. 10 and 12.

The sessions will be held from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. at Roche Brothers Supermarket, Conference Room 101, Falls Boulevard, Quincy.

Speakers are real estate professionals. Participants receive a workbook with reference material and a certificate, which is a prerequisite for soft-second mortgages, Mass Housing mortgages and down payment closing cost assistance.

For more information and to register, call 617-479-8181, ext. 172.

Used Car License Granted On Trial With Conditions

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Although the License Board Tuesday granted a request from Mark Brewster, doing business as G & M Auto Sales, 30 Liberty St., for a Motor II used car license, they did it with the following conditions for a six-month trial.

- He is not allowed to sell motorcycles.
- He has to landscape around the building so that cars cannot be seen.
- He has to place signage facing Burgin Parkway and the north side of the building and not on the residential side.
- There shall be no test driving in the neighborhood.
- He can only apply for three dealer plates at the registry of motor vehicles.

- He can only display 40 cars instead of the 50 he requested.
- He must have 17 spaces for cars driven by his employees.
- He is not allowed to use any flags on the vehicles parked on the lot.
- He has agreed to tar and paint the lines for each vehicle on the lot.
- He has to use low impact lighting.
- Hours of operation are from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Saturday and no Sundays.

Before the request was granted, Steve Colman, counsel for Brewster, said a neighborhood meeting was held which was deemed successful as long as the rules placed by the board were followed.

Chairman Joseph Shea read a letter from Ward 4 Councillor Bryan Connolly, who said he attended the meeting and supported the request.

Shea said that because of the increase and interest in the auctions of used cars and vehicles, there are more requests for Motor II Licenses.

Karbert Ng On Dean's List semester at Babson College in Wellesley.

D'Amico Agrees To $1,250 Ethics Fine

Former Ward 4 City Councillor Michael D'Amico has agreed to pay a $1,250 fine for violating the state's conflict of interest laws — but the bigger sword remains dangling over his head.

He is still under federal grand jury indictment for extorting $2,500 from a donut shop to influence a road project in Crown Colony in West Quincy and then lying to the FBI about it.

The fine that D'Amico paid involved his lobbying for a zoning variance for a Penn Street business with the Zoning Board and then accepting landscaping work on his property from the business firm.

D'Amico, 27, served six years on the City Council and was defeated for a fourth two-year term in 2001. When first elected at the age of 20, he was the youngest ever chosen for the City Council.

Quincy's 50th Christmas Parade: Frigid And Fabulous

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The 50th was frigid — but fabulous.

Despite sub-freezing temperatures and bone-numbing wind-chill, thousands braved the elements Sunday and turned out for the 50th annual Quincy Christmas Parade. Many of the spectators who lined the 3-mile route along Hancock Street from School St. in Quincy Center to North Quincy High School were bundled up so much that only their eyes appeared. But the weather-brave were rewarded with a delightfully entertaining and festive array of 100 floats, marching bands and specialty units celebrating the sights and sounds of the holiday season as well as the parade's 50-year history.

Among this year's highlights were appearances by the Boston College "Screaming Eagles" Marching Band, Mopps Clowns in miniature fire engines and trains, and of course, Santa Claus.

Former Red Sox pitching star and fan favorite Luis Lugo, former Red Sox manager Joe Morgan and retired Red Sox announcer Ken Cammiller were among the personalities who participated in the parade. The trio, all past parade grand marshals, returned for an encore performance riding in an open convertible while waving to well-wishers along the route.

Taking a bow this year as grand marshals were members of the Quincy Christmas Parade Festival Committee in celebration of the parade's 50th anniversary. Committee members rode the parade route on a float.

A total of $7,750 in prize money was awarded in the float competition, which this year featured a separate Nostalgia category. Taking top honors were St. John's Church and the Bare Cove Fire Museum.

Here's a list of this year's float and marching band winners:

Raymondi Home Rule Petition Moves Ahead

$1 Million Exemption Sought For Veterans Groups' Property

The statewide drive to increase the real estate tax exemption of certain veterans' organizations took another step forward Monday night.

The City Council voted overwhelmingly to support a home rule petition sponsored by Council President Daniel Raymondi to hike the exemptions for such property in Quincy from $700,000 to $1 million.

But before the veterans can count their savings the petition has to be signed by Mayor William Phelan, passed by the state legislature and signed by the governor.

Raymondi said the petition will be incorporated into a statewide bill before the legislature that would allow veterans organizations through the commonwealth to use the same exemption.

He said Sen. Michael Morrissey and Rep. Ron Mariano have pledged their support for the bill.

Veterans Services Director Henry "Hank" Bradley said the land owned by the George W. Bryan VFW Post on Broad Street was recently assessed at more than $1 million.

As a result, he said, the post would have to pay an additional $9,000 in taxes this year because the property is valued at well over $700,000, the current ex-

Bradley pointed out that veterans organizations such as the VFW, the DAV and the American Legion give much back to the communities in which they operate.

He urged all veterans to contact their representatives and senators to drum up support for the initiative.

Councillor Frank McCauley said he voted in favor of the petition because

Council Meets Monday To Set Tax Classification

The City Council will meet Monday, Dec. 9, to listen to the pros and cons and then set a tax classification for Fiscal 2003.

Mayor William Phelan said the assessors will recommend that the Fiscal 2002 classification of 169 per cent be maintained for Fiscal 2003 and "I concur."

The Council will hold a public hearing on the new classification at 7 p.m. Monday and then meet at 8 p.m. to either continue the old one or set a new one.

Classification is the percentage of the tax rate paid by business and industry compared to 100 per cent of true valuation paid by residential owners.

State law permits the city to tax commercial property at 175 per cent of residences but most cities and towns choose not to tax business at the full 175 per cent.

"The more business pays the less home owners pay," said Phelan. "But when a certain point in classification is reached, business will increase and they will make more and pay more."

"That point is 169 per cent for us."

Tips From Stop & Shop

Safe Food Handling During The Holidays

The Stop & Shop Supermarket Company reminds consumers that during the busy holiday season safe food handling needs to be a priority.

Stop & Shop offers the following tips to help consumers minimize the risks associated with improper food handling.

Cold Storage

"It is important that consumers ensure that perishable foods are properly handled and refrigerated, so that the foods served at holiday events are safe and wholesome," said Faith Weiner, director of government and public affairs.

Storage space is often a problem at holiday time, but even when the weather report says the temperature is 40 degrees, that doesn't mean your porch or garage is cold enough to keep foods at a safe temperature.

Perishable foods, including meat, poultry, seafood, dairy products, eggs and cooked vegetables, cannot be left out above refrigeration temperatures (40 degrees F) for more than two hours. If there is no room in the refrigerator, it's best to put these foods in a cooler and surround them with ice. Styrofoam coolers work just as well as more expensive ones.

Some foods can be safely stored in a cool garage, including butter and margarine, hard and processed cheeses (not soft cheeses such as cream cheese, brie, feta and goat cheese), fruit juices (opened or unopened), fresh fruits, raw, whole vegetables, fruit pies, bread, rolls, cakes, muffins and quick breads, and soft drinks, beer and bottled water.

"Don't forget that leftovers need to be removed from the table and put in refrigeration promptly," Weiner said. She recommends that stuffing and turkey be refrigerated separately in shallow containers within two hours of cooking.

Weiner also recommends consumers use leftover turkey and stuffing within three to four days and gravy within one to two days. "If they will not be consumed within these periods, they should be frozen," she said. She added that consumers should reheat leftovers thoroughly to a temperature of 165 degrees F or until hot and steaming.

Be Smart,

Keep Foods Apart

"Be Smart. Keep Foods Apart" is one of the four Fight Bac! messages from the U.S. Department of Agriculture. According to Weiner, "Cross-contamination occurs when foods that consumers eat raw, such as salads, fruits and vegetables or foods already cooked, become contaminated with bacteria from raw meat, poultry, seafood or their juices."

Cross-contamination can occur during food handling and preparation in a number of ways. Here are some tips to prevent cross-contamination:

- Safely Separate: Separate raw meat, poultry, eggs and seafood from other foods in your shopping cart, on kitchen counters and in your refrigerator.
- Seal It: To prevent juices from raw meat, poultry or seafood from dripping onto other foods in the refrigerator, place these raw foods in sealed containers or plastic bags.
- Lather Up: Wash cutting boards, dishes and counter tops with hot, soapy water after preparing each food item and before you go on to the next item.
- Take Two: If possible, use one cutting board for fresh produce and a separate one for raw meat, poultry and seafood.
- Clean Your Plate: Never place cooked food back on the same plate or cutting board that previously held raw food.

For more food safety tips, visit Stop & Shop's Web site (www.stopandshop.com), the Fight Bac! Web site (www.fightbac.org) or call the USDA Meat and Poultry hotline at 800-535-4555.

A Message From South Shore Mental Health Jingle Blues?

By THIERRY GUEDJ, Ph.D.

Many people think of the holiday season as a time of happiness and fun. Unfortunately, for some people it can also be a time of stress, loneliness, depression, conflict or anxiety.

The Holiday Blues

For some of us the holidays can be downright depressing. Several factors are known to contribute to this phenomenon, including stress, fatigue, unrealistic expectations and financial constraints. People who do not become depressed may develop other stress responses, such as headaches, excessive drinking, overeating and difficulty sleeping.

Coping With Stress, Depression

- Don't try to do it all. Keep expectations for the holiday season manageable. Make a list and prioritize the important activities. Be realistic about what you can and cannot do.
- Leave "yesteryear" in the past and look toward the future. Life brings changes. Each season is different and can be enjoyed in its own way. Don't set yourself up for disappointment by comparing today with the "good ol' days."

- Do something for someone else. Try volunteering some time to help others.
- Enjoy activities that are free, such as driving around to look at holiday decorations.
- Be aware that excessive drinking will only increase your feelings of depression.
- Try something new. Celebrate the holidays in a new way.
- Spend time with supportive and caring people. Reach out and make new friends or contact someone you have not heard from for awhile.
- Save time for yourself. Let others share responsibility of activities.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.
CHOOSING A REPLACEMENT

When teeth are lost, the gaps must be filled with dentures, bridges, or implants. Dentures feature artificial teeth attached to a plate, which "clicks" into place using clips on adjacent teeth. Dentures require removal for cleaning and must be adjusted periodically. A dental bridge is a permanently fixed replacement that is anchored to teeth adjacent to the gap. This affords a more natural feel than dentures, but it does necessitate the modification of the anchor teeth (crown removal). Implants are placed directly in the bone. When the bond between implant and bone is complete, the implant becomes an anchor for replacement teeth or dentures. Implants offer the most natural look and feel.

This column on tooth replacement options has been brought to you in the interest of better dental health. We discuss all the treatment options available, and our recommendations are always in the best interest of our patients. We feel a deep responsibility and commitment to provide you the very best care with state-of-the-art technology. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment for high quality dental care. Let us help you keep your teeth for a lifetime. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Because artificial teeth collect plaque, they must be cleaned in the same way that natural teeth are.

Quincy 12, North Quincy 7 In 70th Annual Thanksgiving Game

Presidents Pin Holiday Win On Red Raiders

By CHRIS POISSON

Following his team's 12-7 loss in the 70th annual Thanksgiving Day game, North Quincy High head coach Tony Green first delivered compliments and showed respect to fellow Squantum resident Bob Noble and his Quincy High program.

"Quincy played great," said Green, who finished his second year at the helm. "Give coach Noble his due. Like I said, they're a couple years ahead of us in their development. He's taken the program and they're doing really well. We expect to be that way shortly."

Responded Noble, "I accept the compliment that he thinks we're two or three years ahead of him. Actually, I think we're only five points ahead of him. I look at it from that perspective. Coach Green does have them going in the right direction. Believe me, no one has to tell me, I've been there."

He certainly has. With its 37th overall Turkey Day victory (same score as last year), Quincy continues its acceleration toward becoming a high school football power. Since Noble took over four years ago, the Presidents have transformed from a 1-10 team to a 6-4 league contender this year, its second straight winning season.

And the Thanksgiving game is another success story. In all four years Noble has been able to raise the championship trophy with his players as they celebrate in the south end zone. If he should be fortunate to win next year, Noble will match legendary coach Bill Sullivan with the most consecutive series victories.

"It feels just as good as it did when we won one, two and three in a row," Noble said. "To win four in a row is a tremendous accomplishment in this series. I feel very privileged to be mentioned with some of the people of the past in this great series. For myself, the kids and the coaching staff it's a great thing."

As for the seniors, they sort of exacted revenge against their rival class. "These guys considered the fact that they had not, in their minds, beaten this North Quincy class," Noble said. "They lost to them as freshmen and they lost to them as JV players. They believed they had to rectify the past—that they had never beaten these guys."

For North Quincy (4-7), meanwhile, another senior class walked off Veterans Memorial Stadium for the final time broken hearted. However, when those seniors look back at the season there will be highlights to remember.

The one-point loss to Old Colony League champion Barnstable when many expected a rout, followed by a three-game winning streak including the improbable comeback against Silver Lake top the list.

"We had already discussed the scenario of a win today or a loss today," Green said. "Regardless of what happened they've helped to turn the program around and they've showed marked improvement."

"It would have been nice; it would have been the exclamation point to win. The kids are dying to win and they're devastated now. I'm sure it will be painful for now but eventually they'll realize what they did with the program."

As for the game, a storm the previous day created horrid field conditions—a frozen tundra with patches of ice and snow early to a mud bath by game's end.

"When it was frozen it was hard to run on and when it thawed it was hard to run on," Green said.

The weather element was especially evident early. On the second play of the game North Quincy coughed up the ball and Quincy senior defensive back and captain Mike Sullivan pounced on it for the recovery.

And on Quincy's third play, a deflected Kevin O'Connell pass went in and out of his receiver's hands and into the hands of North Quincy senior quad-captain and all-star linebacker Darryl Zoia for an interception—the first and only interception for the senior all-star quarterback.

After North Quincy muffed a snap on a punt attempt, Quincy received excellent field position on its second possession at the NQ 37. The Red Raiders' defense stood strong, though, as Quincy attempted a 41-yard field goal by senior Thiago Goes, which came up short in the frigid temperatures.

On Quincy's next possession, it received a bit of a spark when O'Connell scrambled 17 yards, drilling North Quincy senior all-star Chris Dolbear backwards at the end of the run, which gave the Presidents a first down at their 45 as the first quarter expired.

"It should not be interpreted that O'Connell's soft because he doesn't have to do any of the banging," said Noble in reference to the quarterback at Quincy only playing offense. "He's still a tough kid."

Senior wingback and captain Matt Ramponi racked up 20 yards on three straight carries and junior all-star tailback J.J. Niamkey followed with a 21-yard jaunt to the NQ 14. On the run, Niamkey surpassed the 1,000-yard mark to become the first Quincy runner to reach that plateau in about seven to eight years.

On third down, junior tailback Roger Palermo sniffed out the end zone from 6 yards away to give Quincy a 6-0 lead with 7:55 left in the half. The extra point failed.

Quincy finished the game with 225 rushing yards. Ramponi (86 yards, 17 carries) and Palermo (54 yards, 5 carries) each had more yards than Niamkey (50 yards, 10 carries), as their power running proved to be more effective than Niamkey's speed and elusiveness on the slippery and muddy turf.

"It was a mudder's game," Noble said. "We went more

CHANGING TIRE SIZE

If you are considering changing the tires on your vehicle to a different size from the original tire, there are several things to consider. To begin with, many modern vehicles have had their suspensions designed for the best ride and handling to a specific size; and even grand, of tire. If so, the vehicle manufacturer might, in cooperation with a tire company, require a tire that is tuned specifically to their vehicle's ride, handling, and noise characteristics. With this in mind, ask the dealership if your vehicle falls into this category. If not, be aware that large upward changes in tire width and profile may mean that the tire is no longer appropriate to the rim.

If you are thinking about changing your tire size ask us

HINT: When changing to a new tire size, check any differences in the number of revolutions per mile between the old tire and the new one, as this may affect the accuracy of the speedometer.

CHRIS DOLBEARE (31) has plenty of open field as he picks up 10 yards for a first down at the Quincy 49-yard line. Dolbeare rushed for 91 yards and scored North Quincy's touchdown with 45 seconds left in the game.

MR. THANKSGIVING — Junior tailback Roger Palermo (20) makes a move on North Quincy's Chris Dolbeare (31). Palermo added his second 6-yard TD run of the game later on the drive. Three years ago he scored four times and rushed for over 250 yards in the freshman game.

with Matt Ramponi and Roger Palermo because they're more straight-ahead style power runners than Namkey is."

In the second half, the Presidents orchestrated a 66-yard scoring drive on their second series that carried over into the fourth quarter, taking six minutes off the clock.

On fourth- and 9th the NQ 9, O'Connell (13) of 10-58 yards rolled right, eluded a defender and tied a 16-yard strike to senior tight end J.D. Hyacinthe — breaking the 1,000-yard mark for the season with the completion.

Three plays later, Palermo again found the end zone, running off right tackle from 6 yards out for a 12-0 lead with 8:26 left in the game. Senior captain Mike Cox came up short on the 2-point rush.

Palermo, who did not play football last season, has carved a name for himself on Turkey Day. Three years ago he rushed for four touchdowns and over 250 yards to lead the freshman team to a win.

"As always seems to be the case, there's someone that you haven't really seen all year or hasn't had that kind of notoriety that steps up," Noble said. "As much as the two touchdowns were tremendous, the real story was earlier in the game when Ramponi hurt his arm and we put Roger in for him at middle linebacker."

North Quincy fumbled on its next possession and Hyacinthe recovered at the NQ 47. Palermo reeled off a beautiful 26-yard run, spinning and shaking off defenders down to the 9. Two plays later, though, Quincy fumbled the ball at the 2 and it rolled out of the end zone for a touchdown.

"We always seem to make it very interesting," Noble said. "I really wish we wouldn't. We should have had the ball first-and-goal at the 2 and put them away at that point."

The Red Raiders took full advantage, showing the resiliency and heart they've had all season. Running the no-huddle offense, senior quarterback and quad-captain Kevin Holleran (5 of 12, 58 yards) and Dolbeare led them 80 yards for a score.

On third-and-1 at the Quincy 40, Holleran avoided a sack, wiggling his leg out of a Quincy defender's grasp and weaving 13 yards for a first down. However, Holleran was shaken up on the play and junior back-up Jimmy Burke filled in for the rest of the drive.

Dolbeare (91 yards, 19 carries) did the rest, picking up the remaining 27 yards including a 2-yard TD plunge with 45 seconds left, his 13th of the season. Senior Lindy Laze added the extra point, which bounced off the crossbar after being tipped at the line of scrimmage.

"The desire and the intensity of the North Quincy kids are second to none," said Green of his team's late touchdown march. "Chris Dolbeare had a monster game. He's the go-to guy. He has break-away speed and he can carry guys on his back. He's a very strong player."

"Defensively, we just played great all day," said Noble, whose team held North Quincy to 179 total yards. "Until that last drive we did a good job containing the Dolbeare kid, who is a tremendous football player. I don't know what he ended up with, but I would have to say they were hard-earned yards. He didn't really break anything big on us and that was our key to beating them."

Senior all-star defensive end Anthony Boyle recorded a sack and a pass deflection to lead Quincy's outstanding defensive performance.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Contentment seems to be a scarce commodity these days. Society seems discontented with many aspects of today's ways and manner of living. Faults in people and systems are seen... sometimes magnified... in the endless search for changes and improvements. The 'green pastures' yearned for seem far away, inaccessible. Much of this discontent is understandable and in some cases justified. Justified or not, a sad truth is evident.

The reassuring words - "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want; He makes me lie down in green pastures" seem to be too often ignored. Too often forgotten in the chase of imagined rainbows. Actually the most beautiful green pastures can be close by. They can be felt and seen when man finds contentment in an enjoyable relationship with God; the Maker of ALL green pastures.

BUSINESSMAN ROBERT CURRY speaks in favor of 169 percent classification at Monday night's City Council public hearing. Lined up behind him waiting to speak are Alan Cousin, president Quincy Taxpayers Association who favored 175 percent; business community representatives Edward Keohane and Daniel Flynn, Jr., Maralin Manning, executive director Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, and Anthony Agnitti, president Quincy Business Council, all favoring 169 percent.

Consulting Firm Report:

Faxon Field QHS 'Least Damaging' Site

A report prepared by Quincy's consultant firm of Camp, Dresser, McKee identifies Faxon Field as "the least environmentally damaging" site for a new Quincy High School.

The report has been forwarded to the Army Corps of Engineers, which is required to issue permits and set conditions for construction of the school building in a wetland.

"Of all the options, this one is the least environmentally damaging alternative," said Mayor William Phelan. "This is the city's consultants presenting their analysis to the Army Corps of Engineers."

The city's engineers have made an analysis of all the potential sites and came to the conclusion that Faxon

Field is really the only site.

"That goes into an application to the Army Corps of Engineers for a permit to build on that site. They have the ability to agree with that or say 'no' this isn't right."

Phelan said the report "confirms my initial instincts that the only alternative is Faxon Field. There really is no other alternative."

Council Votes 5-4 To Keep 169% Tax Classification

By DELORES LORUSSO

The City Council, by the scant margin of one vote, chose to continue tax classification for Fiscal 2003 at 169 per cent, thus fixing the residential tax rate at $13.62 per thousand and the commercial, industrial and personal property (CIPP) rate at $28.18.

The rate for Fiscal 2002 was $13.15 for residential property and $26.91 for CIPP, an increase of 47 cents and $1.27 respectively. It means that the owner of an average home in Quincy will pay $111 more in real estate taxes for Fiscal 2003.

Mayor William Phelan praised the Council vote as "the correct one toward achieving the goal of keeping residential tax bills as low as we can while keeping a vibrant business tax base we don't get by taxing business at the maximum."

Ward 1 City Councillor Greg Hanley proposed raising the classification to 175 per cent, the legal limit that can be charged commercial property in relation to that

Phelan And Sheets Team Up Again

36 More Leaders To Man Salvation Army Kettle

Thirty-six more community leaders including the teaming of four mayors will man a Christmas kettle in Quincy Center today (Thursday) and Friday to help the Salvation Army brighten the holiday season for the needy.

Mayor William Phelan and former Mayor James Sheets will return as a bell-ringing team today at 1 p.m.

Former Mayors Arthur Tobin and Walter Hannon will precede them at 11 a.m.

Another mayor, present City Councillor Frank McCauley, was among 16 community leaders who rang the bell last week.

This is the sixth year community leaders have volunteered to man a "Celebrity Kettle" at 1489 Hancock St., former site of Ryder's Home Decor store next to the Alha Restaurant.

Mayor Phelan has proclaimed December "Salvation Army Month in Quincy," urging residents "to join in providing for those less fortunate this holiday season."

Funds raised will go directly to the Salvation Army's Quincy Temple Corps, 6 Baxter St., to aid local families.

"We are most grateful to these community leaders who are taking time from their busy schedules and to other volunteers who are playing a major role in our Christmas Kettle effort," said Major Doug Jones of Quincy Temple Corps.

There are still openings for more volunteers, he said. Anyone who can give some time at a kettle is asked to call the Quincy Temple Corps at 617-472-2345.

"We would be grateful for any help we can get," Jones said.

'To Begin To Rebuild Quincy's Financial Future'

Phelan Proud Of $3.4 Million Surplus

Mayor William Phelan called it the top accomplishment of his first year in office.

"The city of Quincy entered the new fiscal year in the red with more than $5.6 million in negative fund balance," he said. "We have taken the steps necessary to begin to rebuild Quincy's financial future."

With that, he announced that the city would end the year with a $3.4 million surplus which could alleviate an expected shortfall in the next fiscal year.

The surplus of $3,425,000 was sent to the City Council to be placed in reserve for appropriation to complete the Fiscal 2003 budgeting process in the coming months.

The Council approved the move by a 5-2 vote with Council President Daniel Raymondi and Joseph Newton in opposition and Greg Hanley abstaining.

"Given the depleted state of our reserve, a vote to approve was almost mandatory," said Councilor Frank

WILLIAM PHELAN

McCauley, the Council's financial watchdog.

Phelan said he was optimistic that the reserve for appropriation will be enough to finish the current fiscal year in the black with a substantial amount available for placement in the stabilization fund.

"In a city the size of Quincy," he said, "the stabilization account should have at least 5 percent of the total overall budget. Currently there is little more than one percent in our stabilization account or approximately $2.1 million."

Quincy To Receive $5 Million For Public Housing Upgrades

The city of Quincy is due a total of $5,442,356 for construction projects and planning of future repairs and upgrades to public housing under the 2002 Housing Bond Bill signed by acting Gov. Jane Swift last August.

"State-aided public housing is essential to our communities," said Rep. Ron Mariano. "It is important that we continue to invest in the preservation of these housing units so they remain a viable resource for many years to come."

The award to Quincy is part of $350 million pledged by the state for a variety of essential repairs, renovations and planning aimed at helping maintain the state's housing supply and improving the quality of life for the residents.

The Housing Authorities will receive actual payments only once work has commenced and invoices are submitted to the Department of Housing and Community Development.

Phelan Criticizes Swift's MWRA Cut

$140 Hike Seen In Water, Sewer Bills

Quincy's ratepayers are faced with a $140 increase in their water and sewer bills as a result of acting Gov. Jane Swift's action in eliminating the MWRA's $38.7 million rate relief fund from the 2003 state budget.

"The governor acted in a haphazard way without giving proper thought to its impact," said Mayor William Phelan. "What it amounts to is the equivalent of higher taxes on homeowners in Quincy.

"She took the path of least resistance without thinking of the consequences."

Phelan indicated that he will press the MWRA to use part of its $125 million reserve fund to make up the $38.7 million loss rather than place the burden on the ratepayers.

This could be done through Jay MacRitchie, the city's representative of the MWRA board, which was scheduled to meet yesterday (Wednesday) to discuss "a range of options."

The MWRA has been reluctant to tap into the $125 million reserve fund, which they contend has already been factored into its five-year strategy for holding down rate increases.

Swift initiated $60.7 million in state program cuts, trimming the MWRA's rate relief fund in lieu of cutting social service and health care programs in an effort to make up a deficit.

Yardwaste Collection Extended One Week

Because of last week's snowstorm, yardwaste collection by the DPW will be extended one week through Friday, Dec. 20, Mayor William Phelan announces.

"This is an extra effort by the city to cooperate with residents who wish to do that last bit of cleanup but were unable to do so," Phelan said.

Yardwaste will be collected on the regular trash day and should be curbside by 7 a.m. It should also be placed apart from regular trash so as to avoid any confusion. The residential drop-off for yardwaste the DPW (55 Sea St.) will be open until Dec. 30, Monday-Friday, 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. and on Saturdays from 9 a.m. to noon.

Gift Suggestion, Anyone?

We don't often push Christmas gifts in this space. But, if you happen to have a family member or friend who just can't get enough of Quincy politics, here's a suggestion:

City Councillor and former Mayor Frank McCauley has a limited number of his highly acclaimed political history of Quincy published in 2000 as part of the city's millennium celebration.

And he will have a book signing Saturday from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at his home, 210 Manet Ave., Houghs Neck.

The book, Quincy, Massachusetts: A Political History, 1889-2000 covers 111 years from when Quincy became a city to Mayor James Sheets' sixth term inaugural, Jan. 3, 2000.

The 353-page hardcover first edition has biographical sketches, a listing of all the 456 people who served in elective office during that period, photos, historic facts, anecdotes, etc.

And McCauley's personal selection of "The Mayoral Hall of Fame." He tapped only six of the 28 mayors for that honor, and, in alphabetical order:

Charles Bryant, Thomas Burgin, Amelio Della Chiesa, Walter Hannon, Thomas McGrath and James McIntyre.

McCauley, who tells why he selected those six, says he listed them alphabetically because ranking them 1 to 6 would be difficult because they are of different eras.

It would be like trying to determine, he says, "who was the better fighter, Jack Dempsey or Joe Louis, or who was the better ball player, Lou Gehrig or Ted Williams?"

McCauley eliminated Sheets from consideration because he was still in office at the time the book was published.

And, of course, disqualified himself because he was both the author and the one making the Hall of Fame selection.

But McCauley, who served four terms, muses: "I don't think I was too bad a mayor. I called the shots as I saw them."

Of the 28 mayors in the 111-year span, only five were full-time. Hannon was the first in 1972, followed by Joseph LaRaia, Arthur Tobin, McCauley and Sheets. (William Phelan today makes six.)

McCauley has special admiration for John Miller, though he didn't make the Hall of Fame.

Miller took office in 1914 when the mayoral term was only one year and was soon diagnosed with cancer.

Under the city charter back then, a special election would be called if a mayor vacated the office before the last 90 days of his term.

In Miller's case, if he died or had to leave office before Oct. 5, a special election would have to be called to elect his successor.

McCauley says Miller had a determined deathbed wish:

"As he lay dying, he wished he would live long enough to spare the city the cost of a special election."

Volunteers Sought To Aid Seniors' Taxes

Volunteers are being sought to help senior citizens with their income taxes beginning in February and continuing three days a week until April 15.

The volunteers will be trained by Madeline Papile of Quincy, who has set aside five days in January in which to donate her time and expertise to the IRS/AARP Tax-Aide Program.

Volunteers are asked to call the Quincy Council on Aging, Department of Elder Services, at 617-376-1246 and ask for Clea or Lena.

Miller, who was only 60, lived to Oct. 6 -- beating the special election requirement by just one day. City Council President Joseph Whiton, who would later be elected mayor himself, finished out the remaining days of Miller's term.

"Imagine," says McCauley -- one of the city's most frugal mayors -- "lying there dying and thinking of just living long enough to save the city money."

Among the book's tidbits:

Of the 456 people who served in elective office in the books' time frame only 20 were women. That, despite the fact there are more women voters than men.

For McCauley and his wife, Sandra, the book was a two-year labor of love. He did the research and writing (in longhand) and she did the typing and assisted in the editing.

And, they did it for free. No fee. All proceeds go to the city.

More than 800 of the 1000 first edition copies have been sold.

McCauley has a limited number which will be available Saturday. Price: $21 (including tax.) (Make checks out to the City of Quincy.)

McCauley will autograph copies purchased Saturday. And if anyone who already has a copy and would like it autographed, he will be happy to oblige. Just stop by.

For anyone who likes Quincy politics, this is one to have.

MILESTONES: Fr. William McCarthy, former pastor of St. John's Church after whom Father Bill's Place is named, marked his 76th birthday Monday night at a get together with friends at the Common Market on Willard St.

It wasn't a fundraiser but there were free will donations to help the homeless shelter which is having difficulty trying to accommodate the ever growing number of homeless.

Father Bill, who was pastor at St. John's for 25 years (1977 to 1995) is now assisting at two churches on the Cape: Our Lady of Victory in Centerville and Our Lady of Hope in Barnstable.

He's doing his thing down there, too. Collected a couple hundred turkeys at Our Lady of Victory for dinners for the needy.

He still makes it back to Quincy a couple days a week to help the homeless at Father Bill's.

The Spirit of '76.

WOLLASTON'S ED SPARGO, "Quincy's Ambassador of Good Health," obviously practices what he preaches.

Ed, who has been on a one-man crusade for many years sending out literature on how to enjoy and live a long, healthy life, recently celebrated his 95th birthday. And is still crusading.

AND, BILL DWYER, long-time political observer who once was a candidate himself for state representative, just turned 81.

Bill had a popular gas station on Sea St. in Merrymount some years ago where you filled up on gas and caught up on the latest buzz on the political front.

Bill still keeps a sharp eye on the political scene especially now that his daughter-in-law Elaine Dwyer is a member of the school committee.

Birthday congratulations to all three.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS POSTCARD VIEW of Squantum in the 1920s shows the intersection of Parke Avenue, East Squantum and Dorchester Streets. At that time this was known as Post Office Square. On the right is Watt's Variety Store where the Squantum post office was located for more than 30 years. That building has been enlarged and is now the home of the Ralph DiMattia Sailmaking business. In 1915 Realtor John R. Nelson built the building on the left. He was the agent for the Lillie B. Titus Squantum estate that had been divided into more than 900 house lots. Nelson's office was in the lower right storefront. The second floor was a hall for meetings where the first Catholic Mass in Squantum was held. The hall was later converted into apartments. On this site today is Trevore House, a larger apartment complex built in 1963.

The Yakoo: A Harmless High School Mascot

The type of person who takes offense at an innocuous and harmless high school mascot is the same type of person who steps into the shower to brush their teeth to conserve water.

Often, they are people, who, while professing to be liberal, are in fact reactionary, having no tolerance for any world view but their own. Humorous and intellectually shallow, they distrust free speech and the free exchange of ideas.

The Quincy Human Rights Commission appears to be made up of such people.

That a group of adults would call an entire high school racist and in so doing denigrate young people is shameful. The mayor should dismiss the current Quincy Human Rights Commission and replace it with real liberals or at least adults.

On the other hand, maybe they're right. Let's change the name of Squaw Rock in Squantum to Native American Significant Other Boulder. Then again, let's not give them any ideas!

Takes Issue With Delahunt On Iraq Article

In response to Congressman William Delahunt's article in The Sun that asks the question, "Would John Adams Wage War Against Iraq?" the congressman professes to crystal ball gaze into the mind of our city's celebrated former son and guess at what he would say in this matter.

Delahunt plays the popular liberal Democrat's game by stating that "... Adams was a man of peace with a deep passion for justice," leaving us with the unspoken conclusion that Bush is a lover of war with a deep passion for injustice. His analogies are far from the mark and I would ask the gentleman if he considers our forefathers' decision to wage war against the injustice of the British, to represent the acts of men who loved war and had a passion for justice?

It is so easy to talk of winning the peace, but the congressman offers no alternative approach. We are supposed to believe that we can reason with a madman who is bent on acquiring the means to blackmail the world.

I would ask the man what kind of world would we live in today if our leaders had taken his position when faced with the Axis powers of World War II?

I am thankful that when I grew up in Quincy, it was at a time when our schools taught the lessons of those passionate men and women who fought and died for the nation where John Quincy Adams was able to stand up and fight for the principles that he believed in.

Thank God that America still has men of Bush's integrity and sense of responsibility to the people of this nation.

Great High School Football TV Coverage

I would like to write in and congratulate the coverage by Quincy Access Television of the North Quincy-Quincy football game.

At first I thought it was a major network, i.e. NBC, ESPN. The announcers calling the game were excellent. The sideline reporter was excellent, too, with his on-field presence, updating the field conditions, injuries, etc., with cut-ins, going back and forth without missing a beat.

I thought the production was a first-class effort. You have to know a lot of stuff had to put this production together and hopefully this is signs of things to come. So again, congratulations on outstanding coverage of the Thanksgiving Day football game.

West Quincy Beer-Wine License Rejected Again

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Charlie Debrezeni struck out again.

The owner of Anna's Hungarian Kitchen on 258 Willard St. ran into another stone wall as he again asked the License Board Tuesday to grant him a beer and wine license.

Bruce Wood, the landlord and owner of the property leased by Anna's Kitchen, who does not want a beer and wine license on his property, stood before the board at the onset and added "why are we here?" He said "nothing has changed" since Debrezeni applied last year. He cited parking as one of the issues.

Debrezeni said he thought the fact that Wood also serves on the Zoning Board it was a "conflict" for him to make a decision.

It had been a year since Debrezeni had applied for a beer and wine license and the law states that after one year they may re-apply.

According to Wood who reminded the board that the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission (ABCC) had upheld the License Board decision to deny the license. Wood repeated his words and said "nothing has changed" since the last application.

Debrezeni said something did change and then showed a letter to the board with many endorsements made from the Boston newspapers to USA Today. Chairman Joseph Shea read glowing endorsements from customers as well as those favorable E-mails.

Debrezeni appealed to the board and said the purpose of the license was to "enhance the dining pleasure of our customers."

He further stated that the restaurant is very small with just a few tables and no bar area. He said there were no plans or possibilities for expansion.

Shea read a letter from Maralin Manning, executive director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, in which she commended the restaurant citing it as one of its kind in Quincy, but added that because of all the problems in trying to procure a beer and wine license, she recommended that Debrezeni try to re-locate.

Shea had said earlier that he and the board had tried to re-locate the restaurant to no avail.

Wood said when Debrezeni took over the restaurant which was once called The Egg & I and then later Depot Diner, the concept was for breakfast and lunch as it had always been.

And then later, he said Debrezeni began serving dinner also.

After Shea read the history of the applications and the decision by the ABCC, upholding the board's decision, Debrezeni accused Shea of "influencing the members" before any vote could be taken.

Shea asked Debrezeni to "retract that statement"

However, before anyone else spoke Walter White, director of inspectional services and a board member, repeated what the landlord had said and reiterated, "why are we here?"

He explained to Debrezeni that Shea was only giving the board a history of what had happened previously.

White said he agreed with the landlord and said Wood has a liability on his property. He said the request was "not appropriate" since the landlord does not want it. He said landlords have certain rights and the board has to respect his decision not to have a beer and wine license on his property.

White said there was "no connection" between the zoning and license board.

Debrezeni, who seemed discouraged even before a vote was taken, said the proceedings were all "interpreted favorable" to Wood.

The board voted unanimously to deny Debrezeni's request.

Food Donations Sought

Our Neighbors Need Your Help

By LINDA STICE
Mayor's Office of Constituent Services

For years I had on my bulletin board a quote that went something like this: "Be kind to strangers, for thus some have served angels unaware."

Right now, the "strangers" in Quincy who need help are our neighbors — families with children, single people, the disabled and the elderly who cannot make ends meet.

The agencies listed below work with our neighbors to address the most basic of needs: the need for food. They may not be motivated by the possibility that they are serving an angel. They are, however, kind to strangers, year in and year out.

This year, more than ever, they need the help of us all. As one staff person said, "A lot of the people who were donors to our food pantry in the past are now in need of help themselves." They would welcome your donation.

Fair Foods, Fore River Club House, 16 Nevada Road, 617-376-1376, is a food pantry that serves all of Quincy. They don't have storage for meats or produce, but welcome donations of non-perishables such as rice, pasta, spaghetti sauce, canned fruit and vegetables, cereals, macaroni and cheese, tuna and peanut butter. Open for donations Monday through Thursday, 3 to 5 p.m.

The Pantry Shelf, 776 Hancock St., 617-773-6203, is a food pantry that serves all of Quincy. They need donations of turkeys, fresh produce, and staples such as pastas, sauces, boxed and canned goods, bath soap, laundry detergent and toiletries. Open weekdays 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Quincy Crisis Center, 282 Billings Road, 617-847-6967, provides food deliveries to elderly shut-ins, the disabled and others who cannot visit food pantries. They serve all of Quincy. They welcome donations of non-perishables such as cranberry sauce, stuffing, pasta, canned corn, green beans and peas, tuna, macaroni and cheese, peanut butter, jams/jellies, cereal, rice, toiletries and diapers. Open weekdays 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Seaside Advocacy Group, 15 Bicknell St., 617-479-0828, is a food pantry that serves Ward 1. They have experienced a 20 percent increase in requests for help in the past six months. They welcome donations of 10-12 pound turkeys, soups, macaroni and cheese, canned and boxed foods, stuffing, instant potatoes, toilet paper, shaving cream and razors, shampoo. Open Monday, Wednesday, Friday 9 a.m. to noon.

Salvation Army Emergency Food Pantry, 6 Baxter St., 617-472-2345. The Salvation Army serves all of Quincy, providing a three-day supply of food to families in need. They appreciate donations of turkeys, stuffing, fresh produce, non-perishable canned and dry goods, shampoos, detergents, toiletries, toilet paper and diapers. Open weekdays 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Southwest Community Center, 388 Granite St., 617-471-0796. This food pantry serves all of Quincy and welcomes donations of turkeys, fresh produce and bread, canned and boxed foods and toiletries, especially large sized disposable diapers. Open weekdays 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

THE SECURITY STOP

10 DENSMORE STREET, QUINCY (across from Adams Inn)

Gutro Suggests Mitigations From T's Capital Program

Ward 5 City Councillor Douglas Gutro, commenting on the MBTA's five-year Capital Investment Program, has suggested that the agency make Quincy "a pilot city where cleaner buses are phased in to reduce pollution."

"Many transportation agencies across the country have taken steps to purchase cleaner burning buses, use cleaner burning fuels of retrofit older diesel buses," he said.

"Reduction in diesel emissions will reduce particulate matter, which exacerbates respiratory illnesses, especially in seniors and children."

The cleaner burning buses was one of three comments dispatched to the MBTA's Budget Department by Gutro, who has two MBTA subway stations (Quincy Center and Wollaston) and one bus barn (Hancock Street) in his ward.

DOUG GUTRO

He requested the agency to supply "hooded catch basins" that separate solids and cleanse pollution from the runoff at the bus barn for the protection of a nearby waterway.

"The Hancock Street bus barn sits adjacent to one of Quincy's most treasured natural areas — Black's Creek," he said. "Here, a myriad of birds and wildlife flourish. Bus barn catch basins drain oil, debris and other matter directly into Black's Creek.

"I would ask the MBTA to purchase hooded catch basins... The Metropolitan District Commission is purchasing such catch basins for installation along Wollaston Beach."

Gutro also requested that the MBTA extend a wall as a noise buffer along the tracks from North Quincy to Quincy Center stations.

"A decade ago," he said, "the T installed a wall on one side of its tracks as they pass from North Quincy to Quincy Center. Residents living on the other side of these tracks deserve equal protection from train noise."

"With the increase in commuter rail service traveling through Quincy, I urge you to include a financing plan that includes a noise buffer (e.g. wall) for the citizens of Quincy who live on both sides of the train tracks."

Few Viable Bidders Seen For MARAD's Shipyard Auction

The U. S. Maritime Administration (MARAD) has received only a few bids on 130 acres of Fore River Shipyard property and it is likely, says Congressman William Delahunt, that there will be few viable bidders at the auction.

"I hope I'm wrong," he told a gathering of some 100 Quincy Point residents and business leaders at the St. Joseph's School cafeteria. The auction is Jan. 16; bids are due Dec. 15.

"There had been a number of proposals and requests to bid but when you look at what happened to the MWRA property, that causes me some concern."

"We're looking at an economy that is soft. This is being market driven and clearly there are pressures from the federal government to have the property disposed of."

"So we have to be realistic. We ought not to raise expectations. If you think something will happen overnight, it's not."

The property in question was taken over by MARAD to satisfy a debt after would-be developer Massachusetts Heavy Industries went bankrupt.

Delahunt reaffirmed that the auction will take place as planned Jan. 16.

But, he added, "there is a possibility that MARAD may not transfer the parcel but may maintain title for themselves, and work out some arrangement with potential bidders for a direct sale."

"That is something I had not considered before so the whole aspect of the auction may be moot but obviously this is a critical time frame and we need to be mindful of who has applied."

"We will have more information apparently after Dec. 31."

Delahunt indicated that there will be meetings with MARAD and local elected and appointed officials will have a chance to interview the potential buyers.

"I look forward to that process and to getting as much information as possible," he said.

Delahunt urged patience with the process and suggested that full development of the old shipyard property may well take a decade or more.

told the assembly that he would "much prefer to see MARAD take title to that property at the foreclosure or sale."

"They may well wind up doing that unless there is a bidder who can give assurances that they will work with the city and the community."

Delahunt indicated that any residential factor in development of the property can be discounted since the level of cleanup of the shipyard meets only industrial standards.

City Council President Daniel Raymondi suggested that the property be rezoned from industrial to planned unit development (PUD) to give the Council approval rights to whatever uses the new owners choose.

Delahunt also discussed the idea of a tunnel under the Fore River rather than a bridge over it, adding that the often quoted price of $400 million may be exaggerated and should be revisited.

Restaurant Granted Early Opening, But Extended Hours To Be Reviewed

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Pacini's at 1506 Hancock St. Tuesday was granted their wish to serve breakfast by opening at 5 a.m. but the License Board temporarily turned down a request to open 24 hours from Fridays through Sundays.

Members of the board said they were "leery" of the restaurant at 1506 Hancock St. holding an all alcoholic license to open after the closing hour of 1 a.m.

Owner Haralambos Karamolengos said he would place a portable wooden shield over the bar so that persons would not be able to purchase an alcoholic drink.

Walter White, director of inspection services, and Chairman Joseph Shea reminded the board that the Wheel House Diner, which doesn't serve alcohol, tried to open 24 hours, but after awhile it failed.

White was afraid that the same problems they had with the granting of the diner's hours were that persons would be drinking in Boston and come to the diner to eat and "sober up". He was afraid the same thing could happen in Quincy.

Shea read a letter from Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro, who asked the board to deny Pacini's request and said he "questioned the merits" of the change of hours.

Police Chief William Falco said he thought it would be difficult to monitor the bar during the nighttime.

Shea said he had "mixed emotions" and said the board would continue the hearing and promised that the board would go down to the restaurant and view the location of the bar.

The board said they had no objections to the 5 a.m. openings each day. Health Commissioner Drew Scheele asked Karamolengos why he would want to work such long hours. Karamolengos said there were so many restaurants in the city now, that he "has to do something different."

Community Social Service Agencies Discuss Ways To Help Those In Need

Legislative leaders, hospital officials and social service providers from the South Shore recently met in Quincy to discuss how best to provide social services to families and individuals in need at a time of severe state cutbacks.

The Legislative Forum, held at the Quincy Career Center, was sponsored by the South Shore Alliance for Stronger Communities (SSASC). The group formed several months ago to find innovative ways to ensure the continued provision of basic social services, such as housing, child care and mental health services to the state's most vulnerable populations.

Community leaders from Father Bill's Place, Quincy Asian Resources, the Quincy Housing Authority, Quincy Community Action Programs (QCAP), Quincy Medical Center, Manet Community Health Center, South Shore Day Care Services, Inc., and South Shore Mental Health, Inc., were among the participants.

"One of the goals of the Alliance is to underscore the importance of government-funded programs in the lives of low-income families and individuals," said Beth Ann Strollo, executive director of Quincy Community Action Programs (QCAP), the lead agency in the formation of SSASC. "We also want to make certain that social service providers and public policy decision makers work together to find solutions to this funding crisis," said Strollo.

QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER President and CEO Christine Schuster (left), Kao T. Li, executive director, Quincy Asian Resources, Inc., and Beth Ann Strollo, executive director, Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. were among the legislative leaders, hospital officials and social service providers who recently attended a forum on social services.

According to the Declaration of Purpose developed by the SSASC, the Alliance is dedicated to building strong communities that offer opportunities for self-sufficiency for the most vulnerable among us, including children, the homeless, working poor, immigrants, elderly and the disabled.

The South Shore Alliance for Strong Communities was formed following a community forum in June when more than 80 representatives of human service and health organizations, local elected officials, government planners, and the community met to discuss the concerns, goals and priorities related to housing, child care, health and mental health and workforce development.

The forum was moderated by Rev. Sheldon W. Bennett, chairman of the Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. Board of Directors. Andrew Dreyfus, president of the Blue Cross/Blue Shield Foundation, was the keynote speaker.

South Shore political leaders attending the forum included: Quincy Mayor William Phelan, Weymouth Mayor David Madden, state Sen. Michael Morrissey, Rep. James Murphy, Norfolk County Dist. Atty. William Keating, Quincy City Council President Dan Raymond, and Councillor Joseph Finn. Representatives from the offices of state Sen. Robert Hedlund and U.S. Sen. John Kerry also attended.

The South Shore Alliance for Strong Communities also included representatives from Bay State Community Services, DOVE, Inc., Quincy Career Center, Quincy Crisis Center, Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition, South Coastal Workforce Investment Board, and South Shore Elder Services, Inc.

Fast and fun, sledding is a winter activity the whole family can enjoy. But, like most sports, there is a potential for serious treatment — most of which are preventable.

The majority of sledding injuries occur to children between the ages of 5-14 as the result of collisions with other sledders or stationary obstacles, loss of control and inadequate supervision.

"Young children are very vulnerable to injuries," said Sally Pelaf, physical therapist, Kessler Rehabilitation Center. "Their coordination has not yet fully developed making it difficult to avoid falls and/or obstacles."

The following tips from Kessler, a leader in the field of physical medicine and rehabilitation, can help keep sledding injury free:

- Find a safe environment. Avoid icy conditions, rocky hills, steep terrain, poorly lit areas and sledding into streets, driveways or parking lots. The best hills will have a long, empty space at the bottom for slowing down and stopping safely.

The Scoop On Safe Snow Shoveling

Snow shoveling doesn't have to be a pain in the neck, back or elsewhere for that matter. In fact, shoveling snow can actually be a good exercise when done correctly and with safety in mind.

"Shoveling snow for about 15 minutes at a time counts as moderate physical activity much like a brisk walk," said Jennifer Brusca, physical therapist, Kessler Rehabilitation Centers. "We should all strive for approximately 20 to 30 minutes of moderate activity at least three to four days a week especially during the winter months when temperatures and motivation drop."

However, according to Brusca, snow shoveling, as with any type of exercise, can present some physical risks.

"Back injuries, falls and fractures are often the result of shoveling snow incorrectly," Brusca said. "But by using proper shoveling techniques along with some common sense, individuals can help reduce their risk of injury."

Kessler, a leader in the field of physical medicine and rehabilitation, recommends the following safety guidelines:

- Avoid caffeine or nicotine before beginning, especially if you have a history of or at high risk of a heart attack. These stimulants may increase your heart rate and cause your blood vessels to constrict resulting in extra stress on the heart.

- Dress warmly with head and hands covered.

- Warm up your muscles before shoveling by walking for a few minutes or marching in place. Stretch the muscles in your arms and legs because warm muscles will work more efficiently and be less likely to be injured.

- Try to shovel fresh snow rather than partially melted and packed. Lift small amounts at a time using your legs, not your back, by bending and "sitting" into the movement and avoid tossing the snow over your shoulder or to the side. Better yet, push the snow forward rather than lifting.

- If you experience pain in the chest or arm, stop immediately.

Most importantly, don't overdo it. Take frequent rest breaks — and enjoy the winter scenery.

For more information about Kessler's physical medicine and rehabilitation programs, call 1-888-KESSLER or visit www.kessler-rehab.com.

A Smooth Ride While Sledding

- Use a wooden sled with some kind of steering mechanism rather than an impromptu sled, such as a piece of cardboard, that can't be easily controlled. In addition, snow tubes and disks are more dangerous than sleds because of their fast speed and lack of control.

- Always sit up or kneel when riding. Sledding head-first can result in head and neck injuries, while toboggan-style sledding, head down with feet first, often results in spinal cord injuries.

- Helmets should be worn to absorb head impact. Sledders should also wear layers of clothing for protection from cold. Tuck in and secure scarves, laces or garments with drawstrings.

- Teach children how to stop by dragging their feet or making a sharp turn. If a sled cannot be stopped, teach them to roll from the sled onto the ground and let the sled continue on its way.

Above all, the best advice is to be there when children sled and educate them on safety. Better yet, get in on the fun and sled with them.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.
THEY DID THE GNASH

If you wake up with a headache or painful jaw, schedule an appointment with the dentist to check for signs of excessive tooth grinding. As many as 23 million Americans grind their teeth at night, a condition known as sleep bruxism. Aside from sore jaws, it can lead to eroded and shifting teeth and damaged gums. This damage requires attention. Nearly one-quarter of the tooth gnashers examined as part of a recent study needed dental work as a result of their nightly grind. Once the damage is corrected, the dentist will likely recommend that patients be fitted with mouth guards intended for wearing at night. It may also help to limit coffee intake and learn relaxation techniques. Do you grind your teeth? You can always discuss your dental concerns with us. Good dentistry is more than excellent clinical skills and state-of-the-art equipment. We feel that mutual trust, too, is a factor in the success of your treatment. Our entire staff believes that open communication can help build this trust. We offer the services of anesthesiologist and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Anytime you have a question, please don't hesitate to ask. We invite you to call us at 617-479-6220. Our office is located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We're here to help. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com. P.S. Loose teeth may be another sign of bruxism.

Conveniently Located in Quincy Center

(Cont'd From Page 1)

"The report is what's required to obtain a permit. You have to go through an analysis to make a determination that there isn't another location out there that would make less of an impact on the environment.

"If there is a spot, they're not going to give you a permit. They are not going to let you disturb a wetland if you have another place to do it. This analysis says there is no alternative."

In order to build on Faxon Field, the city would have to replicate five or six acres of wetland somewhere else in the city. Phelan said the city is already reclaiming 30 acres of wetland by Broad Meadows marsh.

Phelan said the city is still in line to receive state reimbursement for the cost of the new high school, although the actual process has become a bit complicated.

"There is three different lists, A, B and C," he said. "We are in to the A-list. There are only a finite number of schools that have the potential of getting on that list."

"We can't get on that list until we have all the permits in place but we're guaranteed 90 per cent when we get on the list and we're guaranteed that we're going to get on that A-list.

"So the B-list and the C-list are going to increase in size, on the A-list there is only a finite number of schools that even qualify for that. So the most that are going to get on it ahead of us is two or three more schools."

"How soon we get funding for that is dependent on how much the state legislature funds the School Building Assistance Program. It took a hit last year, which increased the time for the reimbursement.

"Next year or the year after that or the year after that the funding may increase. That's a question we just don't have an answer to."

LICENSE BOARD BRIEFS

- Granted a transfer of all alcoholic common victualer and entertainment license held by Brook Street Group Inc., to Rockwell Group, Inc. doing business as Dee Dee's Bar & Grill, 295-297 Newport Ave. John Lyons is the manager.

Subcommittee Reaffirms Commitment To New QHS

BY LANCE MORGANELLI

The School Committee's Quincy School Building Subcommittee in a 6-0 vote Tuesday reaffirmed its commitment to the new Quincy High School and renovation of the present high school as a new Central Middle School.

That same approval also included an acknowledgement that because of permit issues, the School Committee will not be able to meet the June 1, 2003 deadline for the state's approval process but should be able to make the June 1, 2004 deadline.

Christine Lynch, administrative assistant of the Massachusetts School Building Assistant Department, said three stages are needed to be completed before the state can approve the building of a new Quincy High School.

MICHAEL MCFARLAND

- An educational plan.
 - The design plan of the building.
 - Multiple agency approvals on the site location.
- Quincy last year submitted both the educational plan and the design of the new school, members of the School Committee said. Lynch said the committee would only need to confirm those two steps and submit changes if any has occurred, especially to the design.

"The next step is for [the Massachusetts School Building Assistant Department] to agree with the materials already submitted by the City of Quincy," Lynch said.

The Subcommittee also in a 6-0 vote requested to start pulling together the architectural drawings and educational plans for the Sterling Middle School renovations and have it ready to submit along with new high school project by the June 1, 2004 deadline.

The subcommittee also voted 6-0 to send the City Council a copy of its first motion so the council can anticipate the cost of the new high school for the fiscal year 2004.

The School Committee expressed concern about fronting the money for an architect when the project has the potential of not getting approved and not being reimbursed for it.

"The money you spend on the architect design is always at risk," said Eric Gunn, administrative assistant of the Massachusetts School Building Assistant Department. "You need an architectural design to get to the state fund approval stage."

Subcommittee Chairman Michael McFarland asked Lynch and Gunn how Quincy is expected to pay for the project when the 90 percent reimbursement from the Joyce Amendment will not start until approximately eight to 10 years after the new high school is built.

"The 90 percent would not probably come in until eight to 10 years after the completion of the Quincy High School," Gunn responded. "After a seven year loan, Quincy would need to be prepared to pay the construction cost until the 90 percent starts."

"We embarked on a 10 year plan to leverage the reimbursements," said State Rep. and School Committee member Ronald Mariano.

"If you're going to make repairs on this building [QHS] we have to get the new high school approved," Mariano said. "We can't wait and let this roof fall down, this heating system collapse...our best opportunity to maximize city funding is to move these two projects forward as quickly as we can."

FEMA Urges Families To Prepare For Winter Weather

As severe winter weather hits New England, it is time to make plans and get prepared. With this in mind, the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) is encouraging everyone to take preventive measures now to ensure your safety and take the sting out of wintry weather.

- Assemble a disaster supply kit. Store drinking water, canned no-cook food, non-electric can opener, first aid kit, battery-powered radio, flashlight and extra batteries where you can get them easily, even in the dark. Also include winter-specific items such as rock salt, sand and other snow removal equipment.

- Prepare for the possibility that you will need to stay in your home for several days after a winter storm. Make sure that you have sufficient heating fuel as well as emergency heating equipment in case electricity is cut off.

- House fires pose an additional risk, as more people turn to alternate heating sources without taking the necessary safety precautions. Keep all heaters at least three feet from flammable objects. Maintain ventilation when using kerosene heaters to avoid a build-up of toxic fumes and always refuel outside. Keep fire extinguishers on hand, and make sure everyone in your house knows how to use them.

- Keep cars and other vehicles fueled and in good repair. Winterize your car by checking your car battery, ignition system, thermostat, lights, flashers, exhaust, heater, brakes, defroster and tires. Ensure that your car has adequate antifreeze, windshield washer fluid and oil and check regularly throughout the season.

- Place a winter emergency kit in each car that includes a shovel, windshield scraper, flashlight, batter-powered radio, extra batteries, water, snack food, extra hats and mittens, blanket, tow chain or rope, road salt and sand, booster cables, emergency flares and fluorescent distress flag.

"Most people may know that New England weather can be unpredictable," said FEMA Regional Director Daniel A. Craig. "Everyone has a responsibility to do what they can to make sure that their families and elderly neighbors are as prepared as possible, no matter what the risk."

Winter storms accounted for five national major disasters and eight emergency declarations in 2001, as well as five major disasters and one emergency declaration to date in 2002. The severe weather damaged homes and businesses from New York to Oregon.

For more information and tips on what you can do to prepare for winter weather, visit www.fema.gov.

Redecorating Without Breaking The Bank: Use An Area Rug

(NAPS) — Gone are the days when area rugs were considered an expensive family heirloom to be handed down through the generations.

While they have always been an important part of home décor, purchasing a quality rug once took a considerable financial investment and commitment to one style and color scheme.

Thankfully, the area rug has evolved into an affordable decorating accessory that can now be easily changed on a whim, without breaking the bank.

With today's value-priced area rugs, interior designers and college students alike are adding rugs to complement everything from the changing seasons to their changing moods.

Looking forward to relaxing by the fire on a cold, snowy day? Warm up your home with a Persian design of rich greens, browns and reds. Wanting to create an air of elegance for a dinner party? Add a handmade rug with entwined grape vines in deep wine colors. Looking for the perfect gift for the recent college grad or young professional? Try a more contemporary rug to make a fresh yet sophisticated home fashion statement.

Sphinx by Oriental Weavers, known as the leader in rug design and technological innovation, offers the most compelling mix of textures and materials available today. With a flair for cutting edge color and design, Sphinx is a master at creating both fashion-forward machine-made and handmade rugs that mirror the look and feel of the most expensive handmades, yet at very affordable prices.

Sphinx offers the following tips for choosing the right area rug:

- Create a consistent décor within two adjoining rooms, such as a living room and dining room, by selecting complementary rugs in a similar style from the same color palette.

- Make sure to buy a rug made from materials that fit your lifestyle. If you have three dogs, a cat and two toddlers, don't buy a rug made from cotton. Stick with a heat-set polypropylene, which is inherently stain-resistant.

- If you are not ready to commit to a style or color scheme, try out a small accent rug. Once you decide that it works, purchase a larger rug and use the smaller one at the bottom of the stairs or in a bathroom.

- Don't be afraid to be bold — if something grabs you . . . grab it. Those are usually items that you cherish the most.

QCAP Provides Reverse Mortgage Advice To Seniors

Rona Goodman, housing coordinator of Quincy Community Action Programs, a HUD approved housing counseling agency that provides reverse mortgage advice to seniors, was recently certified to provide such counseling by HUD-AARP after passing a rigorous HFCM exam.

Although HUD does not require individuals to pass such exam to provide counseling, such achievement demonstrates the commitment of QCAP and Goodman to provide the highest quality professional advice to their clients.

QCAP provides reverse mortgage counseling free of charge to South Shore residents. Reverse mortgages are loans for people over the age of 62 who wish to withdraw equity from their home and avoid repayment obligations until their death, moving from the home or home sale.

"Anyone thinking about a reverse mortgage should take advantage of our counseling program, which is independent of mortgage lenders, before they obtain the mortgage in order to assure that they have obtained the mortgage with the overall lowest price and best benefits for their situation," Goodman said.

Counseling can be obtained by calling 617-479-8181, ext. 115.

Clear Drains With Little Strain

(NAPS) — The next time you're down in the dumps because it looks like your chances of a well-running plumbing system have gone down the drain, consider a few facts from experts.

• Some liquid drain cleaners can, over time, literally

"eat" the metal in the pipes below.

• Attempts to avoid clogged drains by using liquid cleaners or a mixture of baking soda and vinegar on a preventive basis may make your drain smell good, but won't really help.

• Slow and clogged drains can usually be fixed within a minute or two with the help of a simple, ingenious product that's flexible enough to be easily pushed through pipe bends. With a minimum of turning and twisting, it can relieve clogs created by hair, grease and food.

The device's small but efficient angled tip has 56 small barbs that grab at the clogging material. It will either pull the clog out, or tear it apart so that running water will rinse it out through your plumbing. In most cases, there is no need to even remove the drain cover before use. It works on all types of drains — in sinks, bathtubs and showers.

Called the DrainStick and usually retailing for less than $4, the two-foot long device can get to "90 percent of all common clogs," reports Chuck Mintz, one of its designers and COO Superior Tool Co. of Cleveland, Ohio.

After use, the drain unclogger can be wiped clean, bent into a circle for storage, and hung out of sight for future use.

The DrainStick is marketed under both the Superior and Stanley brand names. It's available at Lowe's, True Value and Ace Hardware stores.

Hosts Plymouth South Friday In Opener Balanced Offense Key For Improving Presidents

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School girls' basketball team missed the state tournament by just one game last season.

Needing one win in its final two games, the Presidents were blown out on the road by Plymouth North and neighboring North Quincy to finish at 9-11 overall.

Still, the season turned out to be a splendid story for the Presidents despite their broken hearts in the end. First-year head coach Jeff Bretsch inherited a winless team and turned it into a feisty, scrappy group that continually shocked its opponents.

With eight players — four starters — returning, Quincy seems to be standing on the threshold of a big season.

"I think we're going to be a big improvement from last year," Bretsch said. "We graduated three seniors but we had a very young team last year. Essentially, it was their first year playing on varsity. The core of the team has put the time in the offseason, which is bound to pay off."

Quincy tips off the 2002-2003 season tomorrow (Friday) night at 6:30 when its hosts non-league opponent Plymouth South, whom it split with last season.

Offensively, Quincy has one of the Atlantic Coast League's most explosive players in Bonnie Hirtle. The junior all-star shooting guard finished third in the ACL in scoring last year, averaging

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

13.6 points. She boasts a tremendous outside shot, as she drained a school record 30 3-pointers.

"She's improved tremendously in the offseason and I'm expecting a better year from her," Bretsch said. "She looks more confident and more aggressive. She's maturing."

Last year, Hirtle was the only legitimate scoring threat for the Presidents — an area Bretsch is looking to improve upon.

"We need a more balanced attack," he said. "Last year we were relying too heavily on Bonnie, which we're going to still need for her to excel. But we need more contributions from other players."

One of those players expected to bolster the offense is Hirtle's backcourt partner, fellow classmate Sarah Shea. As the season progressed she developed into an astringent point guard, averaging 6.8 points and burying 27 3-pointers to receive an honorable mention to the all-star team.

"She was the most improved player last year, from the start to the end," Bretsch said. "She has gotten a lot quicker in the offseason. She's ready to go. She's so enthusiastic about basketball."

Another player who could add some punch to the offense is sophomore center

Alycia DiMuzio, whom Bretsch said "showed a lot of potential as a freshman last year."

Senior forward Shannon Paine returns as a starter and will share the captaincy with senior guard Courtney Rand. "The two senior captains are really doing a great job," Bretsch said. "They've shown great leadership and they're making sure the team is focused."

Other returnees are senior guard Jennifer Groppe and junior forwards Katie Kisielius and Brittney Tobin.

Newcomers are juniors Sarah Eley at forward and Nikki Groleau at guard. Also, sophomores Nicole O'Sullivan and Rebekah Sorensen have been moved up to varsity and arrive with worthy credentials. O'Sullivan led the JV team in scoring and Sorensen paced the freshman squad.

Defensively, the Presidents can't afford to get into shoot-outs with their opponents. They were successful last season when they were able to keep the score in the 30s to low 40s. Quincy will play man-to-man and Bretsch said he may mix in some presses this season.

"We're not really a high scoring team so we have to rely on our defense to win," Bretsch said. "We have to play with heart and have to out-hustle the other teams."

THE NORTH QUINCY Apaches varsity cheerleading squad recently received certificates of recognition from the City Council. Home Opener Dec. 17 Vs. Taunton North Quincy Girls Eye Encore Performance

By CHRIS POISSON

The North Quincy High School girls' basketball team produced one of the best seasons in school history last year.

First, the Red Raiders won 15 games to match the school record set the previous season; second, they shared the Old Colony League championship with Bridgewater-Raynham; third, they advanced past the first round of the tournament which had been a hex in previous years.

So what do the Red Raiders do for an encore?

"I don't know if we can improve upon last season," said head coach Doug MacFarlane. "But if we do, that would be great."

North Quincy opens its season next Tuesday, Dec. 17, at home against Taunton at 6:30 p.m.

The Red Raiders return seven players from last year's championship squad and welcome five newcomers, including a talented triad of sophomores.

The four seniors — guard Lauren Kalil, forward Kathleen McCarthy, forward Kristen DiMaggio and forward/center April Suprey — have been named quad-captains and consequently will be counted upon for their leadership.

Suprey, a league all-star last season, is entering her fourth year on the varsity team and will replace Lauren Sleeth, the team's leading scorer, as the go-to player. With a plethora of post moves, Suprey can also mix it up by stepping outside to knock down a shot.

"We're going to need big things from her," MacFarlane said. "I expect teams are going to clamp down on her. With the graduation of Lauren Sleeth, we're going to need someone to step up and shoot to open things up for her. I expect her to have a good year."

Also returning are juniors Ashley Ridge and Beth Goodrich at guard and Alyssa Dearani at forward.

"All these girls have mega experience from last year," MacFarlane said. "They're a good veteran group."

Joining the cast for the first time are junior center Megan Sidorowicz, sophomores Shawna Kelly, Sarah Goreham, Amanda Saylor, and freshman Britney Papile, who will see time on both the JV and varsity squads.

As of Tuesday, MacFarlane said he had not yet decided on a starting lineup. Depending on health — Kalil (calf) and DiMaggio (knee) are a little banged up — the returnees will compete for the starting jobs. But he expects the sophomores to provide quality minutes off the bench.

Lynda Wilson Named All Conference In X-Country

Lynda Wilson of Quincy recently earned All-Conference recognition for her fourth-place finish in the Commonwealth Coast Conference championship that helped the Roger Williams University women's cross country team capture its third straight title.

The junior runner was a key performer for the Hawks this season as she stepped in to replace the injured Allison Belanger as the team's top runner early in the year.

Players and cheerleaders will be admitted free. Tony Agnitti of Agnitti Insurance in Quincy will be the guest speaker. A former Quincy Youth Football player, Agnitti also played football at Archbishop Williams High School and Norwich University.

Dinner, catered by Steven Picard, will be buffet style. Menu includes ziti and meatballs, chicken broccoli ziti, chicken wings, salad, soda and coffee.

Players and cheerleaders are asked to return all football equipment, practice pants, jerseys and cheerleading uniforms at this time.

FEELING FELISH?

A sharp drop in fuel economy with no engine performance problem may indicate a fuel injector that is remaining partially open. Fuel injectors are supposed to open and close alternately. If dirt or damage is preventing one from opening and closing properly, gasoline will unnecessarily drip into the cylinder. This can be checked by connecting a fuel injection system diagnostic tester to the engine. Prior to this step, adding fuel injector cleaner to the fuel tank may resolve the problem. If not, and it can be verified that a fuel injector is staying open, an apparatus that force feeds cleaning agent into the fuel injectors should be used. If damage is the cause, the faulty injector should be replaced.

"They've been a nice surprise," MacFarlane said. "The way they've been playing so far, they're going to get a lot of minutes. We're going to be able to go 10 deep this year, which is a nice bonus."

With that deep bench the Red Raiders will again be able to run a fast-break, up-tempo offense, but will also be able to execute a half-court set with Suprey's ability to create in the inside.

Defensively, MacFarlane said he doesn't quite yet have a feel on what type of scheme is best suited for this team.

"We're learning all the defenses so we'll see," he said. "Personnel means a lot. We're going to go with what we did in the past. We're going to press and change defenses."

As for where North Quincy stands in the OCL, MacFarlane believes Bridgewater-Raynham, which lost only one player, is the favorite and Falmouth a strong contender.

"I think we'll be right there," he said. "We're shooting for another tournament appearance."

To prepare for postseason play, North Quincy has scheduled tough non-leagues against Braintree and Brockton, state semi-finalists last year and state champs two years ago. Also, it has a much-improved Quincy team on the schedule.

"We have six non-league games that will really test us and that's what I want," MacFarlane said. "It should help us down the end in the tournament."

City Council Honors North Quincy Apaches Cheerleaders

The North Quincy Apaches varsity cheerleading team last week received certificates of recognition from the City Council.

Due to their hard work, the Apaches have been invited to perform in the college football championship Citrus Bowl on New Year's Day 2003.

They have held numerous fund-raising events to help defray the cost of their trip, including yard sales, bake sales, car washes and can drives.

In August, many of the girls participated in Universal Cheer Association/National Cheer Association cheerleading camps. The varsity squad, comprised of 20 girls, attended the UCA camp at Curry College.

The camp taught the girls to improve their dance and cheering skills, and encouraged them to work together as a team. At the end of the camp, teams were awarded ribbons and trophies for various performances.

Along with many "Superior" and "Excellent" ribbons, the Apaches won first-place trophies in the Dance Competition and also as "Camp Champs."

The most important trophy, though, was the "Leadership Award," which goes to the squad that displayed the best sportsmanship, were the most helpful and respectful of the other squads. All squads vote for the team it feels best qualifies for this honor.

The team, ages 9-13, participates in the Quincy Youth Football league and has been practicing and cheering since August. Over 65 girls tried out and participated in one of three squads.

The Apaches are coached by Chrissy Tierney, a Quincy native who has been voluntarily coaching the team for over 13 years.

Holiday Safety

Very few things can ruin your holidays quicker than being the victim of a crime. The following are some sound safety tips that you might consider adopting during this busy season.

- When shopping, only take with you what you will need. A small amount of cash, credit cards that you know you will be using, drivers license, and keys. Leave the rest at home. If you don't have it with you, it can't be stolen.

- Consider leaving your purse at home also. Take the above items and place them in an inside pocket. Remember, out of sight, out of mind.

- Plan your shopping. Try to leave the mall at least 30 minutes prior to its closing so that other shoppers will be around and you will not be going to your car alone.

- Place your shopping bags in the trunk of your car. If you have an SUV or other vehicle without a trunk, place your bags on the floor of the vehicle and cover them with a blanket, so that they are out of sight.

- When approaching your vehicle, have your keys in your hand, so that you can easily and quickly get into your car. Remember to check the rear seat of your car, in case someone is hiding there.

- Keep your car doors locked at all times.

- After the holidays, when disposing of all those boxes, remember to turn them inside out, so that a potential thief will not know what new items are in your home.

If you follow these safety tips, you will greatly reduce the chances of becoming the victim of a crime. Don't let the Grinch ruin your holidays.

On behalf of Chief William Falco, the officers and civilians of the Quincy Police Department, I wish you all a safe and sober holiday season.

Quincy Recreation, Lodge Of Elks Sponsoring Free Throw Contest

The Quincy Recreation Department and the Quincy Lodge of Elks is co-sponsoring the Elks' National "Hoop Shoot" Free Throw Contest, announces Recreation Director Barry Welch.

The Quincy competition is the first step in a national contest for boys and girls ages 8-13. Contestants are assigned to three separate categories in both boys and girls divisions. Age groups are 8-9, 10-11 and 12-13. The contestant's age is determined by April 1, 2003.

The first round of the Quincy contest will be offered at the following gymnasiums Saturday, Dec. 21, at 10 a.m.: Atherton Hough, Atlantic Middle, Bernazzani, Beechwood Knoll, Merrymount, Montclair, Clifford Marshall, Point Webster, Snug Harbor, Squantum and Wollaston.

The first round will also be conducted at the Parker School gym Wednesday, Dec. 18, at 3 p.m. and the Lincoln Hancock Community School gym Thursday, Dec. 19, at 3 p.m.

Each participant is awarded points for successful free throws. Boys and girls in the age 8-9 group will shoot from four feet in front of the regulation foul line.

The program will be supervised in neighborhood gymnasiums by the Quincy Recreation leaders assigned their regular recreation program in that area.

The program is free and contestants may participate even if not previously enrolled in the recreation program. Participants may choose any of the various times or sites to compete, but they may only compete in Quincy qualifier.

"We are pleased that the Quincy Lodge of Elks has once again provided this program for the benefit of our participants," Welch said. "Many Quincy residents in the past have enjoyed the benefits of this activity at the local, regional and state level, as well as the national championship. The Elks devote a great deal of attention to youth programs. Their commitment to our children helps make Quincy a better place to live."

The Quincy Lodge Hoop Shoot Chairman is Ed Miller, athletic director of Quincy Public Schools. For more information call the Quincy Recreation Department at 617-376-1394.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Start preparing now to make sure you get the credit you're due for all that effort you put in to get that project off the ground. A new challenge emerges after the 15th.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You're still charging full steam ahead on the job — and that's fine. But take time to share the joy of preparing for the upcoming holidays with folks you love.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A former detractor resists joining your ranks just yet. Give him or her time to learn more about what you're doing. Meanwhile, devote more time to friends and family.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Be careful not to be goaded into a tiff by someone who might be looking for a fight. Remain cool as you make your exit. Be assured that others will rally to your support.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Kudos on getting the well-deserved Lion's share of the rewards for a job well-done. Now you can take a breather from your workaday duties and spend time with your family.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You enjoy a quick spurt of renewed energy just in time to meet that upcoming deadline. A potentially romantic situation looms. How it develops will be up to you.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Watch out for distractions that could cause delays and leave you running twice as fast to finish your work by the 15th. Then go ahead and have fun.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You might prefer to work on current tasks on your own. But be open to a potentially useful suggestion from someone who admires you and wants to help.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Avoid rushing full gallop into that volunteer project without knowing what's expected of you. Take things a step at a time as you begin to find your way.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Good news: You should begin to feel more comfortable expressing your emotions. This will go a long way in helping you with that personal situation.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) An old friend gives confusing signals. Best advice: Don't assume that things will necessarily work themselves out. Ask questions and demand straight answers.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A new relationship needs time to develop. Be careful not to let your emotions flood your natural sense of caution. Meanwhile, check out that new job offer.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your sense of right and wrong sometimes causes you to come into conflict with others. But you invariably come out ahead.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Did you ever stop to think that the very first Christmas Carol was sung by the angels in Heaven? Yes, on that holy and blessed night when Christ was born they sang, "Gloria In Excelsis Deo" - "Glory to God in the Highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

Over one hundred years ago a young man lay severely wounded as our country lay under the cloud of war. The boy's father longed for peace. "Peace on earth, good will to men," he kept repeating as he thought of the angels on that first Christmas night. Those words echoed in the father's heart - over and over again. Since the boy's father was a poet, he seemed compelled to write these words on paper and it was at this time that Henry Wadsworth Longfellow wrote the lovely song "Christmas Bells" - sometimes known as "I Heard the Bells on Christmas Day." As you probably know, the last line of each stanza ends with the words "Peace on earth, good will to men."

One of the dearly beloved Christmas hymns, perhaps the one most stirring of all, was translated into English from the Latin language in 1841. No one is really sure who wrote it as it has been accredited to several authors, and it is said to have been the favorite of President Theodore Roosevelt. The Christmas hymn so loved by so many does not rhyme, yet few persons have realized this ... "Adeste Fideles" - "Oh Come All Ye Faithful" ...

The move was defeated by a 5-4 vote with Council President Daniel Raymondi and Councillors Kevin Coughlin and Joseph Finn joining Hanley in voting for 175 per cent.

Raymondi, the councillor from Ward 2, told the Council he represents the most economically challenged part of the city.

"These people are finding themselves house rich and cash poor," he said. "Property has dramatically increased in value but the ability to make income has not increased with the rapidity that these valuations have."

"The homeowner always wins because they pay less than if there was no classification," said Councillor-at-Large Frank McCauley, who was joined by Councillors Tim Cahill, Bryan Connolly, Doug Gutro and Joseph Newton in voting for retention of 169 per cent.

Marion Fantuccio, chair of the Board of Assessors, explained that classification shifts a larger portion of the tax burden to the business owner.

She said the single family rate would have been $16.69 as opposed to $13.62 without classification, resulting in a savings of $696 for the residential taxpayer.

Ward 4 Councillor Bryan Connolly said he was in favor of the 169 per cent shift because he does not believe it is worth it in the long run to "max out" at the state's limit of 175 per cent.

"We have reached the point of diminished returns," he said. "The 175 per cent would only get the homeowner an additional $61 savings. This short term gain can only long-term pain."

"If the city's commercial base keeps shrinking then there are fewer business owners to pay the two to one rate and less tax relief for the homeowner. The homeowner would have to pick up a bigger portion of the tab."

"The goal is to decrease the homeowner's tax bill," said Mayor Phelan. "You don't do that by taxing business at a maximum. You may have fewer businesses paying at a higher rate but paying a smaller piece of the overall pie."

"Mayors from Walter

Hannon on had agreed that the best way is to strike a balance at 169 per cent."

Fantuccio also indicated that there would not be a reassessment of homes this year.

"The average single family house valuation will remain at $226,800," she said. "At the $13.62 tax rate the average tax paid will be $3,089, which is a 3.75 per cent increase over Fiscal 2002. This equates to an additional $111 in taxes."

Once his bid for a 175 per cent classification was defeated, Hanley proposed 172 per cent but the motion failed to get a second.

"Everyone made a good argument for their stance," he said. "Politics is all about compromise. I believe the tax classification should be changed to 172 per cent."

"This year has been harder on residents than any other year previously," he said. "Residents have had to deal with a reduction in city services. There are less services today than even one year ago."

He said he had a constituent who went without heat so she could pay her taxes without risking foreclosure.

Matteo Panarelli of Wollaston spoke out in favor of 175 per cent, saying he was concerned with the rise in foreclosures both locally and across the nation. The business community is better able to handle the small rise resulting from raising 169 to 175 per cent, he said.

"It is not only the commercial side which is hurting," he said. "Creditors across the country are foreclosing on people's homes. Four in every one thousand homes are being foreclosed on. According to the mortgage association, this is the highest rate in 30 years.

"Retirement is supposed to be the golden year but in reality is it the survival years."

Alan Cousin of North Quincy, president of the Quincy Taxpayers Association but testifying as an individual citizen, told the Council "individuals struggle to have a place to live. Settle the burden least heavily on those least able to bear it (the residents)."

Members of the Quincy business community argued for the need to attract business to the city, which, they said, cannot be done if Quincy's commercial rate is 25 per cent to 50 per cent higher than surrounding towns.

Dick Mason, economic business specialist for Quincy 2000, said that all the communities surrounding Quincy, except Boston, have a lower commercial tax rate.

"For example, Weymouth's commercial rate is 30 per cent lower than Quincy's," he said. "I think we should hold the line at 169 per cent and see if we can attract commercial interests in the city."

"If the city keeps losing business owners we will have to burden the residential owner with taxes which were previously carried by the business owner."

Dan Flynn, owner of Flynn Brokerage, reminded that Council that there is nearly 120,000 square feet of vacant business space on Hancock Street between School and Granite Streets.

"As you drive down Hancock Street," he said, you will see many store fronts vacant. We need to market Quincy to business owners. If we do that it will lighten the tax burden on both the homeowner and the business owners.

"I support 169 per cent and suggest coming closer to 150 per cent so our tax rate will be more competitive with the surrounding towns."

Marilyn Manning, executive director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association (QCBPA), registered in favor of 169 per cent — or lower, if possible.

"Retailers looking for a new location want a safe, attractive and convenient environment for their customers," she said. "Quincy is not that inviting to the potential customer so at the present time we need financial incentives to attract business here."

"We need you to be on our team to help bring Quincy Center alive again."

Ed Keohane, owner of Keohane Funeral Homes, said he was not speaking for either tax classification when he said the "resident, members of the business community and the government need to have a common goal to make Quincy the all-American city again."

"Live in Quincy and own business property in Quincy so either way I get hit," he said, adding that he attended the meeting to share his experience with the two most important things business owners look for when seeking a location.

"Business owners look for quality of life and cost of doing business," he said. "Quality of life in Quincy also needs to be addressed. For example, the homeless issue... as a resident I don't like people picking through my trash."

State Approves Tax Rates $13.62 Residence, $28.18 CIPP

Quincy's tax rate for Fiscal 2003 has been certified by the state at $13.62 for residents and $28.18 for businesses which means that tax bills will go out on time this year.

The State Department of Revenue (DOR), which has been keeping a close eye on Quincy since discovery of $4.6 million in rolled over, prior-year bills, approved the Fiscal 2003 tax recap sheet and tax rates Monday.

The City Council has-tened the tax rate setting by voting last week to continue the '169 per cent classification shift from residences to commercial, industrial and personal property (CIPP).

The Council also moved quickly to approve a $3.4 million reserve for appropriation that Mayor William Phelan wanted to prepare to balance the books in June.

Last year's tax rate was not set until after Phelan took office in January.

"I want to thank the Council for their support on these matters and for their understanding that time was of the essence this year in setting the tax rate," said Phelan.

"We were committed to making sure that these tax bills got out by Dec. 31 and we cooperated with all the requests that the DOR brought forward during the last several weeks."

Phelan said he hopes to rebuild the city's depleted stabilization fund by close to $2 million by keeping a close watch on finances for the remainder of the year.

This, he said, will place the city on much better footing approaching the forecast dramatic reductions in state aid and increases in fixed costs for the upcoming fiscal year.

Plans To Seek Supplemental Funds

Phelan Hopes To Keep Engine 4 In Service

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Mayor William Phelan said he plans to propose a supplemental appropriation for the fire department to keep Engine 4 in service in Wollaston.

Mayor Phelan told The Quincy Sun he would propose a supplemental appropriation to cover the costs of a ballooning overtime budget, but the exact amount of the appropriation has not been determined. He said the administration also is searching in other areas of the fiscal budget to make up the shortfall.

The possibility of losing the firefighting services of Engine 4 in Wollaston hung like a black cloud over Monday night's City Council meeting as acting Fire Chief Paul O'Connell presented a grim picture about the state of the Department's budget.

The chief said the department needs supplemental funding to cover the costs of ballooning overtime costs, estimated at $800,000, or it risks losing the services of Engine 4.

Chief O'Connell said the budget for the Fire Department has increased due to the use of overtime to cover the loss of 22 firefighters that retired during the summer. Overtime costs increased

Parking Task Force Reinstated By Council

The City Council agreed Monday night to reinstate a Parking Task Force which will attempt to identify and solve parking problems throughout Quincy.

The move was initiated by Ward 6 Councillor Joseph Newton, who said the winter weather is going to exacerbate parking problems in the City.

"Some of these streets are a nightmare," said Newton.

City councillors were particularly concerned about the ability of fire apparatus to access narrow roads. Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gintro said many of Quincy's sidestreets are very narrow, and residents are parking on both sides of the street.

Fire Chief Paul O'Connell said his department will help to identify "hot spots" or problem areas with regard to parking, but "citizens must be responsible too."

Councillors stressed that Quincy residents should obtain an overnight parking permit from the Quincy Police Department to avoid parking tickets.

The task force will be made up of nine city councillors, along with Police Chief William Falco or his designee, Fire Chief Paul O'Connell, Traffic Engineer Roy LaMotte Jr. and Purchasing Agent Alfred Grazioso.

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin said he would like to see the city adopt a master plan as a means of establishing uniform rules with regard to parking.

To Head Up Economic Development At Ormond Beach Mannarino Leaving To Take Florida Post

Joseph Mannarino, executive director of Quincy 2000 Corporation since 1995, has resigned effective Jan. 10 to take a position as economic development director of the city of Ormond Beach, Fla.

"The professional and personal growth opportunities that await me in Ormond Beach are too attractive to pass up," said Mannarino, who joined Quincy 2000 as deputy director in 1994.

Quincy 2000 Chairman James Mullane praised the work of Mannarino in his redevelopment efforts in Quincy.

"Joe brought new life to the executive director position that enabled Quincy 2000 to sustain and expand its mission of economic development through the establishment of a small business loan pool," he said.

A transition team headed by Mayor William Phelan and including Thomas Cataldo of State Street Bank, Thomas Galvin of Boston Gear emeritus and Donald Uvanitte of Allied Insurance.

"These are exciting times in Quincy," said Phelan. "and Quincy 2000 will play an important role in such crucial projects as the revitalization of the downtown area, the development of the shipyard and our continuing commitment to making the cross-town connector a reality."

"We are committed to finishing the work that Joe helped start," said Mullane. "Quincy has so much going for it and we look forward to working with Mayor Phelan and other city officials to ensure that Quincy remains a vital and thriving city."

Mullane listed these accomplishments made during Mannarino's tenure:

- Creation of an aggressive plan of action for revitalizing Quincy Center which led to the construction of the Quincy Center Concourse and new colorful signage system.

- Establishment of small business lending programs that loaned approximately $3 million to 45 Quincy businesses and created and retained hundreds of jobs.

- Renovated 39 storefronts and provided 145 businesses with new signs throughout the city and leveraged about $2 million in private investment.

- Attracted Boston Scientific Company to locate their Western Hemisphere distribution center in the vacant 1.3 million square foot warehouse in North Quincy, creating 450 new jobs.

- Created small business training programs and workshops for entrepreneurs and Quincy residents to assist them in starting and growing a business.

- Worked closely with city officials and developers to attract large and small businesses to the city, including Harvard/Pilgrim Health Care, Walmart, Boston Bagel, Home Depot and more.

Monica Conynghan Succeeds McGrath Phelan Names First Woman As City Solicitor

Mayor William Phelan Tuesday named a permanent city solicitor -- the first woman to hold the post.

She is Monica Conynghan of Hingham, who is technically the successor to Steve McGrath, the last solicitor under former Mayor James Sheets.

Joseph "Jay" MacRitchie, who has been acting city solicitor since January, will assume the duties of the first assistant solicitor. He has served under three different mayors.

"We are fortunate indeed to have Ms. Conynghan join us," said Phelan. "She has a wealth of experience and expertise and her commitment to public service is genuine."

She is also the first woman to hold the city's top legal post.

Conynghan, who will assume her duties effective immediately, is a graduate of Smith College and Boston College Law School, said her commitment to public service influenced her decision to take the solicitor's job.

"I am excited to become involved again in the issues that affect us all as citizens and taxpayers," she said. "I look forward to working with Mayor Phelan, his staff and the solicitor's office, particularly Jay MacRitchie."

She most recently was a member of the Boston law firm of Hoag LLP, and before that was an aid to U.S. Sen. John Kerry.

She and her husband, John Monz, live in Hingham with their two children.

Residents Urged To Clear Snow As Aid To Mailman

Managers of the three post offices in Quincy are asking residents to clear their stairs and walkways of ice and snow to that their postmen can approach their mailboxes safely.

"During the winter months, snow and ice becomes an obstacle," said Tammy Quinlan of North Quincy, John Flynn of Wollaston and Ed Davis of Quincy Center in a message to residents.

"To prevent your letter carrier from falling and getting injured and to provide prompt delivery, it would be greatly appreciated if you could keep your stairs and walkways free of ice and snow."

Karaoke License Request Postponed By Board

A request to have a Karaoke establishment at 1604 Hancock St. was postponed until a later date Tuesday as the License Board voted to continue the hearing until owner Jeff Moon Chen finds another site.

The site is the Recruiting Station at 1604 Hancock St., owned by Anthony Agnitti who has leased the space to someone else. Chen's lease was pending on his receiving approval by the board for the Karaoke, and the time had run out.

Chairman Joseph Shea said that after an initial meeting held two weeks ago, he and members of the board visited a similar place in Allston to view the concept.

The concept Shea said is a "good one" and said the idea is to have a non alcoholic and non smoking establishment which has separate rooms where persons can sing and record their music.

Shea said he was "quite impressed" and surprised at the enormity of equipment used for Karaoke.

He later mentioned that the meaning of the word Karaoke is that Kara means "fake" and oke means "orchestra."

He said Chen is looking for another site and promised him that the board would "be happy to work with him on another site."

• On Dec. 16, 1811, in the Mississippi River Valley near New Madrid, Mo., the greatest series of earthquakes in U.S. history begins when a quake of an estimated 8.6 magnitude on the Richter scale slams the region.

• On Dec. 22, 1849, writer Fyodor Dostoevsky is led before a firing squad and prepared for execution. He had been convicted and sentenced to death for allegedly taking part in anti-government activities. However, at the last moment he was reprieved and sent into exile.

• On Dec. 18, 1878, John Kehoe, the last of the Molly Maguires, is executed in Pennsylvania. The Molly Maguires, an Irish secret society that had allegedly been responsible for some incidences of vigilante justice in the coalfields of eastern Pennsylvania, defended its actions as attempts to protect exploited Irish-American workers.

Dear Santa

Dear Santa:

Well, here I am again. But a little earlier than usual. You know, with Christmas coming on a Wednesday this year.

I wasn't too sure I would even get this letter off to you. It's been a pretty busy year here in Quincy. Always something doing.

Santa, I think I mentioned this before. We pronounce it Quin-zee. Don't want you to get lost by confusing us with those other ones that call themselves Quin-see.

We were the first and it's Quin-zee!

But if you and Rudolph and the other reindeer could deliver these gifts, I would really appreciate it.

As in the past, Santa, some of them are in a humorous vein. And, of course, some in a serious. Please do your best to get the following to the following:

Mayor BILL PHELAN, an around-the-clock gushing oil well behind City Hall to help us through this economic crunch (That $3.4 million surplus will help but what looks like a bad winter could take a big bite out of it)... Former Mayor JIMSHEETS, 18 votes... City Council President DAN RAYMONDI, a lucky coin - "Yes" on one side, "No" on the other -- to toss to help to decide if next year is the right year to run for mayor.

... DAVID MCCULLOUGH, a Quincy Honorary Citizenship and an Adams Family Honorary Membership for what his Pulitzer Prize winning biography John Adams has done for the city and the Adams family. (And, Santa, don't forget a box of Royal typewriter ribbons to keep him rolling)... TIM CAHILL, good luck in his new job as state treasurer and to PAT McDERMOTT as the new Norfolk County Register of Probate... Police Chief WILLIAM FALCO, a year without major crimes and fatal accidents... Fire Chief PAUL O'CONNELL, a year without fatal fires and pesky false alarms... Quincy's Beacon Hill delegation, Senator MIKE MORRISSEY, and Reps. BRUCE AYERS, RON MARIANO and STEVE TOBIN, extra political clout to get Quincy its fair share of financial aid if there is any coming out of the State House next year. (Things are pretty tight up there, Santa)... City Clerk JOSEPH SHEA, an election day when every registered voter actually turns out to vote.

... Former Mayor FRANK MCCAULEY, a second edition of his informative Quincy, Massachusetts: A Political History 1889-2000. (You're not in it Santa, but you might like a copy yourself. Frank says it's only $21, including tax. Maybe he'll give you a deal...)

... JOE MANNARINO, departing executive director of Quincy 2000, lots of success in his new job as director of economic development for the city of Ormond Beach, Fla... School committee members CHRISTINE CEDRONE, JO-ANN BRAGG, LINDA STICE and newcomer ELAINE DWYER, the thought of someday running for mayor. You see, Santa, we haven't had a woman mayor since Quincy became a city. That's 113 years ago... Fr. BILL MCCARTHY and JOHN YAZWINSKI, the day soon when Father Bill's Place and other shelters for the homeless are empty and no longer needed because -- finally -- there is sufficient affordable housing... Former Mayor JOSEPH LaRAIA, a year of singing bookings. You might not know it but Joe has a pretty good voice and has been appearing now and then at a few nightspots. With the right bookings he might hit the big time... GEORGE BURKE, a "thank-you" card for all those scholarships he has been giving to Quincy and North Quincy High School graduates. He's been at it for 10 years -- some $61,000 worth... Ward 3 Councillor KEVIN COUGHLIN, a magic wand and a "presto" to make those abandoned shopping carts disappear back to where they came from... MARALIN MANNING, executive director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, a two-seat bike to help cover all the ground she does. The second seat for MARIE WATTS, her quiet able assistant usually by her side... MILDRED GUSTAFSON, a Happy 103rd. Right now she's the youngest 102 you'll ever see, Santa. You might be interested in part of her longevity formula: breakfast cereal and fruit every day. No cigarettes. She quit 81 years ago. "And," she says, "I stay away from doctors."... And that reminds me, Santa: If CHARLIE SWEENEY, former school committee, miracle grower of artificial roses and good friend, asks you for a carton of cigarettes, make them all stale packs. His better half, BETTY, and friends have been trying to get him to kick the nicotine habit for years but he keeps on puffing. A few stale packs might do it. And just to be sure you get the right house, Santa, it really is Sweeney, not Sweeney. (Maybe you could give him that missing "e" while you're there.)... TOM KOCH, better luck next run... BRIANNE PHELAN, who made her debut as a soldier in the Boston Ballet's Nutcracker, a future star on her door... LEO KELLY, a truck load of evergreens to be given to those participating in the Christmas tree mulching program he has headed up for 14 years... Majors DOUG and LINDA JONES, commanding officers of the Salvation Army's Quincy Temple Corps, kettles filled to the brim... To the WJDA gang, JAY and TERRY ASHER, JOE CATALANO, DEBBIE and MIKE LOGAN, JIM FELCI, TERRY FANCHER and CHARLIE ROSS, Happy 56th anniversary coming up in 2003... SHARRON BEALS, energetic executive director of the Beechwood Community Life Center, a scooter to whiz around. And, incidentally, Santa, she still likes this "Thought for Christmas" she sent along a couple of years or so ago. Goes like this:

"Do you know what would have happened if it had been Three Wise Women instead of Three Wise Men? They would have asked directions, arrived on time, helped deliver the baby, cleaned the stable and made a casserole, brought practical gifts and there would be Peace on Earth."

Santa, don't tell TED DeCRISTOFARO I even suggested it. But while you're in town, do you think you could squeeze the granite ball into your sleigh and bring it back to City Hall where it really belongs? It would be a great present for all the kids who would love seeing it close-up and their reflections in it.

And to SHARON (PAOLUCCI) SWATEK, a true "Profile in Courage," continued determination and days filled with happiness... Fr. WILLIAM MULLIN, a speedy recovery... CHARLIE RYBERG, JOHN GHIORSE and MARGE NASH, good health.

And to DOROTHY, GAIL, LINDA, DONNA (D.J.) DOLLY, BOB, FRED, JIM, AMY, MICHELLE, KIM, BRIAN, KELLIE, LINDSAY, JAY and (joining us) AMY and WENDY, all my love and best wishes.

Santa, I'm sure I've forgotten some people including good friends. Seems I always do. As I've said before, you start getting a little forgetful after you hit 39. And I've hit a few times.

But to all of them and all of you, a very Merry Christmas and a Happy, HEALTHY New Year.

Scenes From Yesterday

MERRY CHRISTMAS from QUINCY, MASS.

Largest Christmas Tree in United States.
85 feet high contributed by Retail Merchants.

THIS EARLY 1930's postcard is one of the favorites of Quincy Sun readers who look forward to seeing it at Christmas. This is the eighth year it has appeared. It is a view of what was claimed to be the largest Christmas tree in the United States. It was erected in front of the then new art-deco Granite Trust building -- now Fleet Bank -- at the intersection then called Granite Five Corners. On the left was Howard Johnson's first restaurant outside of Wollaston. On the right was Homer's Jewelry now the site of Rogers Jewelry store. At the entrance to the bank lobby was Flagg's cigar shop and Beech's newsstand. The merchant's division of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce donated the 85-foot tall Christmas tree.

Quincy's Yesterdays City Council Votes For Censorship Of Comic Books

The City Council passed an ordinance regulating the sale of comic books and paperback reprints in the city and authorizing the mayor to set up a committee of three to censor literature "tending to corrupt the morals of youth."

Under the ordinance, literature banned by the censors would be reported to the chief of police who was then authorized to order distributors to cease its sale. If they failed to comply, the chief was to turn the matter over to the city solicitor.

Councillor Frank N. Orcutt said he felt that the board of censorship should be made up of three clergymen who were best fitted to decide what the youth of Quincy should read.

The Council also passed two ordinance amendments authorizing the health commissioner and the building commissioner to take an active role in reporting violations of codes in bars but it refused to give the same approval to the wire and plumbing inspectors.

Councillor David J. Crowley told his colleagues that if all four officials had the authority and did 100 percent job enforcing the law, almost everybody in Quincy would be in jail.

"There's violations in most Quincy homes right now because of the Christmas wiring," he said, pointing to a light wire string between councillors' desks. "Here's a violation right here."

SINGLE SESSION FAVORED

Parents of Quincy school children voted 3,304 to 2,289 in favor of a single session plan over the present double session school day. School Supt. Dr. Paul Gossard said he would give the results to the School Committee for whatever action it chose to take.

"This proves beyond all doubt that Quincy parents think for themselves," said Earl Lantery of Montclair, a leader of single session proponents, "because the evidence presented to them was slanted toward the two session idea with the superintendent taking the two session side."

A. Wendell Clark, vice chairman of the School Committee, said the vote would be taken into consideration when the committee made a decision at the Dec. 28 meeting.

Christmas Eve Favorites

Christmas Eve is almost here, and at our house it means having our children over for the traditional seafood extravaganza! This means that all entrees are made with some kind of fish. I am going to make two main dishes while others will bring theirs.

The main one that everyone seems to enjoy is stuffed squid served with angel hair or linguine. The other that I will make is a seafood casserole. Here are the recipes for both...take your pick.

Stuffed Squid (Calamari) about 10 medium squid (I like the large ones, but you can't always find them) 4-5 slices of bread
some basil, parsley and oregano
2 tablespoons grated Romano cheese
3 tablespoons tomato sauce
salt and pepper to taste enough toothpicks to secure the tops

Soak bread in water and squeeze. Place in a bowl and add all other ingredients and mix until blended. If it gets too dry, add a bit more of the sauce or water.

The hardest part of it all is stuffing those little guys. You can either use your fingers or a small baby spoon. Only fill them three quarters full and then place a toothpick on the top of each closing it as carefully as you can. Set aside.

Make a quick basic tomato sauce with oil, garlic, basil and any other favorite herb. Use a large frying pan for the sauce so the squid are side by side with chances of breaking very slim. They are delicate so you have to be careful how you turn them.

After the sauce is bubbling, carefully place each squid and then cook on low heat turning them gently.

If one of them opens during cooking, it's okay, it will just blend into the sauce.

Serve with linguine or a favorite pasta. If the squid are large, the can be cut in slices. Otherwise each guests take a whole one. Don't forget to remove the toothpicks!

Seafood Casserole
1 pound scallops (Uncooked)
1 pound shrimp (uncooked and deveined)
3/4 pound haddock (cut up and also uncooked)
2 cups milk or half and half
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
3 tablespoons flour seasoned bread crumbs for topping
2-3 tablespoons cooking sherry

Make a cream sauce by melting the butter, adding the flour and milk and sherry blending until smooth. Add the scallops, shrimp and haddock and stir gently.. Do not cook through.

In a slightly greased baking dish, place the seafood mixture and top it with the bread crumbs. If you prepare it ahead of time, refrigerate it.

Bake in a 350 degree oven covered for about 30 minutes or until bubbly. The uncover for the last 10 minutes. Serve hot. Happy Holidays!

Council Urges 'Good Faith' Negotiations At QMC

268 On Atlantic Honor Roll

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

The City Council Monday urged management at the Quincy Medical Center to negotiate in good faith with hospital workers as both sides attempt to iron out a new contract.

Specifically, the employees want management to support an improved pension plan and a restoration of other benefits that were cut when the hospital was on the brink of closing.

Councillor Joseph Finn said hospital management was reneging on a number of promises that were made during the takeover. "Promises made should be promises kept," said Finn.

Councillor Frank McCauley said the employees at the Medical Center have made many concessions to keep the Medical Center running. "If it weren't for the employees this situation would not have flown," said McCauley, pointing to the 1999 state bailout.

Carla Roudabush, vice president for marketing and public relations at the Quincy Medical Center, disagreed with the Council's characterization that management is not negotiating in good faith.

"We are offering a very competitive package to recruit the best and brightest employees," she told The Quincy Sun. "It is imperative that Quincy Medical Center retain and recruit a highly qualified staff."

Roudabush said management is offering a 403B retirement plan to employees. The plan is similar to 401K plans offered by private companies.

In a strongly-worded resolution, the Council said management at the Medical Center has made several proposals that further erode important rights of these employees pertaining to layoffs, recalls, and job postings. Also, management has refused to provide long and short term disability benefits even though they have it themselves, the Council said.

Several concessions were made by employees with the understanding that benefits would be restored and then an employer contribution pension plan would be re-instituted, the Council said.

"People feel they need to be part of the road to recovery," said Rand Wilson, spokesman for the Service Employees International Union (SEIU) Local 285, which represents employees at the Medical Center. "As the hospital improves so should the treatment of the employees," he said.

But Roudabush said management did not make such promises as outlined in the Council's resolution. The Medical Center is in the midst of a five-year fiscal turnaround, she said. The SEIU represents a diverse number of employees at the Medical Center, including painters, carpenters, physical therapists and lab technicians.

Atlantic Middle School lists 268 students on the honor roll for the first marking period.

Against Proposal To Scrap Ships Phelan Cold On $7M Shipyard Offer

Gerald Bell of GSB Technologies which is seeking to buy the Fore River Shipyard at auction, dangled a "binding" offer of $7 million in a Memo of Understanding before Mayor William Phelan last week but the mayor wasn't buying.

Bell pledged to reimburse Quincy for funds lost in previous dealings with Massachusetts Heavy Industries, which went bankrupt and lost the Shipyard to the U. S. Maritime Administration (MARAD), of his company wins the Jan. 16 bidding.

"We don't intend to enter a memo of understanding with GSB or any other entity," said Phelan. "We don't want to have anything to do with a company that proposes to scrap ships at the yard."

"How much did Mass Heavy Industries offer? They promised that 2,000 people would be employed there this year. The city has had its share of empty promises."

Actually, the city of Quincy can do nothing on the face of it to involve itself in the auction of the 130-acre property that is in MARAD's hands by foreclosure.

The most controversial section of the GSB proposal is to recycle ships at the Yard until 2006, a move that has raised the hackles of neighborhood and city officials alike.

"We understand the good people of Quincy have become skeptical of any proposal that has no guarantees," said Bell.

"In order to assure everyone that GSB has made a serious commitment to the community, we intend to back up our commitments with a Memorandum of Understanding that is binding."

Bell also offered to clean up the Shipyard "to a level that will exceed EPA standards" and promised to back up the proposal with a $3 million performance bond.

ENC Given Authority To Issue Parking Tickets

Police Chief William Falco has authorized Eastern Nazarene College to issue parking tickets to illegal parkers on seven Wollaston streets where illegal students and event parking has been a concern for the school's neighbors.

The streets are Elm Avenue, East Elm Avenue, Sachem Street, Willow Street, Waterston Avenue, Ridgeway Street and Wendell Avenue.

Authorized to dispense tickets were Michael Caulfield, Mark Dutra, Hamilton Mendes and Susan Solimini, who will serve as special constables on the streets named.

"I encouraged ENC to submit a constable application," said Ward 5 City Councillor Doug Gutro.

"Constable status was previously conferred upon employees at Quincy College and Quincy Medical Center resulting in more frequent compliance with posted parking rules.

"After a few tickets, students will realize that it is more cost effective to pay ENC for a sticker allowing them to park in the college's Wendell Avenue parking lot, which in turn will provide more revenue for the college.

"Most importantly, it will remove unwanted and illegally parked vehicles from neighborhood streets surrounding the main campus."

Gutro said he is putting together a committee made up of neighbors, college representatives and city officials to review existing parking rules and recommend necessary changes.

Those interested in joining the committee should call Gutro at 617-376-1355.

They're Putting Merry In Christmas For Many

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

In the true spirit of the holiday season, organizations throughout the City are reaching out to those less fortunate by offering food, clothing and other necessities.

John Yazwinski, executive director at Father Bill's Place, said the shelter is servicing more people than ever before. "These are desperate times," he said. The organization will be giving away gifts and ham or turkey food baskets to every guest at the shelter. On Christmas Day, the shelter will hold a dinner from 12 noon until 2 p.m. Also, volunteers will be delivering meals to Quincy families.

Yazwinski said the shelter is at capacity and has been forced to turn away people this holiday season. "This is the worst we have ever seen it," he said. About 130 to 140 people arrive at the shelter every day seeking help, he said.

Jackie Gardner, director of the Red Cross South Area at 1495 Hancock St., said more than 1,000 South Shore children will benefit from the organization's holiday stocking program. Area businesses and citizens volunteer to participate in the program, which provides a Christmas stocking full of goodies for needy kids.

"The response has been overwhelming, to say the least," said Gardner. "Donors have been extra nice this year."

The Quincy Lodge of Elks is giving 150 baskets to needy families throughout the South Shore and Quincy, according to Exalted Ruler Sean McArdle. The baskets include a complete meal with turkey and all the fixings for a complete holiday meal.

Thomas Koch, executive director from the Koch Club, said the organization is celebrating its 50th year helping the needy. This year, the Koch Club will help approximately 50 families with various gifts and food baskets, including turkeys, hams and canned goods. Koch's father, the late Richard Koch, started the food basket program in 1952.

"Our donors are very grateful to help because every dollar they give is used for a needy family," said

Koch.

Bettyanne Lang, Manager of The Pantry Shelf at 776 Hancock St., said more than 100 families will receive gifts, toys, stocking stuffers and other items from Quincy donors. She said the organization teams a donor with a needy family to provide assistance during the holidays. Lang said some donors prefer to remain anonymous to the families, while others like to stay in direct contact.

"The people of Quincy have been tremendous," said Lang. "We are very blessed to have so much participation." Lang said the number of families seeking help has increased this year due to the downturn of the economy.

Tracy Donahue, director of planning and development at the Quincy Community Action Program at 1509 Hancock St., said the organization distributed 289 turkeys to Quincy families during the Thanksgiving holiday. She expects that number to be much greater for Christmas.

The Program assists families in need all year, but the demand is very high during the holiday season, she said. This year she expects the organization to assist 350 South Shore families by providing food, toys, clothing and donations.

Rosemary Wahlberg, a volunteer and former executive director at the Program, said the organization will be helping large and small families during a time of need.

"It is a wonderful thing to do, and I encourage everyone to get involved," said Wahlberg.

Peter Seppala, president of the Seaside Advocacy Group at 15 Bicknell St., said the organization has distributed approximately 144 food baskets to needy families. The baskets include a 10-14 pound turkey, depending upon the size of the family. Also, the Group has been giving toys to children of the families. Seppala said volunteers at the organization have been working seven days a week to keep up with the demand.

He said donations to the Group have been down this year, but "we appreciate everyone who has given the time and effort to this organization. We couldn't have done it without them."

The Quincy Crisis Center at 282 Billings Rd. will help more than 175 families this holiday season. David Wooster, director of the Center, said the organization will provide a turkey with all the fixings to families in need. He said the Center will assist families with children that will be out of school during the holiday season. Since the kids will not be receiving meals at school, the Center will help to feed those children while they are on vacation.

Wooster said the organization will also provide families with gifts, such as toys, articles of clothing, books and games. The Crisis Center receives donations from Toys for Tots, area businesses, churches and citizens.

He said the Crisis Center will be providing a brunch for needy families on Christmas Day from 9 am to 11 am at the United First Parish Church on Hancock St.

Major Linda Jones from the Salvation Army on 6 Baxter St. said more than 150 families have applied for help this holiday season. The organization will distribute toys, new clothing and food vouchers to purchase food for a Christmas dinner.

To Provide Scholarships For Working Families

Quincy After-School Child Care Program Receives $20,000

A $20,000 check personally delivered by Mayor William Phelan made it a special day for youngsters in the Quincy After-School Child Care program.

The money will be used to provide scholarships to working families in the form of reduced tuition.

Phelan presented the city check Thursday at the Lincoln Hancock School site to School Committee member Jo-Ann Bragg, business manager and treasurer of the program's board of directors.

In presenting the check, Phelan said, "We need to support in every way those working families who are hardest hit by the economic downturn. Quincy After-School Child Care provides a valuable service to those families."

"The children were very excited to meet the mayor," Bragg said. "They in turn presented him with cards thanking him for visiting them and giving funding to the program."

Douglas Veeder, executive director of the program, noted: "This year we received requests from families for scholarships of $45,000. The money given by Mayor William Phelan will go a long way to assisting working families in our program with much needed scholarships in the form of reduced tuition."

The program was founded in 1987 by the Mayor's Commission on Women. It provides after-school care at nine elementary public schools and extended day kindergarten at Atherton Hough, Beechwood, Knoll, Merrymount and the Squantum School.

The program keeps children safe and expands their educational opportunities through homework, labs, arts and crafts, school age curriculum, field trips and recreational activities.

Board Cancels Three Restaurant Licenses

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

In the past year, three restaurants in Quincy have closed.

The License Board Tuesday voted to cancel all three of the common victualer, all-alcoholic licenses because of a cessation of business at a licensed premise.

The three eating establishments are The Custom House, 125 Sea St., The Blue Note Exchange, 1626 Hancock St., and The Quincy Adams Restaurant, 60-62 Summer St.

Chairman Joseph Shea said the Blue Note was destroyed by a fire two years ago, and had filed bankruptcy which was later dismissed. He said he spoke to owner Jeremiah Cronin who said he had changed his career.

Shea said The Custom House had also filed bankruptcy which was later dismissed. He said he spoke to owner Paul Flaherty who Shea said had a "good record" and if the time ever came when Flaherty wanted to relocate to another site, the board would "entertain another application."

At the present time, Shea said, the site has been targeted for condos.

When Pat Fallon, owner of the Quincy Adams Restaurant, spoke to the board, he asked that the board consider renewing his common victualer, all alcoholic license instead of canceling it. He said that the building was also slated for condos, but because of a "stalled market," the plans are in limbo.

Fallon, who said he has an interest in the owners of the building, the Main Street Realty Trust, said he is thinking of remodeling and renovating the restaurant and reopening it.

The board in canceling the licenses told Fallon that he could return in January, and if he has a set of plans, the board would consider a new application.

In other business, the board continued a request of East Squantum T. Inc. doing business as Tedeschi's 751 East Squantum St. for a transfer of stock from Mark Shanahan to John Whalen. Atty. Gregory Galvin told the board the parties wanted to withdraw their request for transfer which has hit a "snag" and re-submit it on Jan. 14.

• Voted for a second time, the change of ownership of the Ninety Nine Restaurants to Charlies Management Co., located in Memphis, Tenn., doing business as O'Charley's, due to a problem with advertisements in the newspapers. Thomas Cattaneo will remain the manager at the restaurant on 59 Newport Ave. The name of the restaurant will remain the same.

All business will be forwarded to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission (ABCC).

Marie A. Curry Fund Receives Prestigious Sullivan Award For Work With Community

The Marie Curry Fund, which each year provides free screening mammograms at Quincy Medical Center for uninsured and underinsured women on the South Shore, is the 2002 recipient of the Massachusetts Society of Clinical Oncologists' Sullivan Award.

The Fund, which raised more than $130,000 during the fifth annual Marie Curry Walk this fall, was among four community organizations honored, including Aid for Cancer Research, Griffin's Friends and the Brian Bergevin Fund.

The Sullivan Award was established in 1993 by the Massachusetts Society of Clinical Oncologists, a statewide organization representing oncologists and physicians who provide care for cancer patients. The award recognizes outstanding contributions in public education aimed at cancer prevention and the promotion of quality cancer care in the state.

The award was named in honor of Nancy Auchin (Sullivan) Audesse, executive director of the Massachusetts Board of Registration in Medicine, who as a state senator from Lowell sponsored the legislation requiring Massachusetts' insurers to pay for off-label uses of cancer therapy drugs.

On hand for the presentation are, from left, Christine Schuster, RN, MBA, president and CEO of Quincy Medical Center; Nancy Auchin (Sullivan) Audesse, executive director of the Massachusetts Board of Registration in Medicine, for whom the award is named; Robert "Bob" Curry, founder of the Marie A. Quincy Medical Center (www.quincymc.org) is a 282-bed acute care community-teaching hospital providing South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services. The medical center's Alliance for Quality with Boston Medical Center (BMC), formed in 1999, brings academic medicine to the community.

At Quincy Medical Center, physicians from Boston Medical Center direct the departments of medicine, surgery, anesthesia, emergency medicine, and psychiatry. Additionally, physicians from BMC who are board-certified in a range of medical and surgical specialties work alongside community physicians to ensure the continuity of patient care.

Holiday Drinking And Driving: The Deadliest Time On The Road

For many of us, the holiday season can be the happiest time of the year, but for thousands of Americans it's marred by the tragic results of drinking and driving.

According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA), 28 percent of the 17,448 alcohol-related traffic fatalities during 2001 happened between Thanksgiving and New Year's.

"Unfortunately, alcohol is widely accepted, readily available and heavily promoted during this time of the year. These can all lead to abuse," said Mark A. Goldstein, M.D., chief of Pediatrics and Student Health Services at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and chair of the Student Health and Sports Medicine Committee of the Massachusetts Medical Society (MSS).

Ideas For Hosts, Guests

If you plan to entertain and make alcoholic beverages available to guests this season, there are some steps you can take to ensure their safety. These include:

- Avoid making alcohol the focus of the party and have non-alcoholic beverages available.
- Have plenty of food on hand, particularly fatty foods, such as cheese, which absorbs alcohol best and tends to release it more slowly into the bloodstream.
- Never force drinks on you guests.
- Never let someone who has been drinking get behind the wheel. Have the phone number of a reliable taxi service at the ready or suggest a designated driver to provide transportation for guests who have had too much to drink.

The risk alcohol poses can't be overemphasized. Recent studies have shown that even a single alcoholic beverage, which typically contains slightly more than one-half ounce of alcohol, can cause impairment.

The best advice for anyone thinking about consuming alcohol this holiday season or anytime is to heed Dr. Goldstein's warning. "Anyone who is drinking should not be driving," he noted, and suggested finding a designated driver to help keep the holiday season joyous.

A Little Bit Can Be Too Much

Blood alcohol levels are based on weight per volume and are reported in grams of pure alcohol per deciliter of whole blood. A blood alcohol level of .08 for instance (the legal blood alcohol limit for driving in Massachusetts) is .08 g/dl or grams per deciliter.

The effects of alcohol vary from person to person. However, data from the NHTSA indicates that driving skills impairment begins when the blood alcohol content is as low as .01-.02. For a 170-pound male this translates into approximately one ounce of alcohol consumed in one hour; for a 137-pound female it means less than one-half ounce consumed in the same period of time. Even at this level, nearly all drivers experience divided attention, impaired visual functions and drowsiness.

By the time blood alcohol reaches .030-.039, most drivers have difficulty maintaining driving vigilance and accurately gauging depth and distance. At .060 drivers experience delays in making driving choices, and by .10, there will be delays in reaction time for tasks such as applying the brakes or letting up on the gas pedal.

The Cost In Lives And Dollars

In 2000, 433 people were killed in traffic accidents in Massachusetts. More than 50 percent of these fatalities occurred in alcohol-related accidents. Additionally, alcohol consumption was a factor in more than 8,400 traffic accidents and resulted in more than 3,000 injuries.

Protect Pets And Home From Holiday Dangers

Few pet lovers realize it, but the holiday season is filled with danger for the family pet.

According to pet care experts, many dogs and cats suffer needlessly each holiday season because of injury or illness to holiday foods and decorations.

"One of the greatest hazards to your pets at this time is the Christmas tree," said Jennifer Hill of The Canine Fence Company. "With its glittering lights and shiny ornaments, it's bound to attract your pet."

Many trees come crashing down when an excited dog bounds into it or a cat tries to climb it. The result:

injured pets and damaged family heirlooms.

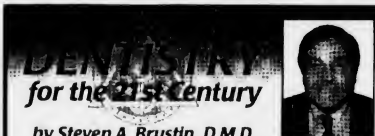

Even a well-secured tree can be a treat to a pet that likes to chew on things. Glass ornaments, electrical cords and tree lights look like playthings, but can cause serious harm if mouthed. Pine needles and tinsel can injure a pet's digestive track of eaten.

Nor is the tree the only holiday danger. The aromas of food coming from the dining room or the coffee table may be enticing to pets. But the treats that humans enjoy may be deadly for pets. Chocolate, macadamia nuts, raisins and grapes, coffee, alcoholic beverages and a variety of other common foods can be fatal if ingested by a dog.

What To Do

You don't have to confine the family pets to their room for the duration of the season to solve the problem, noted Hill. A safe, reliable alternative is the Invisible Fence In-Home system, which gives your pet the freedom to be part of the fun, but keeping the pet away from danger — and out of trouble.

The system is a portable, easy-to-use digital communications system that is FCC-approved. The dog or cat wears a light-weight computerized collar programmed to receive an audible radio signal that is activated when he approaches an off-limits area. The small wireless transmitter can be tucked behind the Christmas tree, or hidden under the coffee table.

A TOOTH-SAVING STRATEGY

Research shows that patients with periodontal disease can utilize the non-surgical treatment combination of aggressive cleaning and short-term antibiotics to effectively save their teeth. The study included patients with severe periodontal disease who had four or more areas recommended for surgery or tooth extraction. The patients underwent an aggressive cleaning technique known as root planning and scaling, involving utilization of a special instrument that is slipped down to the bottom of the pocket between tooth and gums to remove harmful plaque and toxic bacterial by-products. The patients then received an antibiotic and follow-up root planning and scaling every three months. It was found that the deep cleaning and medication rendered 87% of the initially recommended surgeries and extraction unnecessary.

The best time to see your dentist is before you have a problem. The most valuable service we can provide is a thorough and complete examination. Virtually all dental problems — decay, gum disease, jaw joint difficulties and loose teeth — are easily detected in their early stages and can be treated most economically and comfortably at that time. We are located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we're currently accepting new patients. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. The benefits of the treatment regimen described above were found to last during five years of follow-up.

because it takes many weeks to recruit, hire and train new personnel, O'Connell said. Currently, the department is short-handed by seven firefighters, he said. The department continues to use overtime to make up for the shortage, he said.

To make matters worse, 22 additional firefighters will retire next year, the Chief said.

Overtime costs will continue to plague the City unless more firefighters are hired, he said.

"This department is in dire need of funding, or we will have to put a ladder out of service," O'Connell said.

In the meantime, the city's personnel director has sent out a requisition to civil service to begin hiring 22 firefighters, Chief O'Connell said.

The hiring process can take weeks because the department must go through Civil Service, screen applicants, and train them, he said. New firefighters would have to be hired by May 1, 2003, and ready for duty by July 1 in order to avoid the same problem next year, he said.

Chief O'Connell said he was not trying to alarm the Council or the public, but he wanted to present an accurate overview of the budget situation. Two weeks ago, Chief O'Connell told Mayor Phelan that the department would see an $800,000 shortfall in the budget for fiscal 2003. If supplemental funding is not approved the department could lose the use of Engine 4 in Wollaston. Engine 4 in Wollaston would be the most feasible location to shut down due to the grid-like configuration of the area it services, the Chief said.

But O'Connell assured Councilors that he was not advocating the loss of Engine 4; however, he wanted to present this possibility if the department did not receive a supplemental appropriation.

"Your words were very sobering," Ward 1 Councilor Greg Hanley told O'Connell. "Do we have adequate protection in the City of Quincy?"

Chief O'Connell said the current staffing levels are barely adequate, but he is concerned about the safety of Quincy firefighters. "My firefighters are not adequately protected," said the Chief.

Currently, the Fire Department has a staff of 207, of which 141 are designated as firefighters. Ideally, the department should have approximately 160 firefighters to adequately staff all fire apparatus, O'Connell said.

In addition, O'Connell told the Council he expects another 22 firefighters to retire next year. This will exacerbate the current problem unless the City authorizes the funding to hire new personnel.

Ward 3 Councilor Kevin Coughlin was adamant in his support for supplemental funding to cover the overtime costs. He said he wants to hear about the Mayor's plans with regard to this issue.

"It would be a fatal mistake for the Mayor to underestimate the concerns of the people serviced by the Wollaston station," said the Ward 3 Councilor.

Coughlin said it was not fiscally prudent to continue to fund high overtime costs. Hiring new personnel is the way to go, he said. "This is not only a fiscal issue, but it is also a safety issue," he said. "If the Fire Department is not properly staffed it calls into question the safety of the firefighters."

Coughlin, along with Ward 5 Councilor Doug Guro, agreed that the Mayor should make a supplemental appropriation to cover the overtime costs. The funds could come from a $3.4 million reserve appropriation that was approved by the Council recently.

Mayor Phelan said the city needs to strike a balance between budget costs and maintaining the same level of services in the City.

"We are looking at other areas in the budget to make up this shortfall and we want as much of the reserve appropriation as possible to go into the stabilization fund," said Phelan.

Phelan said he and Chief O'Connell are on the "same page" with regard to this issue. They will evaluate all options and make a cost effective decision, he said.

HARD HATS passed around by the men and women of the Quincy & South Shore Building Trades & Construction Council working on the Fore River Power Plant project in North Weymouth resulted in a trailer full of more than 12,500 pounds of food and a $5,000 check to purchase more for the South Shore Friends of the Homeless and the Weymouth Food Bank. "We feel lucky to have a job and we just want to help our neighbors," said Tom Williams of Laborers Local 133, one of the organizers.

Ayers Signs On To Early Education Bill

Rep. Bruce Ayers has signed on as a co-sponsor of the Early Education for All legislation designed to enhance the quality of pre-school education.

"Children who participate in these programs develop better language skills, score higher on school readiness tests and have better social skills and fewer behavioral problems once they enter school," said the Early Education for All Campaign.

"For every dollar invested in high quality early education, the community can expect seven dollars in benefits within 16 year due to increased earnings of participants and reduced costs for remedial education and crime."

Specific goals of the legislation are:

- To ensure that every preschool child has access to high-quality early childhood education, which meets professionally accepted standards, is staffed by well-trained early education and is delivered through the existing mixed systems of public and private programs.

- To create a state system to improve the training, education and compensation of the early education and acre workforce.

- To ensure access to high quality, full day public kindergarten for all families who would like their children to participate.

'Tis The Season To Be Safe

Operation Decoration Emphasizes Safe Holiday Decorating

Decking the halls with boughs of holly may have been a popular means of decorating for holidays of years past, but flashing bulbs, illuminated icicles, even animated figurines on lawns and rooftops are a far more common sight today. And, while there's no denying their beauty, electrical decorations such as light strings, animated ornaments and figures should be used and displayed with the utmost care.

According to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC), each year, hospital emergency rooms treat about 10,000 people for injuries related to holiday lights, decorations and trees. To address this alarming trend, Underwriters Laboratories Inc. (UL), an independent, not-for-profit product safety testing and certification organization, is teaming up with the National Fire Protection Association (NFPA), a private, nonprofit fire safety advocate group, to sponsor Operation Decoration, a public awareness campaign aimed at helping to promote holiday decorating safety.

The safety professionals are UL and the NFPA offer the following tips and precautions when decorating your home this holiday season:

- When purchasing live, cut trees or greens, carefully inspect the needles. If they're brown or break easily, the greenery isn't fresh and poses a greater fire risk. When you take your tree home, put it in a sturdy, non-tip stand and keep it filled with water at all times.

- If your family prefers decorating with artificial trees or greens, purchase those that are flame retardant. The product packaging will indicate if the branches of your artificial tree or greens have been treated with flame-retardant material. Remember that light strings and other electrical decorations should not be used on artificial trees or greens that have metallic needles, leaves or branch coverings.

- Place your tree or greens at least three feet away from fireplaces, radiators and other heat sources. Also make sure not to block a doorway or other exit route.

- Use light strings and animated or electrical decorations that bear the UL Mark. The UL Mark on a product means that UL engineers have tested representative samples of the product for foreseeable safety hazards such as fire and electric shock.

- Electrical light strings and decorations such as candelights and illuminated ornaments that have been tested by UL bear holographic labels -- easily identified by their silver base and UL Marks that appear to "float" in the background. Holographic labels for light strings for both indoor and/or outdoor use are identified by red UL Marks.

- Before you begin decorating, your first step should be to follow the manufacturer's instructions concerning installation and maintenance of the electrical decorations you'll be using.

- Before plugging in newly purchased or previously used electrical decorations, carefully inspect each decoration. Cracked sockets, frayed or bare wires, and loose connections may cause a serious electric shock or start a fire. Replace damaged items with new, UL Listed decorations.

- Always unplug a light string or electrical decoration before replacing light bulbs or fuses. Check the instructions to determine which maintenance the manufacturer recommends you perform. In most cases, maintenance is limited to fuse and lamp replacement only. Don't attempt to make a repair unless the instructions indicate the proper procedure and equipment for doing so. Decorations may overheat or safety mechanisms may not operate properly if you use replacement parts other than those specified by the manufacturer.

- Don't mount or support light strings in any way that might damage the cord's wire insulation.

- Check the markings on your electrical decorations to determine the maximum number of decorative light strings that may be connected. If the product packaging does not indicate the number of light strings that may be connected together, practice this rule of thumb: Do not connect more than three midjet (push-in bulbs) light string sets together. Light strings with the screw-in bulbs (C7s and C9s) should have a maximum of 50 bulbs connected together.

- Don't overload extension cords -- it could cause the cord to overheat and start a fire.

Property Sold To Auto Dealership Owner Daniel Quirk For $2.3M

Daniel Flynn & Co. Sells 6.73 Acres Of Undeveloped Land Next To Shipyard

Daniel J. Flynn & Co., a Quincy-based full-service real estate firm, has sold 6.73 acres of undeveloped land located next to the former Fore River shipyard in Braintree.

The property sold to auto dealership owner Daniel Quirk for $2.3 million. Former owners Republic Financial took title to the land during a public auction held by Flynn & Co. in September, during which Quirk took ownership of six smaller parcels. In all, Quirk has acquired approximately 9.5 acres on nine neighboring parcels.

The nine parcels include a minimal amount of frontage along Quincy Avenue just south of the former shipyard. The majority of the property is set back from Quincy Avenue and is primarily utilized as an automotive dump.

"This is a very significant transaction for the shipyard area as a whole," Flynn & Co. CEO Dan Flynn said. "This activity represents revitalization in an area that has long been dormant."

"Quirk has a strong track record of developing successful projects that improve the look of an area and generate tax revenue. With the upcoming auction of the shipyard itself, this transaction sets the right tone for redevelopment of the area."

Flynn & Co. continues to market a 2.6 acre lot neighboring the Quincy side of the shipyard, and anticipates that the eventual sale of the shipyard will greatly influence the value of the remaining lot.

"This is truly a prime investment area," Flynn said. "Buying in this area now is like buying stocks when the market is down. Over time, as property continues to change hands and becomes revitalized, the value of this land will very likely improve."

Daniel J. Flynn & Co. specializes in commercial sales and leasing, residential real estate and real estate auctions. For more information call 617-479-9000 or visit www.djflynn.com.

OPEN TO INSPECTION

As part of a smart home-selling strategy, sellers and their agents will anticipate the concerns of potential buyers. One primary concern is that buyers might be purchasing a home with defects. If so, the best way to defuse this concern is for the seller to have his or her home inspected by a professional inspector prior to placing the house on the market. This will help uncover problems that were not known to the seller so that they may be addressed and removed as potential obstacles to a sale. Once all repairs are made, the seller can essentially present buyers with a property that has a clean bill of health, which would remove doubts from buyers minds.

If you are selling a home, it could be advantageous to have your home professionally inspected so that you can identify defects early. CENTRAL REAL ESTATE can identify ways to improve your home's curb appeal, recommend a house inspector, and coordinate open houses. Our mission is to sell your property quickly and for full market value. To experience our award-winning service, call us at (617) 328-1312, or visit us at 128 Mayor McGrath Highway. Happy holidays!

HINT: A professionally conducted home inspection should cover all of the home's major structural and mechanical systems, inside and out, from foundation to roof.

If today is Thursday, why is your dad taking medications for Tuesday?

Timely medication reminders or occasional daily assistance may be what's needed at this time.

Irish Cafe And Bakery Opens In Brewer's Corner

Mayor William Phelan joined City Council President Daniel Raymond in cutting the ribbon at the grand opening of a new Irish cafe and bakery at 378 Granite St., Brewer's Corner.

The owners of the new cafe are Patrick Mannion, who learned to bake breads at his mother's side as a child in Galway, and his wife, Diane, who has a master's degree from Simmons College.

"I am please that the Mannions have made the investment in the new business in Brewer's Corner which will provide residents and commuters with a wonderful place to enjoy home-cooked Irish meals and fresh breads and pastries," said Joseph Mannino, executive director of Quincy 2000.

"Mannion's Cafe and the renovated former Globe Building is the beginning to the revitalization of Brewer's Corner or what the area planning committee of the district calls Kings Corner.

"I would also like to thank Mr. Pat Corcoran, owner of the building, who participated in the Brewer's Corner Planning Committee and who has made a significant financial investment in the building renovation project and the business district."

"Quincy 2000 was a great help in getting us into business and assisting with licensing and permitting," said Patrick Mannion. "Our specialty Irish breads are flying off the shelves and people in the neighborhood have been very supportive. In fact, it was they that convinced us to add a dinner menu and hours."

McCauley Book Signing Saturday At Historical Society

It may not be a threat to David McCullough's best-selling biography of John Adams but it's doing all right in its limited sphere.

City Councillor Frank McCauley's "Quincy — A Political History, 1889-2000," has all but sold out its first printing of 1,000 copies — a little over 800 copies, to be exact.

McCauley will be at the Quincy Historical Society in the Adams Academy between the hours of 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 21, for yet another book signing. The cost is $21 a copy.

Dunkin' Donuts Shops Collecting Holiday Gifts For Needy Youngsters

Four Dunkin' Donuts shops in Quincy are conducting a holiday gift drive to benefit needy youngsters through the Germantown Neighborhood Center.

The drive, which was launched last week at the Dunkin' Donuts shop in President's Plaza, will continue to Friday, Dec. 20.

Participating in the kick-off were owner Octavio Carvalho, Quincy Fire Fighters Union President Bill Arienti, Quincy Police

Crime Prevention Officer Bob Hanna, Neil Leonard, Quincy Firefighter Association member, and representatives of WBCN-FM 104.1.

Octavio and Victor Carvalho, franchisees, will collect the gifts for children of all ages at their four shops located at 543 Southern Artery, 825 Southern Artery, 1250 Hancock St. and 1416 Hancock St.

Customers are invited to take an ornament from a Christmas tree at the shops and return it with a new, unwrapped gift that is appropriate for a child of the age and gender that is specified on the back of the ornament.

The Germantown Neighborhood Center is a private, non-profit organization. Its annual holiday program aids families of low to moderate income in need by providing meals and gifts, counseling and other services.

If I Could Have One Wish Come True . . .

Fifth grade students in Quincy public and parochial schools were invited again this year to submit articles for this special holiday section.

The theme is: "If I Could Have One Wish Come True This Holiday Season It Would Be . . ."

We at The Sun are happy to share their thoughts with you. Publishing these articles each year has become a tradition that we look forward to and we hope that you do, too.

We want to thank Frank Moffett, Acting Director of Curriculum, for coordinating the public schools' participation and the principals and classroom teachers of those schools.

We also thank Ms. Elizabeth Mirasolo, principal of St. Joseph's School and Sister Anne Marie Ghiloni, principal of Sacred Heart School and the teachers of those schools for their participation and cooperation.

To all who took part we extend warmest season's greetings and wishes for a happy, healthy New Year.

Thank you all, most sincerely.

If I would be to have unlimited wishes because then I could give as many wishes to my family as I wanted. I could give a pool to my school. I could be mayor of the city or I could be president of the country.

SPORTS

New Coach, Era For North Quincy Raiders

By CHRIS POISSON

In their last hurrah, Ted Stevenson and the nine seniors were able to lead the North Quincy High boys' basketball team back into the postseason last year after a four-year absence.

The story line this season, though, will be completely different: a new coach will be building his own program from scratch.

James Rendle, an assistant last year, takes over for Stevenson who retired after 15 years at the helm and inherits a squad with about as much experience as a 16-year-old driving a car.

"We're building a new program," Rendle said. "We're very inexperienced having graduated nine seniors. Early on, we're going to have to make up for our inexperience with hustle and hard work. We're in a big time league and we're a small school. It's going to take a little while to be competitive with the bigger schools."

North Quincy tipped off the season Tuesday at Taunton and tomorrow (Friday) night at 6:30 it hosts Falmouth and Monday it battles rival Quincy at home at 5 p.m.

As if the task weren't difficult enough, Rendle has lost two of his main players to injury. Senior guard Joe Holleran, who separated his shoulder in the Thanksgiving Day football game, will be out until January and junior power forward Brandon Neves will be out at least two weeks with an ankle sprain.

"We're hurting physically," Rendle said.

Neves' injury really hampers North Quincy because of the team's lack of depth in the frontcourt. Senior Dan Coughlin and junior Adam Smith will receive plenty of minutes to fill the void. Coughlin will be counted upon both offensively and on the boards while Smith, a 6-foot-2 slasher, will be looked at to provide a lot of scoring.

Also expected to turn in "big games" is senior Sean Bowes, the 6-foot-6 starting center. Senior Tony Martin serves as a backup forward.

Even with the loss of Holleran, North Quincy's strength rests in the backcourt. Junior Jimmy Burke will start at the point with fellow classmate Darryl Costa at shooting guard.

"Burke controls the ball really well and Costa is a very good shooter," said Rendle, who noted Costa will also be asked to help with rebounding.

Freshman Kyle Costa, Darryl's younger brother, will see a lot of action backing up both guards. Coming off the bench are seniors Norman Yuen, Ryan Rogers and Will Gardner.

"They're going to really help off the bench," Rendle said. "We're going to rotate them in a lot because we're going to be pressure the other guards. We're going to be very aggressive in the backcourt because that is where our depth is. Hopefully that will take some pressure off the frontcourt."

As Rendle begins to design the blueprints for a new program, the expectations are far different than what he's used to as the head coach of the powerful volleyball program.

"With the injuries to Neves and Holleran and our lack of varsity experience, the first few games are going to be tough," he said. "What I'm looking for is steady improvement. Our goal is to be a better team every week. And by the end of the year we can be a very competitive team."

Quincy-North Girls Win First Varsity Game

The Quincy/North Quincy girls' hockey team pulled out a 6-5 victory at Westwood last Saturday night in its first game at the varsity level.

With the scored knotted at 5-5, junior defenseman Rose Devlin fired a shot from the point for the game-winner with 3:53 left in the game.

"The team won combining talent and a lot of heart and determination," said head coach Laura Prisco. "They were not leaving that rink with a loss."

Q/NQ headed to Waltham yesterday (Wednesday) and Saturday it travels to Arlington Catholic. On Monday, it faces off against Wilmington in the home opener at Quincy Youth Arena at 4 p.m.

ICE HOCKEY

In its first season last year, Q/NQ played mostly a JV schedule but it also defeated several varsity teams.

Against Westwood, junior center Kristina Manganaro scored a hat trick and senior goalie Jessie Poggi recorded 28 saves. Q/NQ also killed off all six Westwood power plays.

Quincy struck first in the opening period on a goal by sophomore Marissa Powers and several minutes later Manganaro made it 2-0.

After a Westwood goal, junior Lindsey Langille found the back of the net to make it 3-1. Westwood, though, scored with six seconds left in the frame to trim the deficit to 3-2.

In the second, Westwood netted the equalizer in the first minute of play before Manganaro scored her second of the game to put Quincy back on top, 4-3.

In the third, Manganaro completed the hat trick with an early goal. Westwood answered with two straight goals to even the game before Devlin's heroics.

Quincy Presidents' Goal: Tournament Appearance

By CHRIS POISSON

Head coach John Franceschini hopes eight returnees and a healthy Kevin O'Connell from the get-go translates into a tournament appearance for his Quincy High School boys' basketball team.

"With an added year of maturity and having Kevin O'Connell from the beginning of the year, I think that will add to our success this year," he said.

O'Connell, a senior co-captain and point guard, missed most of last season with an injury sustained in the junior varsity Thanksgiving Day football game.

He returned for the final five games of the season and led the Presidents to three wins. Considering the team had only two wins in the first 13 games without him, you can sense his value to the club.

"Kevin brings a consistency factor, a bit of stability," Franceschini said. "He did it with the football team. He brings that leadership quality."

Quincy opens its season tomorrow (Friday) night at 6:30 when it hosts Dennis-Yarmouth and on Monday it dukes it out with rival North Quincy. It then faces Foxboro Dec. 27 and Hanover Dec. 29, both strong non-league opponents.

"We have good, solid competition early," Franceschini said. "How we come out can help us out a lot. They're tough teams. If we can be at least around .500 before the beginning of the new year, we'll be in good shape. The kids have set out to be contenders in the league."

Other returnees from last season are seniors Shawn Munchbach, a co-captain, Matt Ramponi, Anthony Boyle, Craig Keenan and Mike Quigley and juniors Bill Cosgrove and Dan Cosgrove.

Newcomers are senior Malcolm Lynn, juniors Ed DeWitt and J.J. Niamkey, and sophomores Parker Scott and John Folino.

"The new players, especially Parker Scott and Niamkey, are going to see a great deal of action," Franceschini said.

Once again, the Presidents will rely on an attacking defense to create their offense. They'll play a suffocating man-to-man defense and run a lot of presses in hopes of creating turnovers that will lead to easy scoring chances.

"Our philosophy is not going to change," Franceschini said. "We're going to rely on our defensive play. A lot of our defense creates our offense."

Joining O'Connell in the backcourt will be Munchbach, Ramponi, Keenan, the Cosgroves, Lynn and Scott. Boyle, Quigley, DeWitt, Niamkey and Folino will play the forward positions.

A CATALYST FOR CHANGE

It is a tragic fact of life that seven out of ten carbon monoxide (CO) poisoning deaths are vehicle-related. Automobiles are a common source of carbon monoxide, particularly when they are operating in enclosed or semi-enclosed areas, such as a garage. The good news in this respect is that catalytic converters, designed to reduce automobile emissions, may be saving lives. According to a recent study, the death rate from unintentional carbon monoxide poisoning in vehicles has fallen 81.3% since the advent of the catalytic converter, which was introduced in the mid-1970s to enable car manufacturers to comply with the Clean Air Act of 1970. The reduction is accidental CO deaths is an untended, but welcomed, one.

SCOTT DEWART

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

It was Christmas Eve. Lewis Redner tossed and turned for hours but could not fall asleep. His mind was haunted by a request that Rev. Phillips Brooks had made of him during the day. Brooks asked him to write a tune for a new Christmas poem he had written. The children in Brooks's church school liked it so well that they begged him to convert it into a song. He told this to Redner, the organist, but alas, the organist could not think of a single melody. After sheer exhaustion he fell asleep. Suddenly, he awakened. In his sleep a beautiful tune was playing over and over in his head. He quickly reached for a pen. By early daybreak he was done. He had written a beautiful tune for the lovely poem.

You might wonder what inspired Phillips Brooks to write this lovely poem. In 1865 he had made a trip to Bethlehem. In the evenings he stood atop the hills outside the town and watched the shepherds with their flocks. At midnight the chiming from atop the Church of the Nativity would peal out over the countryside and could be heard for miles. He would follow the melody of the chiming back to the church where he then worshiped with the other pilgrims. The memories of this enchanting experience so awed him that 3 years later he was compelled to write - "Oh Little Town of Bethlehem."

'Tree Of Angels' Remembers Loved Ones

The holiday season has always been a difficult time of the year for those who have lost loved ones.

Ginny Trainor of 64 Faxon Rd., North Quincy, found a way to deal with her loss, and she is giving residents the opportunity to do the same.

Three weeks ago, Trainor picked out a nine-foot Douglas Fir tree, placed it in her yard and established a "Tree of Angels," a Christmas tree which gives people the opportunity to memorialize and remember loved ones during the holidays. Trainor invites residents to visit her residence and place a holiday ornament, along with a red ribbon, on the tree. People can write the name of the person in mind on the ribbon. Interested parties also can remain anonymous if they wish to do so, she said.

To date, more than 100 ornaments have been placed on the tree from passersby, she said.

"I know a lot of people are hurting during this time of year, and I wanted to give them the chance to remember loved ones," said Trainor.

She said citizens stop by the house, hang their ornaments and share memories about lost loved ones. She said the act is therapeutic. "It is for me," she said.

Initially, the tree was set up to remember Trainor's sisters, RoseMarie and Missy, who passed away two years ago and Aug. 28 of this year, respectively. But the idea quickly expanded to include anyone who wanted to remember their loved ones.

She said her sister Missy always wanted a large Christmas tree, hence the purchase of the large Douglas Fir. Her sister RoseMarie regularly carried candy in her pockets, so Trainor hung candy on the tree as well.

She placed a large angel on top of the tree, and decorated the rest with 1,000 white lights and garland.

Trainor said she will be accepting ornaments for the tree until mid January, when she finally takes the tree down.

"Overall, this has been a very comforting gesture, to me and to those who participate," said Trainor, who wants to make this an annual event.

New Year's Eve Entertainment,

Over 10,000 Expected At First Night

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

More than 10,000 revelers are expected to usher in the new year at First Night Quincy, with a diverse lineup of entertainment and activities designed to appeal to people of all ages, according to organizers.

Quincy's 11th annual new year's celebration, Tuesday, Dec. 31, will feature more than 50 performances from more than 150 different entertainers, including musicians, dancers and jugglers.

"This year we have been able to put together a very diverse lineup which includes some old faithfuls along with a good mix of new entertainment," said Dave Murphy, program manager of the Park Department. "There will be something for everyone," he said.

Highlights of this year's show include a fireworks display, ice sculptures and the annual Festival of Lights Parade.

This year's First Night Quincy festivities will begin at 4 p.m. and end after a fireworks display at 9 p.m. Murphy said the decision to end the event before midnight this year was made because organizers want to make the events more convenient for families.

"Families are first in Quincy," Murphy said. "We want to allow families to bring their children home early and still celebrate the new year in their own way. This will enable the City of Quincy to develop its own niche with regard to First Night."

Also, organizers do not want to compete with Boston's larger celebration at midnight, Murphy said.

First Night Quincy buttons are now on sale and can be purchased for $7 before Dec. 31. Buttons will cost $10 the day of the events.

This year, organizers are offering "Family Pack" buttons, which allows a family of four to purchase four tickets for $20. This deal will be available only prior to Dec. 31, organizers said. A First Night button will allow access to all First Night events from 4 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Buttons can be purchased at participating Dunkin' Donuts, Stop & Shop supermarkets, Victory Markets, Roche Bros. Supermarkets and Quincy City Hall.

Returning this year to the celebration is KIDFEST, which will be held at the Center for Technical Education (Vo-Tech) gym from 4 to 9 p.m. The venue will feature numerous games, children's entertainment, 3-D golf, and other activities designed to keep children occupied all day long.

Organizers reminded revelers that the events are alcohol-free.

"This is a family event, and it is designed with that in mind," said Murphy. "First Night Quincy promises to be fun, entertaining and safe."

$1.3 Million To Help Homeless

The Quincy/Weymouth Consortium has been awarded $1,377,907 to provide housing and services for the homeless, announces Mayor William Phelan.

The funds were awarded under the 2002 McKinney Program administered by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

"These much needed funds will assist us to help the neediest among us," Phelan said. "They couldn't come at a better time given the decrease in aid to many social service agencies."

The funds were applied for by Quincy's Planning and Community Development

Department as the lead agency and will assist organizations in Quincy and Weymouth in providing housing and services for the homeless as follows:

Shelter Plus Care—New Permanent Supportive Housing Program: Quincy Housing Authority (QHA) in conjunction with Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition (QISC/Father Bill's Place) will receive $515,520 for a new permanent supportive housing program over a five-year period which will help address the extraordinary need for permanent affordable subsidized housing units for homeless disabled indi-

For Outstanding Community Service

Dec. 31 Last Day For Sun 'Citizen Of Year' Nominations

Tuesday, Dec. 31 is the last day to submit nominations for The Quincy Sun's 18th annual "Citizen of the Year" award.

Established in 1985, the award recognizes an individual for outstanding community service or a special achievement.

Last year, Henry (Hank) Bradley, director of Quincy Veterans' Services, was honored for his compassion, dedication, commitment and humility as veterans' services director and for his volunteer work for many civic and charitable causes.

Bradley was selected from among 25 nominees submitted by Sun readers. A panel of judges representing a cross-section of the community made the final decision.

Again this year, Sun readers may nominate the person they feel is the most deserving of the award.

A nomination ballot to help the selection process appears on this page.

After nominations close Tuesday, Dec. 31, a judging panel will be selected to make the final choice from nominations submitted.

If you know someone you would like to see recognized with this award, fill out the ballot and mail it to:

The Quincy Sun
Attn: Citizen of the Year

1372 Hancock St.
Quincy, MA 02169

Nominations should be postmarked no later than Dec. 31.

Ballots can also be dropped off at The Sun office at the above address by Dec. 31.

Those submitting nominations should identify themselves. They can also attach to the ballot a letter detailing the reason for their nomination.

Nominees can be someone in elective office, a member of an appointed board, a clergy member, a teacher or school administrator, a police or firefighter, someone in the business community, a sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has given freely of his or her time to a worthy project or cause.

Past recipients of the award, and the year of their selection, are:

Tony Siciliano, former deputy director of Quincy Emergency Management (formerly Civil Defense), 1985

Ruth Wainwright of Houghs Neck, a long-time community volunteer, 1986.

The late Richard J. Koch, Sr., for his work with charitable and community causes over four decades, posthumously in 1987.

Martin Finnegan, retired

Quincy high school athletic director, for coordinating the drug and alcohol program Project Impact, 1988.

Clara Yeomans, a long-time environmentalist and charter member of the Quincy Conservation Commission, 1989.

The late Gerald Gherardi for his contributions to charities and service organizations over a half century, 1990.

Frank Kearns, for his innumerable volunteer contributions as a community activist and advocate for the city's elderly, homeless, needy and poor, 1991.

Stephen Cantelli, an innovative Quincy public school teacher and advocate of community education, 1992.

Mary Vallier, a founder of Domestic Violence Ended (DOVE) and long-time aide to battered women and abused children, 1993.

Fr. William McCarthy, retired pastor of St. John's Church and Quincy's beloved "Father Bill," for helping the poor, hungry, homeless and all others in need for many years, 1994.

Joseph McConville, for freely giving a good part of his life to Quincy youth and his city in many capacities, including as a youth skating instructor and chairman of the Quincy Planning Board,

Olin Taylor for helping others, especially veterans, ill-children and the less fortunate as his "labor of love," 1996.

Robert Derbes for his volunteer work and many contributions to the community, 1997.

Robert "Bob" Curry for his long-time volunteer work in worthy civic and charitable causes as a member of many local organizations, including the Marie A. Curry Foundation which provides free mammograms for individuals not covered by insurance, 1998.

Ronald G. Adams, who has given freely of his time to guide and inspire his Broad Meadows Middle School students in highly acclaimed efforts to right social wrongs and oversights, both locally and worldwide, 1999.

The late Carol Herbai, for her dedication, enthusiasm and inspiration as a volunteer for a half century at Quincy Medical Center, the American Red Cross and a leper colony, 2000.

Those nominated in the past are eligible to be nominated again this year. Since this is not a popularity contest, each nominee has an equal chance of being selected regardless of the number of nominations received. Anyone nominated just once has the same chance of being the award recipient.

Again, the deadline for nominations is Tuesday, Dec. 31.

The name of the winner will be announced in The Quincy Sun in January.

2002: A Year Of Change

By TOM HENSHAW

It was a year of change in Quincy as the old guard passed on to make way for the new.

Paul Harold, long in the forefront of Quincy politics as state senator, city councilor and county register of deeds, died unexpectedly at the tender age of 53.

Joseph LaRaia, whose political career paralleled that of Harold as city councilor and mayor for one chaotic term, retired from the Board of Assessors.

So did Thomas Gorman as fire chief and Thomas Frane as police chief to be succeeded by William Falco as police chief and Paul O'Connell as acting fire chief.

A new mayor was sworn in, William Phelan, and likewise a new City Council president, Daniel Raymondi.

The new mayor brought with him his own team, too, a new solicitor, Monica Conyngham; a new personnel director, Roberta Kety; a new public works commissioner, Jay Fink.

Phelan entered office faced with a fiscal crisis as the city was $5.6 million in the hole. But by year's end, Phelan was touting a $3.4 million surplus as the top accomplishment of his first year.

The opening of the new Quincy Center Concourse connecting Burgin Parkway to the Parkway promised to revive moribund business in the downtown Quincy shopping area.

This then was the year 2002 in Quincy:

January

William Phelan, newly inaugurated as the 32nd mayor of Quincy in his inaugural address, identified public safety as the number one priority of his administration.

"We face a world changed

2002 In Review

utterly and completely by the horrifying events of Sept. 11," he said, a reference to the terrorist attack that brought down the World Trade Center towers in New York City.

Phelan, addressing an audience that filled the 515-seat Lloyd Hill Auditorium at Quincy High School, pledged to appoint a Commission on Public Safety to establish a clear emergency policy for the city.

Phelan, 42, also reaffirmed his commitment to zero-based budgeting and asked the City Council to establish an Office of Constituent Services "to make government more accessible to the people whom we serve."

In other actions at the two-hour inaugural ceremony Daniel Raymondi was unanimously elected president of the City Council and Christine Cedrone was named vice chairwoman of the School Committee. Mayor Phelan serves as chairman

Four new city councilors were sworn into office: Joseph G. Finn, at large; Kevin F. Coughlin in Ward 3, Bryan C. Connolly in Ward 4, and Douglas S. Gutro in Ward 5. Reelected councilors were Frank McCauley and Timothy Cahill, at large; Gregory M. Hanley, Ward 1; Joseph J. Newton, Ward 6; and Raymondi, Ward 2.

Raymondi, in his maiden speech as Council president, called for the creation of a joint committee of the City Council and the School Committee to address the problem of teacher recruitment and retention in the Quincy public schools.

Phelan was sworn in by his father-in-law, former Mayor now Clerk of Courts Arthur Tobin and Phelan swore in the reelected members of the School Committee, Jo-Ann M. Bragg, Michael E. McFarland and Ron Mariano.

HISTORIC MOMENT -- New mayor William Phelan takes the oath of office from his father-in-law, former Mayor Arthur Tobin, clerk magistrate of Quincy District Court, at inaugural ceremony in January at Quincy High School auditorium. They are Quincy's first father-in-law, son-in-law mayors. (Quincy Sun Photo/Irish Bossart)

Mayor Phelan announced the first four members of his executive staff: Executive Secretary Laurie Allen, originally from Squantum; Administrative Assistant Ronald Donovan of Houghs Neck; Assistant to the Mayor Kristin Priscella of South Quincy; and Executive Assistant Celeste McGlone, originally from Quincy Point.

In his first message to city department heads, Mayor Phelan warned them to tighten their belts in the last six months of the current fiscal year in an attempt to close the gap on a projected $2.8 million budget deficit.

As evidence of coming tough times for Quincy, the new mayor pointed to a $2.1 million projected deficit that became $2.8 million in the past few weeks "because we didn't receive as much state aid as had been initially expected."

Phelan also instituted a "zero-based" budgeting process for the Fiscal 2003 budget, his first as the city's chief executive.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

- On Dec. 25, c. 6 B.C., Christ is born. Although most Christians celebrate Dec. 25 as the birthday of Jesus Christ, few in the first two Christian centuries claimed any knowledge of the exact day or year in which he was born. The precise reason why Christmas came to be celebrated on Dec. 25 remains obscure, but most researchers believe that Christmas originated as a Christian substitute for pagan celebrations of the winter solstice.
- On Dec. 24, 1814, the Treaty of Peace and Amity between His Britannic Majesty and the United States of America is signed by British and American representatives at Ghent, Belgium, ending the War of 1812.
- On Dec. 28, 1832, citing political differences with President Andrew Jackson and a desire to fill a vacant Senate seat in South Carolina, John C. Calhoun becomes the first vice president in U.S. history to resign the office.
- On Dec. 26, 1908, Jack Johnson becomes the first African-American to win the world heavyweight title when he knocks out Canadian Tommy Burns in the 14th round in a championship bout near Sydney, Australia.

• On Dec. 27, 1932, Radio City Music Hall opens in New York City. The theater, which showed movies as well as live performances featuring the famous chorus line the Rockettes, was the largest indoor theater in the world when it opened, seating 6,200 people.

• On Dec. 29, 1985, the "Railway Rapist" abducts 19-year-old Alison Day from a London train and kills her. Although the perpetrator had attacked and raped many women since 1982, this was his first murder.

• On Dec. 23, 1986, after nine days and four minutes in the sky, the experimental aircraft Voyager lands at Edwards Air Force Base in California, completing the first nonstop flight around the globe on one load of fuel. Voyager is on permanent display at the National Air and Space Museum in Washington, D.C.

We Get Letters

Before 2002 runs away from us, I'd like to acknowledge a few letters regarding recent columns.

On "A Time To Remember," the Quincy High School class of 1942 reunion:

Jean (Rodgers) Patten, Palm Beach Gardens, Fla., a member of the North Quincy High School class of 1942: "What a great nostalgic trip . . . So many memories of our wonderful days in Quincy in the 1940s. Here are a few added memories of my own.

"Remember how we all counted the days 'till Sailors Home Pond froze over? And the little campfires along the edges? And after a NQHS Thanksgiving football victory, we all marched up Hancock St. to the high school? Band blasting away and trafficked up for a few miles. But I don't remember any 'road rage' for the tie-ups.

"Although we've lived in Florida since 1968 — our roots are very much in New England. I think everyone will agree that the late 1940s and '50s were the very best years.

"And look at all the celebrities Quincy produced. Bill Dana (Svathmary) from QHS 1942. Also Lee Remick. Ruth Gordon and Billy DeWolfe lived on Wollaston Ave. at one time.

"Thank you for another column to paste in our memory book."

Helen Gohl, Academy Ave., Weymouth, class of 1941, Quincy High School: "I read your 'A Time To Remember' and thought it was fabulous. I graduated in '41, so could relate to the whole write-up.

"I thought how fortunate we were to grow up at that time. We had a wonderful time, so simple and so innocent. I only wish my grandchildren could experience some of the simple pleasures we had."

On "World War II: Our Finest Hour":

Paul Comi, a 1949 graduate of North Quincy High School, Korean War veteran, actor and now owner of a specialty coffee business in Montevia, Calif.:

"I want to thank you for your World War II commemorative speech that was reprinted in The Quincy Sun. It warmed my heart to see the expression of so many of the sentiments that I, myself hold and so rarely does one see expressed or remembered today.

"I recently read a book entitled 'Why The Left Hates America' by Daniel J. Flynn. It is a disturbing book since it reveals not only that much of the truth and facts about our history are no longer mentioned in the textbooks of today's schools and universities. But, there is a plethora of mean-spirited distortion and lies being spread about many of the great patriots and heroes of our nation's history."

Comi, a movie and TV actor before going into business for himself, adds:

"I'm still active as a member of the Actor's branch of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences and have served on their Foreign Film Entrants Committee.

"Also had the delightful experience of taking part in a recent Twilight Zone celebrity picture signing convention with a bunch of other former guest stars that appeared on that old series.

"Many are no longer around but there were a surprising number of participants including Mickey Rooney, Howard Morris, Kevin McCarthy and Jonathan Harris. Unfortunately, Jonathan passed away just a couple of weeks later."

On "The Yakoo: Let Him Be":

Morris (Duke) Goldberg, Beacon St., Brookline, North Quincy High School class of 1943:

"I am writing to you with my opinion of the Yakoo as the NQHS symbol of school spirit. First of all, we grew up as a family in North Quincy on Pierce St. My sister, Hilda (deceased) was class of '37, my sister Shirley, class of '39 and I was class of '43.

"We know about NQHS school spirit from way back — and we have that spirit to this very day. (I led the singing of our school song Oct. 27 at the Red Parrot in Hull for our 59th reunion.)

"The great school spirit evolved 24 years before the Yakoo was invented and I'm happy to say, continues with the student body and alumni.

"However, I don't like the Yakoo caricature of an Indian with a 'tomahawk' being used as a symbol of that spirit. I personally think it's demeaning to a certain group of people and offensive in general to a large group of people. Why should we (students and alumni) promote anything that offends others?

"It's not nice, it's not right (especially in the 21st century) and we don't need it to keep the great NQHS school spirit alive.

"The 'Red Raiders' nickname goes back long before the Yakoo and I think of it as denoting the Red and Black colors of the team — not particularly about Indians. I don't personally object to the 'Red Raiders' nickname, nor do I find it offensive."

On "One More Time," people and places I would like to see once again:

Bertha (Zack) Lapon, Main St., Randolph: "I read your Sunbeams and I remember all you wrote about. I lived in Quincy Point and we had a dry goods store.

"I remember the Lincoln Theater across the street from our store. Do you remember Mr. Beaumier? He owned the Lincoln and brought buses of children from the Mass. School in Canton to the movies.

"Mr. Henry Prario, principal of Quincy Point Junior High School where I went. Pete DeNicola was in my class — 1937, Quincy High School. My brother Izack played baseball at Fore River field.

"You wrote a story about my mom when she passed away . . . I love reading The Sun. Be well and keep writing."

To all of them, thanks for the letters, the comments and the memories.

AND A PERSONAL note to old friend and former Quincy resident, Joe Fasci now living in Granbury, Texas, where he is active in both American Legion and VFW programs and just about everything else.

Joe keeps up on what's going on in his old hometown through The Sun which he gets by mail. And if there's a typo, he is sure to spot it and let us know. And he has found a few.

Joe, now that you are so deep in the heart of Texas, I hear you might go into politics. Maybe a run for sheriff. Just be sure to saddle up early. Adios, old pal, and a happy, healthy new year.

This view is from the North Weymouth side so you can see the old coal escalator for the Edgar power plant on the left. The old turnstile-type steel bridge that this new bridge replaced was on the left where today's new temporary bridge has been built. In times past, engineers designed structures like this with more than function in mind. For example, this bridge includes many striking art deco design features such as the railing and the bridge-tender towers as well as the light fixtures. Today, the new Quincy Center Concourse bridge revives the ideals of good urban design in streetscapes and infrastructure. Hopefully, if a new bridge is built here it will be more than concrete slabs with Jersey barriers on both sides.

State Recommends New FR Bridge

The Mass. Department of Public Works recommended that a new Fore River Bridge be built, large enough to "enable all vessels that could be constructed in the foreseeable future to pass up and down the river."

The DPW estimated that a vertical lift bridge with minimum approaches would cost some $13.5 million while a larger bridge, tied in with the proposed Shawmut Trail from the Southeast Expressway to Lincoln Square, Hingham, would go $27.4 million.

PRAISE FOR LARAIA

The City Council voted 8-1 to override Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa's veto and amend the salary schedules of city employees upwards, adding $569,000 to the city payroll.

Councillor Joseph J. LaRaia cast the only dissenting vote.

"Six months from now," said George Yarrington, executive secretary of the Quincy Taxpayers Association, "Councillor LaRaia will be considered the most intelligent member of the Council by the general public for this stand tonight."

"It's nice to see a councillor have the courage of his convictions."

KENNEDY CAKE SCRAPPED

Ernest J. Montilio of Quincy gave up plans to bake a seven-foot high cake for President Kennedy's inaugural after the waiters' union said its members would not serve food at the dinner if non-union cake was on the menu.

"I had to bow out rather than embarrass the President," Montilio said.

Phelan Used Good Judgment

Mayor Phelan recently set in motion two initiatives that have received criticism from some quarters. One involved applying a portion of newfound revenues to the School Department and the other concerned setting the tax classification at 169% for businesses. We think the mayor showed good judgment and foresight on both counts.

Councillor McCauley criticized the mayor for allocating a portion of newfound revenues (approximately $100,000) to restoring a very small amount of prior cuts to the School budget. Mr. McCauley indicated that in tight fiscal times the mayor needs to learn to say no to various interest groups seeking additional funding and should apply all additional revenues to the reserve account. While it is important to try and build additional reserves, it is equally important to continue to invest in areas that will promote the long-term economic health of the city.

People often lament that government should be run more like a business. Prudent business people understand that even in tough economic times you have to spend money to make money. In lean times, a good business will try to cut costs where possible but continue to invest in those areas that will help it to compete and grow in the future. Investing money in our schools is one of the best investments this city can make for our long-term economic health. It is no coincidence that the cities and towns with the best school systems also have the best quality of life. Good school systems attract new homeowners who value education and are willing to pay a premium for it.

The byproduct is additional tax revenues, a better-educated population and a better standard of living. This in turn helps to attract new business, which provides additional revenues. Spending more money on our schools is an investment in the future of our city, not a burden.

A number of people advocated increasing the business tax classification from the 169% recommended by the Mayor to 175%. It is shortsighted to impose a larger tax burden on businesses to save residential taxpayers a few dollars today. In the long run this strategy will discourage business investment and result in residential taxpayers shouldering a larger share of the burden. Again, the business analogy is helpful.

Businesses understand that they are competing against their competitors for a limited share and a limited amount of capital. If a business does not pay attention to what its competitors are doing, it may find itself out of business. Surrounding cities and towns impose lower tax rates on businesses than the City of Quincy. We are in competition with these cities and towns to attract the same businesses.

Plainly put, we are going to charge businesses more money to do business in Quincy; we better make sure that we have more value to offer to justify the additional cost. If not, we need to consider reducing our business classification in the future to be competitive and help to invigorate our lethargic commercial base.

A Tribute To Larry Butler

I am writing this letter to express my sorrow for the passing of a dear friend and fellow citizen, Larry Butler, 51.

An employee at Quincy City Hospital for 22 years, he was in charge of the admitting department. When patients were presented with insurance problems, Larry was quick to go the extra mile to help resolve any issues that would arise. He also was instrumental in helping hundreds of patients who had urgent care issues.

At Larry's burial, a man approached me and spoke of the time his ill daughter had an insurance problem upon entering Quincy City Hospital. He went on to say that Larry worked late into the evening to make sure she would be properly cared for.

As a member of Manet

Community Health Center in Houghs Neck, this community activist spent countless hours volunteering his time to insure citizens would receive health care at a low cost.

Other civic affiliations include the Quincy Democratic

City Committee; and the Ward 1 City Committee, where he served on Paul Harold's campaign, and campaign manager for former City Council President Peter Kolson.

Like so many others who were drawn to Larry by his

Asparagus, Cheddar Calzone

It was our granddaughter Sophia's fifth birthday and she is one of those children that loves vegetables...all of them from broccoli on.

And so I decided to make her a veggie calzone with asparagus. (Also a favorite of our grandson John who lives in New York, but was here that day.) Mixing it with some cheddar cheese made it even more tasty. I have to admit that I rarely make the dough anymore as the supermarkets sell it by the pound and I think it is just as good as home-made. This way, I always have some dough in the freezer and when I want to make a pizza or calzone it takes a short time to defrost it.

In the following recipe, I used some fresh asparagus, about a half bunch and a can of long asparagus spears. I cooked the asparagus just until it got tender.

Preheat oven to 425 degrees

Asparagus, Cheddar Calzone
Fresh asparagus
 1 can of long stemmed asparagus
 1/2 cup shredded cheddar (or a favorite cheese)

1 package of dough
 corn meal for cookie sheet
 1 egg for egg wash

Cook the asparagus. Set aside. Roll out the dough as you would a pizza. What I usually do is layer first the cheese, then the asparagus and then top it with the rest of the cheese. Roll the dough carefully and tuck in the sides. Place on a cookie sheet after sprinkling corn meal on the bottom so the calzone doesn't stick.

Brush the calzone with the beaten egg. Bake for 30 minutes or until top is browned. As soon as it comes out of the oven, free it with a spatula and cut it when cooled.

P.S. This can also be made with just the canned asparagus.

Sen. Morrissey Thanks Supporters For Outpouring To Charities

Senator Michael W. Morrissey (D-Quincy) announced that his annual holiday party was a great success and thanked all those who donated to the various charities this holiday season.

Admission fees for the party were donated to a local charity, including toys for Marines' toy drive and local crisis centers and food for the Interfaith Social Services.

Sen. Morrissey's holiday reception, held at the Quincy Sons of Italy recently, collected many bags of non-perishable foods, dozens of toys and more than $2,000 in financial donations for DOVE (Domestic Violence Ended) in Quincy and the Dianne DeVanna Center in Braintree. DOVE seeks to treat and end domestic violence. The Dianne DeVanna Center provides services to end child abuse.

Contributions from Sen. Morrissey's party for DOVE totaled $1,715.

"I want to extend my deep gratitude to my friends, family and supporters to the Quincy Lodge Sons of Italy for their terrific generosity," said Sen. Morrissey.

The state Senator said donations in previous years have helped such charities as the Quincy Community Action Food Pantry, the Atlantic Neighborhood Center in North Quincy, the Quincy Commission on Families, the Holbrook Food Pantry, the Rockland Food Pantry, the Rockland Toy Drive, the Braintree Special Needs Program and the Toy Drive of the Norwell Police Department.

"I am extremely grateful and pleased that we will again provide needed contributions to local food banks and toy drives," he said.

But Phelan could spend as well as tighten the city's belt. In one of his first actions, he asked the City Council to appropriate $5.8 million by way of a bond issue to be used for sewer and drain work along Wollaston Beach. The low-interest loan would be made from the state's Clean Water Revolving Fund.

As a grand jury continued its investigation of the Dec. 15 break-in at the city personnel office in City Hall, Ralph I. Maher was suspended as chief plumbing supervisor and had to be escorted from City Hall by police. One of his personnel files was found to be missing.

Former Mayor James Sheets, Personnel Director Kevin Madden and Walter White, director of Inspectional Services, were called on to testify before the grand jury in Dedham.

"I appeared before the grand jury today and provided them with information as regards to the event Dec. 15," Sheets told The Quincy Sun. "I am not the target. I am a witness. The most important thing is that the truth comes out. People need to know what happened."

The Olympic torch passed through Quincy en route to Salt Lake City carried by nine Quincy residents for a distance of two-tenths of a mile each. The 2002 Winter Games were scheduled to open in Utah Feb. 9 by which time the torch will have been carried 16,500 miles by 11,500 runners.

Henry P. "Hank" Bradley, director of Quincy Veterans Services, who was long active in advocacy of veterans, charitable and civic causes, was chosen by a panel of judges as the 17th annual recipient of The Quincy Sun's Citizen of the Year award for 2001.

Quincy College graduated 220 students with associates degrees, the largest January graduating class in the school's 45-year history as an institution of higher learning.

Mayor Phelan, visiting Washington and New York

City to attend the U. S. Conference of Mayors, toured Ground Zero with former NYC Mayor Rudolph Giuliani. "It was truly moving," he said. "The amount of people who were saved is really the story behind Sept. 11. There was no panic, which is what the terrorists had hoped for."

Mayor Phelan issued his first city commendation to David Pekkinen, the employee of a Quincy real estate firm, whose quick action saved the life of Peter Skipper, 10, of Dorchester, whose clothing caught on fire when it brushed against a propane space heater in his home.

Katherine Quigley, director of the YMCA Germantown Neighborhood Center, and Zaida Hassan Shaw of the Islamic Center of New England received distinguished service awards at the annual Martin Luther King Day celebration Breakfast.

The late Rev. Dr. Peter Corea, former co-pastor of the Houghs Neck Congrega-

Louise Hatch Meservey, 84, of Quincy, who played the viola in the Quincy Sym-

James "Ray" Fallon, 65, of Milton, retired owner of the Fallon Ambulance Service, which served Quincy for a number of years.

Gertrude C. Kirby-Armerotto, 84, of Quincy, who danced throughout New England with the RKO Circuit and was named Miss South Boston as a teenager.

February

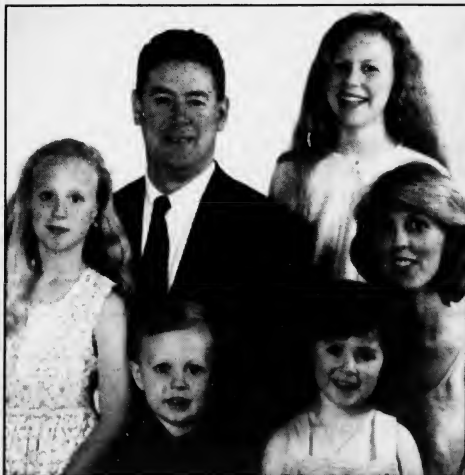

On an 8-7 vote, a joint convention of the Quincy School Committee and City Council elected Elaine Dwyer, president of the Borad Meadows Middle School, to fill out the remaining two years of Mayor William Phelan's vacant seat on the school committee.

"The first priority is definitely the new high school," said Dwyer, adding her support to the current plan to build a new QHS at Faxon Field and renovate the old high school in Coddington Street to house Central Middle School.

The City Council voted to appropriate $2.5 million from the city's Stabilization Fund, or so-called "Rainy Day Fund," to balance the books for 2002.

The Spirit Of Giving Arrives In 18-Wheel Truck

The spirit of the holiday season arrived Monday at Father Bill's Place in a loaded 18-wheel truck.

Residents of Father Bill's Place and needy families in the community received clothing, toys and food baskets from F1 Boston, one of the South Shore's largest entertainment facilities. F1 in Braintree is located at 290 Wood Rd.

Maureen Ridings from F1 corporate sales, said more than 1,000 toys, articles of clothing, sleds, bicycles and 50 food baskets were distributed to Father Bill's residents and needy families. Donations came from corporate sponsors, F1 employees and the general public, she said. Families living in transitional housing received holiday food baskets, complete with a turkey and all the fixings. Ridings said the food baskets were donated by the company, Sysco, of Norton.

"The response totally exceeded our expectations," said Ridings, who added the company will make this activity an annual event.

"Thanks to F1 Boston and employees, it will truly be a Merry Christmas for the children and families of those in need in our community," said John Yazwinski, executive director of Father Bill's Place.

City Faces $2M Budget Shortfall In FY 2002

The transfer, which amounted to roughly half the funds available in the account, was designed to cover a shortfall in revenue attributed to the loss of $1.6 million in funds anticipated from the MWRA and an expected $400,000 loss in state aid.

The mayor told a televised news conference that the city faces a projected deficit of $4.4 million for the current fiscal year ending June 30 and some of the measures being considered by his administration are delay or cancellation of major projects, increased fees and layoffs of city workers.

He started his campaign to trim the deficit by eliminating certain positions and not filling others during the current fiscal year. Eight fulltime laborer jobs in the DPW were eliminated as were four interns in temporary clerical positions and three other appointments, saving nearly $200,000.

Parishioners of St. Joseph's Church in Quincy Point were stunned when the pastor, the Rev. Daniel M. Graham, was removed by the Boston Archdiocese on a single allegation of child abuse reportedly dating back 30 years or more.

Mayor Phelan named Jay Fink, utilities director for the city of Newton, as Quincy's Commissioner of Public Works succeeding David Colton. He also appointed four new members to his administration — Roberta Kety, director of personnel, Stephen J. Roche, assistant city solicitor, Jolanta Briffett, assessor, and Marie Brukman, benefits coordinator.

The mayor also appointed an Advisory Committee on Tourism to develop and recommend policies to achieve the maximum economic impact possible from tourism for the city of Quincy.

Bashkim Gurguri, an Albanian immigrant and manager of Five Star Pizza and More on Granite Street, won a million dollars on the scratch ticket in the State Lottery and William Mignosa of Mignosa's Fruit Basket won $10,000 for selling him the ticket. Gurguri's good fortune was announced on the national news in his native Albania.

The City Council and Morrisette Legion Post sponsored ceremonies honoring the 75 Quincy fire fighters, 17 Quincy police officers and Building Inspector James Anderson who volunteered their help in New York City after the Sept. 11 terrorist attack on the World Trade Center towers.

Firefighter First Grade Robert Fulco, a 25-year veteran from Brooklyn, and his wife, Linda, visited Quincy as part of a nationwide campaign called "Cities Unite America and Thank New York Firefighters. They attended a public "thank you" event at Quincy Fire Headquarters.

Deaths in February included:

Norman C. Gray, 80, of Scituate, formerly of Quincy, an editor who started a 53-year newspaper career with the Quincy Patriot Ledger.

Leo Q. Papile, 78, of Quincy, a retired detective who served 39 years with the Metropolitan District Commission police.

Margaret Connolly, 86, of Quincy, who, with the twin sister, Jean, competed in Scottish dancing all over New England as the Templeman Twins.

Edith McDonald, 100, of Quincy, a charter member of the Seaside Gardeners of Squantum.

Nathaniel M. "Mate" Sherman, 84, of Quincy, a practicing attorney in Quincy for 60 years.

Mary K. Doyle, 77, of Quincy, owner and operator of the Doyle Real Estate Co. in Boston and former member of the State Housing Commission.

John P. MacGregor, 85, of North Weymouth, former owner of the Scotch Market in South Quincy for 30 years.

QUINCY HOSTED AND honored New York City Firefighter First Grade Robert Fulco in March as part of a national goodwill movement to thank New York firefighters for their heroic efforts following the Sept. 11 terrorist attack and to spur travel and tourism across the country. Welcoming Fulco at the Central Fire Station were Chief Thomas Gorman and Mayor William Phelan holding his son, William, 3, and daughter, Kerry, 5.

March

City Auditor Michael McFarland reported to the City Council that Quincy was facing a $2 million budget shortfall for the current fiscal year ending June 30.

"We are spending right now at a rate we can no longer sustain," he said. Citing a decrease in state aid and MWRA funds and a general economic downturn, "We passed a budget a year ago based on a different set of assumptions that are not the reality today."

He suggested that the city will have to either find new sources of revenue or reduce expenditures, "We can do one or the other," he said.

Standard & Poor's bond rating agency lowered the city's bond rating from A to A-minus and a second agency, Moody's, dropped the rating from A2 to A3, citing a drawn-down of reserves in Fiscal 2001 that resulted in a negative $5.4 million in the city's General Fund.

The City Council agreed with Mayor Phelan and voted to retain the 169% tax classification for business property, permitting the city to set a tax rate of for Fiscal 2002.

Mayor Phelan dismissed Tony Siciliano from his volunteer post as Deputy Director of the Emergency Management Agency, an unpaid job he had held for the past 22 years.

"I was told that the public safety officials in the city didn't think I had the qualifications for the job," Siciliano told the Quincy Sun. He retained his $48,000 a year city post as general foreman of the Traffic & Parking Department.

Daniel Keating, executive secretary to former Mayor James Sheets, and Ralph Maher, retired chief plumbing inspector, pleaded innocent to charges of larceny, breaking and entering and malicious destruction of property, in connection with the Dec. 15 break-in of the Personnel Office at City Hall. Former City Council President Paul Harold asked Attorney General Thomas Reilly to initiate a criminal investigation into Massachusetts Heavy Industries (MHI), the bankrupt former owner of the Fore River Shipyard.

"It's my contention," wrote Harold, "that Mass Heavy Industries from its inception never had a viable plan to finance its operations ... that it materially misrepresented its financial condition, with the resulting loss of millions of dollars of taxpayers' money."

A four-alarm fire swept the South Landing Condo complex on Bower Road, claiming the life of Robert Doherty, 38, a resident who was disabled and confined to a wheelchair.

City Councillor Tim Cahill, who also serves as Norfolk County treasurer, formally announced his candidacy for state treasurer in a whirlwind tour of appearances in Worcester, Pittsfield, Springfield, Lowell, New Bedford and finally his hometown of Quincy.

Newly appointed DPW Commissioner Jay Fink told the City Council that the city will receive $484,000 in Chapter 90 highway funds but more than $200,000 was already committed to a Hanover company for work done without written authorization.

The Professional Firefighters of Massachusetts chose Quincy as the site of their bi-annual convention in June, 2003, the result of intense lobbying by the Firefighters Association's Quincy local. The convention is expected to bring more than 1,000 firefighters and a estimated $1.4 million revenue to the city.

Jeffrey Bertman of Rogers Jewelry was elected president of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, succeeding Richard Gornley of Sovereign Bank.

Thomas Largey, of Squantum, a protégé of the late former City Solicitor Richard "Dick" Barry, was appointed assistant city solicitor by Mayor Phelan.

Deaths in March included: Charlotte Coates, 84, of Quincy, author of "Through 19th Century Eyes," dealing with daily life in the northeast between 1822 and 1920.

Louis R. DiStefano, 82, of Quincy, who was taken prisoner of war during the Battle of the Bulge in Belgium in 1944.

Roger A. Bettencourt, 88, of Quincy, a survivor of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, Dec. 7, 1941.

Ruth Bettencourt, 90, of Quincy, wife of Roger, a week after his death.

Leo A. Ladas, 77, of Houghs Neck, retired captain in the Quincy Fire Department.

April

Despite efforts by the city to prepare taxpayers for a sharp rise in taxes, the mayor's office, the assessors' office and the treasurer's office were inundated by complaints of higher fourth quarter property tax bills.

Since the tax rate for 2002 was not set until March 27 due to delays in state certification for the city financial figures, the first three quarterly bills were estimates and the fourth quarter bill larger than usual.

It was disclosed that $750,000 of the roughly $800,000 of federal CDBG funds earmarked for the city's economic development would be used to pay the debt service on the city's $7.8 million loan commitment to the Fore River Shipyard.

An outside auditing firm reported to Mayor Phelan that at least $4.6 million in Fiscal 2001 bills were paid with Fiscal 2002 funds by the administration of former Mayor James Sheets in violation of state law.

The State Senate passed an Environmental Bond Bill which included $7.5 million for the "study, design and construction" of the Bigelow Street Relief Conduit, the final piece in the Town Brook Flood Control Project.

FBI and IRS agents searched the home of former city plumbing inspector Ralph Maher but gave no indication that it was related in any way to the break-in at City Hall last December for which Maher and Daniel Keating, the then-mayor's executive secretary were charged with breaking and entering and larceny from a building.

Police Chief Thomas Franc, on sick leave since undergoing triple bypass surgery Jan. 3, 2001, requested disability retirement papers and told Mayor William Phelan he would submit them in the near future.

Historian David McCullough won his second prestigious Pulitzer Prize for his best selling biography "John Adams," which spurred a new interest in the Quincy-born second president of the United States.

Phelan Proposes Budget Of $195,256,540 For FY03

May

Mayor William Phelan presented to the City Council a proposed Fiscal 2003 budget of $195,256,540, including reduced funding for education and the Police Department by roughly five percent from the previous year and for the Fire Department by around one percent.

Phelan said the budget will translate into downsizing, through attrition, of one captain, two sergeants and 10 to 12 patrolmen from the Police Department and roughly a dozen firefighters. The school budget is expected to result in the layoff of 117 teachers.

The budget cuts wiped out the jobs of three of the five music teachers in the schools and eliminated the instrumental programs in the 11 elementary schools, leaving the future of the middle and high school bands uncertain and sparking a revolt among parents of the young musicians.

"I would suggest that it's not going to be an easy year in the city," said the Mayor.

Phelan estimated that about 100 city employees would take advantage of a early retirement package newly authorized by the state at the close of the fiscal year, June 30, and thus spare the necessity of 300 layoffs under the Fiscal 2003 budget.

The city gained a bit of a financial respite when the Mayor announced that with a decrease in MBTA assessments of $435,000 and if a projected $1.4 million increase in state aid to schools goes through as many as 50 jobs could be saved in the School Department.

2002 In Review

An outside auditing firm reported to Mayor Phelan that some $700,000 in past unpaid bills with no identified sources of funding had been discovered in the Department of Public Works (DPW). The bills were run up during the tenure of former DPW Commissioner David Colton.

Executive Director Joanne Condon Walsh, who had planned to move the USS Salem and Shipbuilding Museum to Squantum Point Park near Marina Bay, announced the ship would remain at its present location in the shipyard next to the Fore River Bridge.

Francis McMorro, keynote speaker at the Memorial Day ceremony in Mt. Wollaston Cemetery, warned that "the cost of independence remains high but Americans are willing to pay it with deep reverence and thanks to those who have sacrificed their lives for the United States of America."

Ward 1 Councillor Gregory Hanley, who is planning to move with his family to Pembroke, announced that he planned to finish out his second term in office, thus relieving the city of the expense of a special election to fill the seat.

The Rev. Alicia Corea, pastor of the Hough's Neck Congregational Church was presented the James R. McIntyre Award for humanitarian efforts during Law Day ceremonies at Quincy District Court.

The Space Shuttle Endeavor blasted off from Cape Canaveral, Fla., on a 12-day mission, carrying the city flag of Quincy, thanks to Quincy native Mary (Germaine) Lockhart, a colonel in the U. S. Air Force Reserve and the wife of the shuttle pilot, Lt. Col. Paul Lockhart.

The revels of Thomas Morton and his cohorts around the Maypole at Merrymount were reenacted on the 375th anniversary under the sponsorship of the Quincy Park Department Environmental Treasures program and the Fore River Watershed Association. Historian Jack Dempsey portrayed Morton, the self-proclaimed Lord of Misrule.

Quincy-born Rev. George Hodgkins, 79, celebrated his 50th anniversary in the ministry with a special service at Bethany Congregational Church, where he served as interim pastor from 1993 to 1996.

Gregory Wall, 39, was under observation at Bridgewater State Hospital, accused of the murder in the stabbing death of Catherine F. Menkello, 51, whose dismembered body was found

Fire Chief Gorman Also Steps Down Police Chief Frane Among Early Retirees

June

The City Council unanimously passed a budget of $194,287,304 for Fiscal 2003, roughly $1 million less than that originally proposed by Mayor William Phelan, and reflecting positive changes in Quincy's financial picture.

Those positive changes included increases in state aid, an early retirement incentive for state employees and a decrease in anticipated assessments from the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority.

Overall, the councilors made almost $2 million in cuts but also approved an additional $2.7 million appropriation, of which $2.1 million earmarked for the Quincy Public Schools, which were faced with the layoff of 35 teachers.

News that 68 city employees have applied for early retirement, coupled with the prospect of increased state aid, kept alive the hopes that many of the 41 workers who received layoff notices will not actually be laid off.

Eventually, 105 workers opted for early retirement, among them Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue, Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon and Anthony Sciliano, general foreman of the Traffic and Parking Department, but better known as the former volunteer deputy director of Quincy Emergency Management.

The city's school bus drivers and bus monitors protested a budget proposal which would eliminate all school bus monitors and 10 of 17 bus routes in the city.

POLICE CHIEF Thomas Frane (left) took early retirement while Fire Chief Thomas Gorman stepped down due to the mandatory retirement age of 65 in July.

Attorney's office closed its investigation of the city's handling of $4.6 million in Fiscal 2001 bills that were rolled over and paid with Fiscal 2002 funds, indicating that no criminal wrongdoing took place.

The Democratic State Convention in Worcester, working late into the night, endorsed all four candidates for state treasurer — Tim Cahill of Quincy, Michael Cahill of Beverly, Stephen Murphy of Boston and James Segel of Needham.

The names of 44 sons of Quincy who were killed or were missing in action during the Vietnam War were among the 1,537 names carved into the stone of the Massachusetts Vietnam Veterans Memorial that was dedicated in Worcester.

Reports six pedestrian injuries in two weeks, including a broken hip suffered by an elderly resident of 99 Granite St., galvanized the DPW into a quick repair of a sidewalk tripped apart by work on the Quincy Center Concourse project.

Mayor Phelan invited leaders of the wind turbine industry to tour the Fore River Shipyard with an eye toward turning the yard into a facility for the manufacture of wind turbines, the use of which has been successful in providing electricity for the town of Hull.

Quincy 2000 initiated an update of the Quincy Center Action Plan, hiring Sasaki Associates to work on a plan that would focus on the John Hancock parking lot and the area around Hancock and Chestnut Streets and Revere Road for development.

Francis "Fran" Sandomato, 51, a lifelong resident of Quincy who was a registered engineer with 32 years experience with the Massachusetts Highway Department, began work as the city engineer, succeeding the retired Fred Mirza.

Quincy 2000 Executive Director Joseph Mannarino presented a ceremonial check for $100,000 to a Quincy Point merchant, as a start up loan marking the unveiling of the newly renovated Quincy Point Plaza retail center.

City councilors predicted dire consequences if the city goes forward with its planned summer and fall schedule for yard waste collections which do not include weekly collections until Nov. 4.

Animal Control Officer Donald E. Conboy Jr. warned residents not to get too friendly with the city's growing coyote population. "Pets, especially cats and small dogs, are seen by coyotes as a food source and should be protected," he said.

The city commenced involuntary retirement proceedings against Police Chief Thomas Frane, who had been on sick and injured leave since undergoing triple bypass surgery in January, 2001.

The New England office of the Anti-Defamation League officially certified Quincy as one of 15 "No Place to Hate" communities that have demonstrated a commitment to building understanding and respect for diversity while inhibiting tensions and hate crimes.

James Fratolillo, 52, of Quincy, a Vietnam veteran, was elected state commander of the American Legion, joining a long list of Quincy folk who held the post including Larry Connors, Hank Bradley, Paul Hunt, Jake Comer and Robert Eng.

Mayor Phelan pledged the city's efforts in raising the $200,000 needed for the long-awaited World War II Memorial in Merrymount Park and further vowed that dedication ceremonies would take place on Veterans Day (Nov. 11) of this year.

Robert J. LaFleur of Merrymount, a U. S. Navy veteran of the Vietnam War, was awarded the Outstanding American-Born Citizen Award for contributions to Americanism from the Massachusetts American Legion.

Joseph McConville of Merrymount was named the recipient of the Richard I. Koch Youth Service Award for his lifetime of service to the youth of Quincy. The award was presented by the Koch Club at the Quincy Flag Day Parade and Celebration.

Unfortunately, the annual Flag Day Parade had to be postponed a week due to inclement weather.

Mitt Romney, the Republican candidate for governor, told the annual luncheon of Quincy's service clubs that one of the most moving moments of the Salt Lake City Winter Olympics came when the tattered American flag that had flown over Ground Zero was carried into the stadium.

Sam McLe, the Boston Red Sox outfielder who married a Quincy girl and never went back to his home in New York, was inducted into the Quincy High School Baseball Hall of Fame as an honorary inductee.

Deaths during June included:

John Nicolson, 59, of Cohasset, formerly of Quincy, longtime station manager and broadcaster for WJDA Radio in Quincy.

Charles G. Peterson, 77, of Quincy, retired president and CEO of the Braintree Cooperative Bank.

Ralph B. Cobb, 85, of Natick, Conn., formerly of Quincy, owner and operator of the Norfolk TV Service in Quincy for 30 years.

Fred Comparato, 92, of Auburndale, Fla., a member of the Quincy High School sports hall of fame as a baseball, basketball and football star in the 1920.

July

Police Chief Thomas Frane, who had been on sick and injured leave since undergoing triple bypass surgery in January, 2001, was one of more than 100 city employees to take advantage of a recently authorized early retirement package.

Deputy Paul E. O'Connell, a fourth generation firefighter who was officially named fire chief in 1989 but bowed out because he preferred to continue fighting fires, was sworn in as acting chief in Gorman's place. He would remain in the post until a new Civil Service list is compiled after an exam in March 2003.

Leadership of the USS Salem and Shipbuilding Museum was clouded when Mayor Phelan appointed former Norfolk County Treasurer Robert Hall of Needham as chairman of the Board of Directors but the Salem's attorney Thomas Riley insisted that former Mayor James Sheets was still chairman.

Meanwhile, Joanne Condon-Walsh resigned as executive director of the ship-museum and named her son, Michael, as interim executive director.

Former Ward 4 Councilor Michael D'Amico agreed to pay $2,500 to settle a dispute involving the use of campaign funds for the lease of two personally owned automobiles during his unsuccessful campaign for reelection in 2001.

Sen. Michael Morrissey called on the city to provide more police presence on Wollaston Beach during the summer months to help the state police, who are more and more concerned with homeland security and anti-terrorist activities.

The meanest thief stole the $1,000 specially designed shade cover used to protect toddlers and pre-schoolers from the sun at an outdoor learning center at the Beechwood Community Life Center.

Acting Gov. Jane Swift signed into law a home rule petition authorizing Quincy to issue general obligation

William B. Sanderson, 62, of Quincy, was killed when he slipped under a 47-foot powerboat owned and driven by his longtime friend and sometime business associate, developer William O'Connell of Quincy, in waters off Oak Bluffs on Martha's Vineyard.

While tourism lagged in Boston and the rest of the state, the number of visitors was up in Quincy, thanks in part of historian David McCullough's Pulitzer Prize-winning biography of John Adams. The more than 3,000 who visited the Adams Mansion on July 4 was the largest ever.

The Quincy Fire Department's newest ladder truck, 100 feet long and costing $570,000 was placed in service at the Central Fire Station, giving the city three ladder trucks and three re-

The Quincy legislative delegation announced that construction of the MWRA's Quincy and Squantum Pump Stations, the final components in the Quincy Pump Facilities Project, should be completed and fully operational by the start of 2003.

The Squantum Women's Club, known for its charitable work over the years, held its final meeting at the Common Market Restaurant and then disbanded after 90 years of existence, earmarking its remaining treasury funds to continue an annual scholarship for a Squantum graduate of North Quincy High School.

Deaths in July included:

Century 21 Annex Realty Sales Manager Shares His Formula For Industry Success

The real estate market has seen many fluctuations over the years, but one thing has remained stable: John Tronca's ability to produce results.

A licensed broker and sales manager of Century 21 Annex Realty, Inc.'s Hanover office, the Quincy resident has managed to maintain a multi-million dollar annual sales record since closing his first transaction in 1986.

Each year since, both John and the Hanover office have showcased shining sales performances. John has earned numerous accolades as an individual broker: in 1999 he earned the Master's Club Award and in 2002, he won the Century 21 Quality Service Award, both recognizing Tronca's outstanding sales results.

Under his leadership, the Hanover office has also been recognized by the industry for its superior performance. Since John became sales manager of the Hanover office, it has increased sales volume by 30%. In addition, the office that employs a staff of 15 sales associates also received the coveted Quality Service Pinnacle Award in 2002.

Tronca says his commitment to customer service, combined with his willingness to adapt to new technology and fresh ideas in a constantly changing profession, have led him to succeed. A former retail storeowner, he joined Century 21 Annex Realty as a sales associate in the company's Quincy office 17 years ago. Ever since, he has remained on the South Shore, transferring to Hanover in 2000.

Tronca also embraces the industry's latest technological innovations by sharing Century 21 Annex Realty's business philosophy. "Tools, such as online MLS listings, empower clients by giving them another avenue by which to obtain information," he said. His own website, www.JohnTronca.com, allows visitors to conduct MLS searches for thousands of properties throughout New England and New York. Viewers can also learn more about Tronca's comprehensive services for sellers, buyers and those who are relocating to the South Shore area.

Despite a demanding schedule with considerable challenges, Tronca remains passionate about his profession and his customers.

"This is a great job. I couldn't picture myself doing anything else," he said. According to Tronca, the current residential real estate market on the South Shore is in a healthy state of equilibrium.

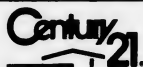

"Buyers and sellers are both in a good position right now," he continued. "Homes are on the market for a reasonable period of time and buyers can shop around, since there is such a large amount of well-priced listings."

Art Foley, Broker/Owner of Century 21 Annex Realty describes Tronca as a great role model and an effective leader.

"He has managed and directed our Hanover office to achieve spectacular results," he said. "We are proud of his individual accomplishments and true team spirit."

The world needs Christmas.

*Not one in the mall,
Not one on the news,
Not one that lights up or glows*

*Not one that needs power,
Not one that needs money,
Not one that needs snow*

*But the one that gives warmth,
The one that brings quiet joy,
The one that spreads peace to a dissonant world.*

Here's wishing that kind of Christmas finds its way to us all this season.

Hints For Homebuyers

See Your New Home In The Right Light: At Night

(NAPS) — If you're buying a home, here's an important tip: tour the property at night to evaluate the lighting. People usually take lighting for granted. It should, however, be a primary consideration since most families spend their quality time together at home after dark.

When assessing a home's lighting, note the most frequently used rooms and the number and types of lighting fixtures. Do table and floor lamps provide a majority of the lighting? Are there any hard-to-reach lightbulbs in high ceiling fixtures? Will bright bathroom lights allow you to unwind in the bath after a long day? Outdoors, is the main entrance well lit? Will you feel safe coming home late at night?

If the lighting isn't quite right, there's an easy and cost-effective way to improve it: install dimmer switches. Where traditional switches only give you two options — "on" or "off" — dimmer switches allow you to adjust lighting to suit any activity. Dimmers offer a wealth of other benefits: energy savings, increased security and various decoration advantages.

Dimmer switches are available for every type of light, including table lamps, so you can use light effectively in every room. In the kitchen, brighten lights for food preparation and then soften them for dining. In the family room, lighting can be raised for playtime or homework and then lowered to create a theatre atmosphere for viewing movies. In the dining room, soft lights create an intimate mood for entertaining but can then be brightened for clean up. In bedrooms, dimmed lights ensure that children can sleep comfortably and make those 3 a.m. bathroom visits less startling. Outside, dimmers increase security and provide the comfort of being able to take out the trash or walk from the car to the front door without worry.

Dimmers are a proven way to save on electrical expenses too. According to Lutron Electronics — the world's leading designer and manufacturer of dimmer switches — dimming a standard lightbulb by 10 percent saves 10 percent electricity and doubles the life of the bulb. Dimming the same light by 50 percent cuts electricity consumption by 50 percent and extends bulb life by 20 times.

Whether you want to control one light in one room or every light in your home, Lutron dimmer switches provide solutions. Visit a local lighting professional, lighting showroom or home improvement center for more information.

For more lighting ideas, contact Lutron at 1-800-523-9466 or www.lutron.com.

Paul Harold's Death 'Great Loss' For City

August

Paul Harold, once the "boy wonder" of Quincy politics who was elected to the City Council at 27 and the State Senate at 30, died at the age of 53. He was serving his first term as council registrar of deeds when he died.

Politics and his hometown of Quincy had been his life for more than 30 years. He traveled around the world, sowing the seeds of democracy for the U.S. Information Agency but always he returned to the city and the people he loved.

"When I think of Quincy I think of Paul Harold," said Congressman Bill Delahunt. "We suffered a great loss. I see him overlooking this community with a big smile on his face."

"He tried to help everyone," said John Gillis, the retired city clerk. "He didn't know how to hurt people. It's a great loss to Quincy."

Thousands turned out for his funeral at Our Lady of Good Counsel Church in Merry Mount and burial in St. Francis Xavier Cemetery in East Weymouth, including Bernard Cardinal Law who celebrated the funeral mass and call Harold "a man of great integrity."

William O'Donnell of Norwood, a Norfolk County commissioner, was named to succeed Harold as registrar of deeds and promised that "the work done by Paul Harold will continue during my tenure."

Fourteen new firefighters were sworn in by the Quincy Fire Department and began eight weeks of training at the department's training facility at the Fore River Shipyard. Personnel Director Roberta Kety said the de-

Joseph LaRosa, the mayor of Quincy for one chaotic term from 1976 to 1977, announced his retirement from the Board of Assessors, bringing to an end a 36-year career of public service.

Two firefighters suffered minor injuries and 36 units had to be evacuated as fire did $400,000 worth of damage to the Presidential Estates apartment at 1020 Southern Artery. Fire Lt. Pat Dee and firefighter John McCarthy were treated and released from Quincy Medical Center.

A dead crow discovered on East Elm Avenue, Wollaston, was tested by state labs and determined to have died of West Nile Virus Encephalitis, but Quincy's acting Commissioner of Public Health Andrew Scheele said there was no cause to panic since no persons in Quincy have been found with the virus.

Five new members were selected for six-year terms on the governing board of Quincy College. They are Simon Chan of Quincy, a real estate man; Richard A. Nieri II of Jamaica Plain, a student at UMass; Barbara A. Cannon of Hull, a social worker; Rev. William C. Harding of Quincy, pastor of the Bethany Congregational Church; and William S. Grindlay of Quincy, a retired municipal finance expert.

Andrew J. Ayer, an employee of the Quincy Health Department for 26 years and the shellfish constable since 1980, was named the city's new harbor master, succeeding the late Bernie Reisberg.

Tom Gorman, who retired as Quincy's fire chief only two months ago, was named director of Emergency Management effective in September. He replaces the chief of police in title but in actuality he succeeds Tony Siciliano, who was fired as assistant director earlier in the year.

Michael McFarland, after apologizing for his actions involving the payment of city bills with unappropriated

The worst water main break in 20 years left many homes and businesses in South Quincy without water for 36 hours and Ward 4 City Councillor Bryan Connolly demanded that the DPW prepare a report on "the reasons for complications which required such a lengthy repair effort."

As a result, the city executed a $677,000 contract to replace water mains, some of them dating back more than a century, serving homes and businesses with connections on Liberty, Center, Intervale, Rodman, Trafford, Taber, Columbia and Albertina Streets.

at the Quincy Neighborhood Club.

Joseph Fontana, 14, of Squantum protested as "an appalling act against nature" a petition by his neighbors urging the death penalty for coyotes that are believed to have been making life hazardous for cats and dogs in the Squantum area.

"I am sure there are non-lethal methods of getting the coyotes out of the streets," he said. "It doesn't seem they are trying enough to search for other ways."

The councillors may have received about Maher's work.

After 12 hours of intense bargaining, negotiating teams for the city of Quincy and the teachers' union reached agreement on four years worth of contracts — one "retroactive" to Sept. 1, 2002 and the second taking effect for three years beginning Sept. 1, 2003.

Terms were not announced immediately but under the old contract Quincy teachers earned $29,291 to start with a veteran teacher with a master's degree paid $59,169.

The License Board held a near three hour hearing into anonymous charges that police officers were drinking after hours following a party for the New England Patriots at the WaterWorks, a night club in Marina Bay.

The Board voted 3-2 to give the WaterWorks a verbal warning for permitting eight police officers, part of the detail at the party, to drink after hours. Voting against the motion were City Clerk Joseph Shea and Walter White, director of inspection services.

In a related action, acting Police Chief William Falco suspended the eight officers involved for terms up to 90 days without pay or benefits for drinking and firing their service revolvers. "I intend to support my department heads in their decisions or discipline," said Mayor Phelan. "The city of Quincy deserves the highest standards in their police."

"A year after the school opened (in 1998) mold was discovered and it is still there," said Council President Daniel

Raymond. "It's time the city had a complete investigation."

Mayor Phelan and members of the Quincy Tourism Advisory Board unveiled a newly refinished Visitor Information kiosk in front of City Hall where visitors can find out where to visit, eat and shop while they are in Quincy.

Roy C. LaMotte Jr. of Blackstone, the traffic engineer in Newton for the past 17 years, was named Quincy's new traffic engineer, succeeding Jack Gillon, who retired in July. He was co-author of the book "Creating a Municipal GIS Transportation System" in 1991.

A new shelter for women, replacing the women's unit at Father Bill's Place, opened in the refurbished basement of the former St. John's School with the stated purpose of offering a safe supportive environment that motivates and assists women to move beyond homelessness.

Papile Lane (formerly Atlas Street) and Papile Family Square in Quincy Point were dedicated to the family of Raffael and Lucia Papile, immigrants for Torre de Passeri, Abruzzi, Italy, who raised 16 children in Quincy, seven of whom served in the United States armed forces in World War II. They were called "the greatest generation's greatest family."

City Councillor Frank McCauley questioned if the state's Early Retirement Program is really worth it to the city of Quincy and asked for a report on it. Since the program started June 30, 100 announced that they were retiring after 26 years in business. He was a former president of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association.

Public Works Commissioner Jay Fink asked the City Council for the raise from $84,132 to $94,982 that he was promised when Mayor William Phelan hired him in March and the request led to another angry tiff between Phelan and City Council President Daniel Raymond.

"How can he reasonably ask for a 13 percent pay increase when many other programs in the city have been cut or need more funding?" asked Raymond.

"In order to attract him to Quincy, I told him I would support him in an effort to increase the salary which is set by statute," said Phelan. "I urge the City Council to pass the ordinance."

The Council bypassed its own Public Works Committee and voted 8-0 to delete the raise from a DPW reorganization proposal which the committee set aside for future consideration. Councillor Tim Cahill was absent.

A federal grand jury's subpoena was served on City Clerk Joseph Shea seeking city records dating back to 1990, including documents such as licenses, permits, etc. relating to certain individuals and entities. Mayor Phelan pledged "open and thorough" cooperation with grand jury investigators.

The club license of the St. Moritz Social Club, a private club at 91 Penn St., South Quincy, was suspended for selling liquor without a license. Police Capt. Robert Crowley said he found people drinking there after hours and cash on the bar in the private club where liquor is not supposed to be sold.

Quincy's Timothy Cahill won his bid for state treasurer and Patrick McDermott rolled to an easy victory for Norfolk County register of probate in a state election that saw Republican Mitt Romney of Belmont chosen governor over Shannon O'Brien.

Cahill, a Quincy city councillor and county treasurer, ran comfortably ahead of Republican Daniel Grabauskas while McDermott piled up a huge margin in all corners of the county to whip the GOP's Richard Schmidt of Weymouth, who held the post by appointment when Thomas Hughes of Quincy retired.

Also reelected were Congressman William Delahunt easily over Republican Luiz Gonzaga of Barnstable and Sen. Michael Morrissey and Reps. Ron Mariano, Bruce Ayers and Stephen Tobin, all of whom were unopposed.

William Falco, the acting chief since May 2001 after the chief Thomas Frane underwent heart surgery, was named the 14th permanent police chief of Quincy. One of his first official actions, he said, would be the reorganization of the department.

"The old days of the Drag-net-type of policeman ... just answer the call and 'what are the facts, ma'am' ... those days are gone," he said. We're interested now in what led up to the situation we're dealing with."

Individual And Team Successes In Spotlight

By CHRIS POISSON

There were many local individual and team success stories in 2002, from the youth leagues to the high schools, from the youngsters to the senior citizens.

As was the case last year, one particular team's achievement seems to shine the brightest at the end of the year.

On Sunday Night, Nov. 17, the North Quincy High School volleyball team successfully defended its state title with a 3-0 sweep over Billerica at Wheaton College in Norton.

Perhaps, its biggest victory came in the semifinals against undefeated and rival Barnstable, which handed North Quincy its only two losses in the regular season. This time, North Quincy served Barnstable its first loss, one that sent it back to the Cape with no hardware.

The Red Raiders were led by eight talented seniors, who backboned the team the past three years, compiling a 75-5 record and notching the program's second back-to-back championship.

Some will continue to play volleyball at either a Division 1 or 2 college, most notably Makini Thompson who signed a letter of intent to attend powerhouse Long Beach State in California.

Here's a look back at some memorable moments of 2002:

JANUARY

The NQHS boys' basketball team defeats Bridgewater-Raynham, 66-58, for the first time in 10 tries.

THROUGH THICK AND THIN

When choosing engine oil, pay attention to its viscosity, which is the ability of the oil to flow through a standard orifice at a standard temperature. Oil with a viscosity grade of 5 will pour like water, while oil with a grade of 40 will flow more like honey. The former is better suited for winter conditions, and the latter is more suitable for summer. Multigrade oils use polymers to regulate the flow as the oil heats up in the engine. Thus, a 15W-50 oil will pour like 15-weight oil when cold but will not thin more than a 50-weight oil would when hot. The "W" in the multi-weight designation refers to the oil's suitability for use in winter.

Using the correct grade of oil for weather conditions can greatly extend the life of your engine. SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

The Link Between Diabetes, Heart Disease and Obesity

(NAPS) — The links are all there. Cardiovascular disease (CVD) is a major complication and the leading cause of death among people with diabetes.

Diabetes is a disease that affects the body's ability to take glucose (sugar) into cells. Insulin, a hormone produced by the pancreas, opens the door for glucose to get into the cells. When glucose builds up in the blood instead, it can cause problems.

Cells may become starved for energy, causing fatigue and susceptibility to infections. High blood sugar levels can affect eyes, kidneys, nerves or the heart.

As estimated 17 million Americans suffer from diabetes, and about one in three don't know it. Risk factors for premature death from this chronic disease include obesity, high blood pressure, high cholesterol, and a family history of heart disease. African Americans, Hispanics, and Native Americans are at a higher risk of developing diabetes.

Fast Facts on the link between CVD and Diabetes

- Deaths from heart disease in women with diabetes have increased 23 percent over the past 30 years compared to a 27 percent decrease in women without diabetes.
- Deaths from heart disease in men with diabetes have decreased by only 13 percent compared to a 36 percent decrease in men without diabetes.
- People with diabetes are more likely to die from a heart attack and are more likely than those without diabetes to have a second event.

Source: National Diabetes Education Program

Knowing what to ask healthcare providers and taking action using the National Diabetes Education Program's "ABC's of Diabetes" can help.

The ABC approach was developed because most people don't know their risk can be reduced with appropriate treatment. Research shows 65 percent of people with diabetes can prevent or delay disease and stroke and they can maintain their general health.

A score of 100 on the ABC test is the goal.

measure blood glucose over three months. 'B' is for blood pressure, and 'C' is for cholesterol.

A doctor does a hemoglobin A1C test. It measures how well your blood sugar has been controlled over the last two or three months. A suggested healthy A1C target is seven or below, equaling a blood glucose of 150. The American Diabetes Association recommends blood glucose screening at least once a year after age 45, or sooner for those with a family history of the disease or other risk factors.

The "B" for blood pressure means that people with diabetes should have their blood pressure checked every time they visit their healthcare provider. 130/80 is a healthy target.

And, finally, the "C" which stands for cholesterol. There are two types of cholesterol: HDL and LDL. About one-third to one-fourth of blood cholesterol is carried by high-density lipoprotein (HDL). HDL cholesterol is called "good" because a high level seems to protect against heart attack. The bad cholesterol, LDL, builds up and clogs arteries. The ADA recommends that people with diabetes have their cholesterol tested annually. A health target is an LDL of 100 mg/dl, and an HDL of over 40 mg/dl.

Even relatively small improvements in blood sugar, cholesterol, blood pressure and weight will decrease the risk of CVD. Detecting diabetes early lets people take precautions.

The same steps needed to control blood glucose, work for controlling blood and cholesterol. Here are some recommendations:

- Exercise 30 minutes daily
- Eat less fat and salt
- Eat more fiber — choose whole grains, fruits, vegetables and beans
- Stay at a healthy weight
- Stop smoking

To help people with diabetes manage their condition and prevent complications, pharmaceutical company Pfizer and the Florida Agency for Health Care Administration have created a health care initiative called "Florida: A Healthy State." The program aims to educate people about chronic health conditions and uses the resources and expertise of major medical centers, federally qualified health centers and physicians across the state. The program uses state-of-the-art software to track and coordinate patient care and provides specialized health care services. People with diabetes and CVD work with a "care manager" to keep track of their blood sugar levels, diet and exercise. A goal is to expand this innovative program to other states.

Safety On The Slopes

There is a growing debate on the use of helmets by skiers across the country. Wearing a helmet is a personal choice — as there are currently no laws mandating helmet use.

However according to the Consumer Product Safety Commission, wearing protective headgear prevents thousands of head injuries each year. It also could cut the number of deaths related to skiing in half.

"We've learned that wearing a helmet can prevent serious head injury in bicyclists and inline skaters," said Tracie Malleo, clinical specialist, physical therapist, Traumatic Brain Injury Unit, Kessler Institute for Rehabilitation. "Now we are realizing that helmet use can prevent or reduce the severity of head injuries in skiers."

Whereas a helmet can protect from serious head injury, it should not be a substitute for good judgment while on the slopes. In fact, one study showed that helmets lose their effectiveness if a skier strikes a solid object, such as a tree, when skiing at excessive speeds. Therefore, Kessler, a leader in the field of physical medicine and rehabilitation, recommends these additional safety tips:

- Never ski or snowboard alone.
- Get in shape — through aerobic and strength training activities — before you take to the slopes.
- Wear layered, close-fitting clothing for added warmth and ease of movement.
- Only ski on trails appropriate for your skiing ability.
- Always try to stay in control and be able to stop or avoid other people or objects.

• Avoid other skiers by maintaining a distance of at least 25 to 50 feet in between. If a ski run is busy, don't hesitate to stop and let other skiers pass. You can then proceed down the mountain once it has cleared.

• People ahead of you have the right of way.

• Always stay on the trail and follow signs carefully. It is possible to become disoriented even on marked and packed trails.

Overall, the best advice to avoid injury is to use common sense and ski within your ability. Skiing is a fun yet challenging sport requiring skills that are only learned over time with practice.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.
A SENSITIVE SUBJECT

If you have sensitive teeth, the dentist may recommend a desensitizing toothpaste. It may contain one of the two ingredients that the American Dental Association (ADA) recognizes as effective in reducing discomfort associated with sensitive teeth — strontium chloride and potassium nitrate. Both effectively block the tube-like channels that pass through teeth and connect to the nerves. When these tubes are exposed, hot, cold, and acidic foods stimulate nerves, causing pain. Desensitizing toothpastes block, or reduce, the ability of these nerves to transmit pain. However, these toothpastes do not work overnight. Expect to notice improvement after about four to six weeks of use. In the meantime, it may help to take hot and cold drinks through a straw.

This column on desensitizing toothpaste has been brought to you as a public service. For all your dental concerns, we invite you to come see us. We provide a full range of dental treatments, including preventive, restorative, and cosmetic dentistry. Our entire staff is dedicated to helping you look and feel better. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where you'll find our office to be as pleasant as it is professional each and every time you visit. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Sometimes, sensitive teeth may be a sign of a problem that needs treatment. Check with your dentist.

Over 10,000 Expected At First Night Quincy

year will include jazz, orchestra and swing, and "everything in between."

The Festival of Lights show begins at 6:15 p.m., followed by a kids fireworks display at 6:30 p.m. Organizers said there will be a mock First Night countdown at Faxon Field on Coddington St., for children who are too young to enjoy the actual midnight countdown.

The larger fireworks display will begin at the same location at 9 p.m. The display can be easily viewed from most locations in Quincy Square.

Also on tap is the popular music act, Big Nazo, along with Rex Trailer and Boomtown Revisited, and a Community Talent Show, where Quincy's amateurs are invited to do imitations of their favorite idols.

Riverside Theatre Works will be contributing Broadway tunes, popular music and endless amounts of energy to the proceedings. The United First Parish Church basement will be hosting the First Night Coffeehouse, which features folk music, do-wop gospel and swing.

For those who wish to take public transportation, the MBTA's Quincy Center Red Line station will drop patrons in the center of the action.

There will be free parking at the Ross Parking Garage on Granite St., the Hancock Parking Lot on Chestnut St., and the President's Place Parking Garage. All parking lots are within easy walking distance.

This year's sponsors include the City of Quincy,

Eastern Bank, Fallon Ambulance, Boston Scientific, Stop & Shop, AT & T Broadband, Peabody Properties, and Ed Fish Associates. For more information call Quincy's Office of First Night at 617-376-1071 or Dave Murphy at 617-376-1254.
